PREFACE

THE Petrarch collection, when it came to Cornell University in 1905, included a card catalogue of author entries, prepared in greater part in 1885-86 by Mr. Horace Kephart, under Mr. Fiske's direction. Mr. Fiske's intention to publish a second catalogue of the collection is intimated in the preliminary note to his bibliography of De remediis, printed in 1888: 'The essay here attempted is to be regarded as a chapter of the still unprinted second catalogue of my Petrarch collection.' The card catalogue with its very full titles and collations was thus ready to serve as the basis of the work. Of the notes or essays which might have been looked for at intervals upon its pages, had the collector been able at that time to execute his intention, the two (found among his papers) printed as the second appendix of the present catalogue may perhaps be considered specimens. But the new interests of his later years delayed the undertaking until his strength was spent. After the collection reached its final home, Professor H. S. White of Harvard University, literary executor of the Fiske estate, made arrangements for carrying out the delayed project. In 1910 Professor Arthur Livingston was appointed to the task of preparing the catalogue for printing, but relinquished it upon his call to the Faculty of Columbia University in the spring of 1911, when the work was assigned to the present compiler.

The preparation of the Dante catalogue by Mr. T. W. Koch, 1896-1900, was carried on in intimate consultation with Mr. Fiske. Its plan, while showing curtailment in certain respects—as in the fullness of title transcription and collation characterizing the Petrarch entries of the card catalogue—was extended to include analytical titles, editor and translator references, etc. Mr. Fiske's approval of this work, and its commendation by students generally, made it seem probable that he would now have chosen to print a Petrarch catalogue on a similar plan. This has been done. It was again thought best to include 'pertinent articles in periodical and general literature in the University library' not in the Fiske collection. Such articles are indicated by a press number lacking the initial 'Pet', which belongs to those of the collection. Certain differences of detail will be noted by the curious. Titles have been copied at greater length. Names of publishers are given in Part II as well as in Part I. The most important variation is in the expansion of the subject index to include abbreviated titles.

For the notes the present compiler is in the main responsible, those of the card catalogue and of Mr. Fiske's published Petrarch bibliographies having been drawn upon as a first source. As in the Dante catalogue, critical and other quotations have been introduced without translation. Citations from the Canzoniere are made from the edition of Carducci and Ferrari, 1899.

It is a pleasure to record the generous co-operation of Professor White throughout the undertaking. Mr. Harris, Librarian of the University (1890-1915), whose advice has been most helpful, has my especial gratitude for reading all the proofs. I am indebted to other members of the Library staff for attention to questions of detail, and especially to Professor G. L. Burr, and Mr. Halldór Hermannsson, for assistance in transcribing manuscript titles. To Professor T. F. Crane, whose interest in the work has been a constant encouragement, and to Mr. A. W. Pollard of the British Museum for valued suggestions, I desire to express my thanks. Finally, to the printers and proof-readers of the Clarendon Press for unvarying attention given to the work, both in the matter of typographical execution and of revision, my obligation is gladly acknowledged.

MARY FOWLER.

INTRODUCTION

SCHOLARS have reason to be grateful to those expert book-collectors whose precious collections have enriched our university libraries, for these libraries, handicapped by inadequate funds, are compelled to cover all fields of knowledge and can seldom, if ever, attempt completeness in any special field as can a wealthy or skilful collector who confines his energies to one or two subjects. Henry Bradshaw has well said: 'Men who have spent half a lifetime and half a fortune upon the formation of a library will leave or even give their books to a place where they feel confidence that good use will be made of them. This is the process by which all our great libraries have been formed.' Much, it is true, may be accomplished by gifts of endowments for special subjects, but, as another English librarian has pointed out, the fact remains that it is by following their own tastes that collectors are most likely to promote the cause of learning and literature, for the student possessed of even a moderate knowledge of his own special subject, by turning his attention to the books illustrating the history of its development, may do work which no librarian as such can possibly emulate. Consequently it is upon wise and generous book-collectors that our university libraries must largely depend if they are ever to possess collections rivalling those which are the glory and the pride of the great European libraries.

Cornell University Library, in its first fifty years, has had the good fortune, through gifts of generous friends, to acquire an unusual number of such special collections in widely scattered fields. Prominent among these is the remarkable group of collections comprising the large Icelandic, Rhaeto-Romanic, Dante, and Petrarch collections, and a small but valuable collection of the literature of transcription, for which it is indebted to the generosity of the first Librarian of the University, its Professor of North European Languages, Willard Fiske, an ardent and discriminating book-collector. His wonderful success in gathering, within six weeks, the very complete Rhaeto-Romanic collection (1,200 volumes), and, in three short years, the great Dante collection (7,000 volumes), is modestly told in his introductions to the printed catalogues of these two collections. The Icelandic collection (10,000 volumes), on the other hand, represents, in its slow growth, the labor of almost a lifetime. Midway between these extremes, and gathered in the last twenty-three years of his life, stands the Petrarch collection, which he regarded with special affection, judging by the beautiful and costly bindings in which he clothed the works which it embraced. The catalogue now printed unfortunately lacks the benefit of the collector's scholarly revision, but the story of the origin and growth of the collection may briefly be given by another hand, with the aid of liberal extracts from letters which afford frequent glimpses of the book-lover's characteristic enthusiasm and the collector's careful methods.

The marriage of Mr. Fiske to Miss Jennie McGraw of Ithaca took place in 1880. After spending the winter of 1880-81 in Egypt, Mr. and Mrs. Fiske arrived in Venice early in May, and remained there several weeks. During their stay in Venice Mr. Fiske purchased a number of Petrarch books, the beginning, as it proved, of the present collection. In a letter dated May 20th, containing instructions concerning some boxes he was sending home to Ithaca, he wrote: 'In one box are a few books; two belonging among the Icelandic books. All the others but one are Petrarchs, which go in my room by themselves. As other Petrarch books arrive put them with these.' This is perhaps the earliest mention of the inception of the collection.

Proceeding homeward by easy stages, Mr. and Mrs. Fiske reached Paris early in June, and it was then that the pleasure of collecting really began, to which an added zest was given by Mrs. Fiske's cordial interest in the quest and its purpose. From Paris on July 20th he wrote: 'My Petrarch collection grows apace. In it I have some very lovely specimens of the French binder's art. On the anniversary of our marriage my wife gave me a folio French translation of one of Petrarch's works, the binding of which is as lovely as possible. I judge that I must have nearly 150 editions of the Rime—including the best critical ones. Of translations I have all the leading ones in English, French, German, and Spanish. Of the Latin works I have a large number of originals and versions in various languages. Of biographies I have every one of value. Of Petrarch editions before 1500 I have only four or five, but from that date, and especially in the sixteenth century, the collection is quite full. I have all the Petrarch bibliographies—Marsand, Rossetti, Hortis, and Ferrazzi. My little collection of engraved Petrarch and Laura portraits numbers sixty or seventy—all nicely mounted, and I have many illustrative photographs.' A few days later he wrote: 'Reinwald and Allen are binding many books for me and the cases will soon begin to come. . . . If, on looking over the American catalogues, you find any Petrarch books printed in America, which isn't likely, please order them.'

In September Mr. and Mrs. Fiske returned to Ithaca, where Mrs. Fiske died on September 30, 1881. During the following winter few new purchases were made; the Petrarch books which had been left in the hands of the English and French binders came in very slowly, and it was not till the spring of 1882 that the collection was brought together in the Librarian's room in McGraw Hall. Mr. Fiske then began the preparation of a catalogue, with considerable bibliographical detail, which was issued in November 1882, in an edition of 160 copies, 'privately printed solely with the view of facilitating the increase of the collection', which then contained about 1,200 volumes.

Early in December, 1882, Mr. Fiske sailed for England and proceeded thence to Italy. From Florence, on January 8, 1883, to a book-loving friend and former colleague, he wrote: 'Well, here I am buying Petrarch books—on terms of postal card correspondence with all the dealers in libri antichi from Trieste to Palermo. My collection of Petrarch literature is really getting to be formidable, and will be the more serviceable to somebody in the future, perhaps, from the fact that I include in it general works on the literature, and works on the poetic literature anterior to Petrarch (except Dante). I have really been astonishingly fortunate in getting rare editions, and now have every one of any value for textual purposes. On my way here I lingered in Provence (Avignon, Vaucluse, Montpellier, Nîmes, Aix, etc.) and picked up a good many brochures.' Two weeks later he wrote: 'I have got five fifteenth-century editions of the Rime besides those I purchased at the Sunderland sale. Yesterday I capped the climax by buying, after some days of negotiation, the first edition (Venice, 1470). I shan't venture to tell you the price. It was large enough to make it the most costly volume (including the MSS.) in the collection, and large enough likewise to entitle me to write the Italian word Pazzo in very big capitals after my name for the remainder of my life.

'But the copy is too utterly lovely, and the only absolutely perfect one sold in this generation. The 11,000 francs one, sold a year ago, (on vellum) lacked the three sonnets against Rome. The Sunderland copy lacked two leaves (with one supplied, as you remember, from a paper copy). Mine is on paper—but paper almost as thick and firm as parchment, with the page beginning the Sonnets (Pt. I) and that beginning the Trionfi (Pt. II) finely illuminated. The margins are broad—in fact the copy is materially larger than the Sunderland one. The sonnets against Rome are all there, the impression is beautifully black and clear throughout, and every leaf and line are perfect. I am proud of it, even if I do come home a starved beggar. The price paid is a great shock to my conscience, but it saves me from committing the folly a second time. I gave, however, 750 francs less than the price first demanded. . . . I send a large case to Allen to-day, most of the contents requiring binding. . . . Baer at Frankfurt has found some good things for me—among them the fourth Giunta edition of the Rime (1522).'

On February 7th he wrote: 'The editor of Il Bibliofilo gave me some autographs of Petrarch editors and commentators, which has induced me to buy a few others—such as Bembo, Muratori, Tiraboschi, Leopardi, Ugo Foscolo, Marsand (of whom I have four), Fracassetti, etc. These I shall insert in the books. My success continues to be quite extraordinary, and I shall do, on the whole, much better than I had hoped. I am getting together quite a little bibliographical collection so far as it illustrates Petrarch, and shall not feel the want of tools so much in making my next catalogue. I have got to-day the catalogue of the Duc de la Vallière collection of books, which included many Petrarch MSS. and rare printed books—a copy with the list of prices brought. I have now, I think, all the bibliographical works on the Testi di lingua—some of them with additional MS. notes by their compilers. I have many curious things, such, for instance, as Senesi's own copy of his little work on Francesco da Bologna and his edition of Petrarch, with many MS. additions by the author, intended for a second edition which never appeared; also some curious inedited sonnets (one by Tassoni) relating to Petrarch. . . . I have now all the Giunti editions of Petrarch, except the second (1510), and am having the third and fourth very handsomely bound in Florence. The best Florentine binder is making a very neat case for my editio princeps of the Rime.'

On February 20th he wrote: 'If you were roaming among bookshops from early morn to dewy eve, if you, in your hours of repose, had your room full of book-sellers and other people anxious to dispose of the contents of their libraries, if you were in receipt of daily communications from half the antiquarian book-dealers of Italy, from Trieste to Palermo—why, then, you wouldn't expect to write many letters to your friends, unless you possessed the happy faculty of epistolizing during your sleep.

'On my return from Rome I found my room at the hotel literally stacked with packages from Milan, Bologna, Venice, Naples, Leghorn, Pisa, Arezzo, and other places, half the contents of which I already possessed or did not want, but all had to be examined and those I intended to keep had to be paid for and catalogued—a process not yet terminated. Meanwhile the dealers here have collected numerous other packages, and I have been obliged to send them word that I didn't want to see them for three days.

'The Petrarch editions of the fifteenth century (1470-1500) acquired since I arrived in Europe are as follows: Rime, 1470, 1474, 1475, 1491-92, 1492, 1492-93, 1492-94, 1494; Latin (Vita solitaria) 1498, (De Viris illustribus) 1473, (De Remediis) c. 1474, and I believe there is one more, making twelve Petrarch incunabula, which is doing tolerably well, considering how many I already possessed, including those I acquired at the Sunderland sale. Many of the books I shall be obliged to leave behind me. Books are now binding for me at London, Paris, Florence, and Rome. At Rome the best modern Italian illuminator, Perazzoli, is painting a beautiful vellum binding for me, which is to be placed in rather a neat casket. It is the rare Bindoni (Venice) edition of 1541, which I found at Milan.'

From Bologna, on March 8th, he wrote: 'I am on my way back from Venice to Florence. At the former city I found a few desired editions of Petrarch and some volumes relating to Petrarch. The most important edition was the so-called Farri edition of 1579. Here in Bologna I visit to-day the libraries, etc., in company with the editor of the Bibliofilo. At Venice I likewise obtained some interesting autographs.' The next day, from Florence, he wrote: 'I have bought a copy of the first Aldine edition of Petrarch on vellum, although I had two copies previously, also a very rare fifteenth-century Griseldis. And I have two Aquarelle copies, one large, one small, of the old portrait of Petrarch now in the Episcopal Palace of Padova, which was engraved for the Marsand edition of 1819-20. I have a perfect ocean of work to do this coming week, and have begun to get up at six o'clock. My room is fairly running over with packages of books which have arrived while absent at Venice, Padova, etc.—some to be returned, many to be catalogued and prepared for the binder. To save trouble I have decided to leave some 200 volumes here with Loescher to be bound in half vellum.'

In April, 1883, he returned to Ithaca, but soon after resigned his professorship and librarianship and sent his Petrarch and Icelandic collections to Florence, where he made his home for the remainder of his life, at first in the Villa Forini, and after 1892 in the Villa Landor near Fiesole. Here he busied himself in adding to his collections and in bibliographical studies. In The Nation of June 5, 1884, a note on the growth of the Petrarch collection gave the titles of some of his recent purchases, among them being two fine manuscripts of the Rime, several rare sixteenth-century editions, and 'the oldest known specimens of Petrarch centoni by Valerio da Bologna, printed in 1520 (Professor Ferrazzi, in his Bibliografia Petrarcesca, states that none existed before 1530); the original autograph manuscript of a commentary on Petrarch by Peregrinus Moratus, a Ferrarese professor, written about 1520, which Tiraboschi and others speak of as lost; the Spanish version, by Peña, of Petrarch's De Vita Solitaria, printed at Medina del Campo in 1553—an exquisite copy, bought at the Hamilton sale just concluded in London; a copy of the German version of Griseldis printed by Zainer at Ulm in 1471 (?), consisting of eleven folio leaves illustrated by ten remarkable woodcuts and engraved marginal arabesques; an edition of the Trionfi printed at Florence in 1508, a petitione di Ser Piero Pacini—an edition of which the bibliographers were ignorant until the publication in 1874 of Hortis's catalogue of the Rossetti collection of Petrarchiana'. In July, 1884, he wrote: 'From Quaritch I have received his "Facsimiles of Early Italian Engravings", giving what seem to be good reproductions of the six illustrations to Petrarch's Triumphs—included as an extra set—in the 1488 Petrarch which Quaritch bought at the Sunderland sale for £1,950. I have also a fair set of the large engravings of Titian's four illustrations to the Triumphs; in fact, I have greatly increased my stock of Petrarch engravings. My whole collection has greatly grown. The titles given in The Nation did not at all represent its recent enhancement. I scribbled them on a postal card to Mr. Garrison, with no idea of his printing them, else I would have made the list fuller. I have got the comment—not the text—to the wonderfully rare Siliprando edition of 1477, of which, since the destruction of Marsand's collection, only one complete copy is known. I have two rare editions of the Bucolics, both printed at Deventer, one in 1499, the other in 1508. Both reached me in one day, the former from Brussels in a superb binding, the latter from Germany. Campbell, of the Royal Library at the Hague, has sent me some important notes on my early Low Country editions. I have also the De Remediis of Adrianus Carthusiensis (Louvain, c. 1485), supposed to be a plagiarism from Petrarch's work of the same title. Last week came from Rome the very rare and very little 1515 Paganini edition of the Rime, which Professor Merli, the Librarian of the Chamber of Deputies, picked up for fifty francs (Techener had a copy four years ago for two hundred and fifty) and let me have it at the same price. Then I have a 1535 edition of the Trionfi, of which neither Marsand nor Hortis ever heard. You will recall the old German translations of the De Remediis, with the numerous woodcut illustrations by Burgkmair. Of these my series is now nearly or quite complete—four additional of these folios having come within a month (Augsburg, 1532 and 1539, Frankfurt, 1551 and 1604). And likewise the oblong quarto reproduction of these engravings on copper by Kieser, published at Frankfurt, 1620—which I had almost despaired of finding complete. But you will tire of this list. At Venice last month, and later at Treviso, Bassano, Brescia, and Milan, I found a good many things of value. Day after to-morrow I leave for Modena, Mantova, and Verona. I expect to have a day or two's busy work in the Biblioteca Estense at the former place, where I know the librarian through a good deal of correspondence. I now have MS. lists of the Petrarch editions in several of the large Italian libraries (including the Marciana at Venice and the Nazionale at Naples), and these aid me a good deal.'

About this time he began the preparation of a series of bibliographical studies, based upon his collections, the first two numbers of which, under the modest title 'Bibliographical Notices', were issued in 1886. The first of these, 'Books printed in Iceland between 1578 and 1844', dealt with the Icelandic collection; the second, entitled 'Handlist of Petrarch Editions in the Florentine Public Libraries', with its careful annotations, not only formed a useful guide for Petrarch collectors, but showed very clearly the extent and richness of his own collection. This was followed, in 1888, by the third number, entitled 'Francis Petrarch's Treatise De Remediis utriusque Fortunae; Text and Versions'. In this he gave, with painstaking accuracy, a very elaborate bibliography of the numerous editions and translations of this once popular work of Petrarch. The fourth number of the series, a second list of books printed in Iceland, 1578–1844, was issued in 1889, soon after the collections had been removed from the Villa Forini to larger quarters on the Via Lungo Mugnone (shown in the frontispiece), where they remained till 1905.

In February, 1890, he wrote from Florence: 'I am still hammering away pretty busily at bibliography. I find that the collector of even two such small libraries as mine has little time for anything else. The reading of catalogues, correspondence with booksellers, cataloguing and binding occupy all his hours. I have just got ready another of my little supplements to the British Museum Catalogue of Books printed in Iceland—the third and last—which has just gone to the printer. Now I am to have two months' time to continue a favorite labor—begun last winter in Egypt—namely, a small vocabulary of modern Arabic (Egyptian dialect) and English. It will be mainly a verbal index to a book of which I am a great admirer, Dr. W. Spitta's Grammar of the Vulgar Arabic, but will be orthographically a little more systematic than any similar manual. . . . My collections have greatly grown. I possess literally everything in Möbius's two catalogues—in fact everything published on the philology, history, and literature of the ancient North—nearly 3,400 numbers in all. I now find little to buy in the way of Petrarch books.' The Petrarch collection then numbered about 3,000 volumes, and was so nearly complete that comparatively little remained except the easy task of adding the current Petrarch literature as it appeared.

In the summer of 1891 a visit to the Engadine valley led to the formation of the Rhaeto-Romanic collection which he presented to Cornell University Library. After a visit of several months to America, he returned to Florence in the spring of 1892, and on April 6th he wrote: 'Since reaching here I have been overwhelmed with work. I found heaped up in my library some 1,200 packages, including booksellers' catalogues. I have at last got the wrappers off and the most important of the new accessions catalogued and sent off either to the London or the Florentine binders.' On June 24th he wrote: 'I have lately acquired three excessively rare Spanish Petrarchs, which were originally in the Salvá sale. They are a great acquisition to my Spanish translations.' In 1893 he decided to give the University a Dante collection, the gathering of which pretty fully occupied the next three years. In September, 1896, he wrote: 'The Dante collection has taken both my time and means from the other collections, and I discover that no small sum is needed to fill up the lacunae in the recent Icelandic and Petrarch literatures. Much cataloguing, too, which would have been done by myself in the Florentine library, must now be done by others.' The Icelandic collection was the first to receive his attention, and was largely increased in the next few years. He then began work upon his book Chess in Iceland, the last pages of which were passing through the press at the time of his death, and this absorbing task left him little time to devote to the Petrarch collection. In 1904 the preparations for the celebration of the sixth centenary of the poet's birth revived his slumbering interest in Petrarch studies, and he offered, anonymously, a prize of 2,500 francs to be awarded, by a commission of three Italian scholars, to the author of a truly deserving work of scholarship and research on the subject 'Francesco Petrarca e la Toscana', covering all the relations between Petrarch and the country of his birth, his ancestry and his writings, his relations with Boccaccio and other Tuscan friends. In company with his old friend Professor T. F. Crane, he attended the centenary festivities at Arezzo in July, and thence went on by way of Switzerland to Germany, where his death occurred on September 17th.

By his will he bequeathed to Cornell University, for the benefit of the Library, the bulk of his estate, including the Petrarch and Icelandic collections, with specific provision for their maintenance and increase, resulting in the addition of more than half a million dollars to the Library endowment funds.

When the Petrarch collection came to the University Library in 1905 it numbered 3,550 volumes, showing that only about 500 had been added to it since 1890. It now contains more than 4,000 volumes. Besides the long series of editions and translations of Petrarch's works and the multitudinous commentaries upon them, it is rich in biographies of the poet, and in works concerning his influence upon the revival of classical learning and his relations with his friends and contemporaries. The iconography of Petrarch and Laura is also richly represented. The rarer books of the collection, whenever they were not in well-preserved original bindings, often of much historic and artistic interest, had been carefully restored or, as his letters show, had been handsomely bound by the foremost European bookbinders. Indeed, the collection is, in a way, a museum of masterpieces of printing and binding, admirably illustrating the development of these two arts during the last four hundred years. Though its character and contents can best be judged from the printed catalogue with its elaborate notes, a clearer idea of its completeness, at least so far as Petrarch's own works are concerned, may be obtained from a condensed summary of the editions of the Rime and a note or two on some of the other works, chiefly based upon Mr. Fiske's own careful estimates, given in his 'Bibliographical Notices', which, though differing from some others, are perhaps more accurate than any previously printed.

Disregarding doubtful or incomplete editions, such as those of the Trionfi alone, he gives the total number of known editions of the complete Rime between 1470 and 1499 as twenty-five. All of these are in the collection, except that of Naples, 1477, of which only one copy is known, and that of Milan, Zaroto, 1484, of which no description can be found in the bibliographies, and which, perhaps, should be classed with doubtful editions. Of the six editions of the Trionfi alone during this period three are in the collection. The total number of editions of the complete Rime from 1500 to 1599 he gives as 136, of which 111 were from Venetian presses. The collection contains 135 editions of the complete Rime and six of the fourteen separate editions of the Trionfi printed during this century. Of the barren seventeenth century Mr. Fiske, in the Introduction to the Dante catalogue, said: 'In that long life-in-death century which followed the Cinquecento, the Commedia is represented by but three issues of the text, with no line of comment—a trio of feeble little volumes which somehow got themselves delivered from three neighboring presses of Venetia (Vicenza, Padua, Venice) against five times that number of the Canzoniere of Petrarch from the same region.' Seventeen editions, in fact, of the Rime were issued in that century, all printed at Venice, the latest in 1651, and fourteen of these are in the collection. From 1651 to 1711, a period embracing two generations, no edition of the complete Rime was issued. In the eighteenth century, 1700–1799, forty-six complete editions of the Rime appeared, of which eight were published north of the Alps. Forty-five of these are in the collection, the only one lacking being the first Berlin edition of 1785. For the nineteenth century we have Mr. Fiske's estimate that from 1800 to the end of 1885 the Rime complete, including title-page editions, had appeared in 165 issues; if now the editions recorded by Calvi from 1885 to 1900 be added to these, it would seem that 191 editions of the complete Rime were published in the nineteenth century. Assuming that these figures are correct, the total number of editions of the Rime from the editio princeps in 1470 to the beginning of the twentieth century is 415, and all but sixteen of these are in the Fiske collection.

Translations of single sonnets or selections from the Rime have been published, as the catalogue shows, in Bohemian, Danish, Dutch, modern Greek, Hebrew, Icelandic, Portuguese, Provençal, Rhaeto-Romanic, and Roumanian, while complete translations are to be found in English (3, the earliest still in MS.), French (10), German (5), Hungarian, Latin (unpublished), Polish, Spanish (2), and Swedish (2).

Of Petrarch's Latin works, all the editions of the complete works and nearly all the editions of single works are present, as well as most of the translations into various languages. Especially noteworthy in this group are the editions of the De Remediis and its translations in Bohemian, Dutch, English, French (2), German (2), Hungarian (2), Italian (2), and Spanish, affording abundant evidence of its former widespread popularity, though only a single complete edition of this work in any language has appeared during the last hundred years and over. Fully as great, if not greater, seems to have been the popularity attained by Petrarch's Latin version of Boccaccio's story of Griselda, translations or adaptations of which, in Bohemian, Danish, Dutch, English, French, German, Icelandic, Italian, Russian, and Spanish, are to be found in the collection.

The celebration, in 1874, of the fifth centenary of the death of the poet was followed by a remarkable revival of interest in Petrarch studies, both in Italy and in other lands, resulting in some notable discoveries and in a veritable flood of Petrarcan literature. Emilio Calvi, in his Bibliografia Analitica Petrarchesca, 1877-1904, gives 1,136 entries of editions and translations of Petrarch's works and of books, articles, and lectures relating more or less directly to Petrarch. Not counting editions and translations, there are, he says, 759 titles devoted to Petrarch and his writings; of this number 344 are separate publications, and 415 are articles in periodicals. Taking them by languages he finds that 544 are in Italian, 105 in French, 56 in German, 38 in English, 5 in Spanish, 5 in Swedish, 3 in Latin, and 1 each in Russian and Dutch. Dividing the years 1877-1903 into three periods of nine years each, he finds that 153 publications appeared in 1877-85, 267 in 1886-94, 275 in 1895-1903, and 64 in the first five months of 1904. That year called forth an enormous number of centenary publications, Arnaldo della Torre recording the titles of one hundred books and pamphlets and more than one hundred and fifty articles issued in 1904; and though absolute completeness, especially as regards ephemeral newspaper articles, is not to be expected, the catalogue will show that very few titles, of any importance whatever, in this mass of recent literature are absent from the Cornell collection.

This brief sketch of the growth and character of the Fiske collection may fitly close with the eloquent and graceful tribute paid to the poet and to the collector of the poet's works, at a reunion of Cornell Alumni in Paris, June 26, 1915, by one of the foremost Petrarch scholars in France, M. Henri Cochin:

'On m'a prié, puisque le but de cette réunion est spécialement scientifique, de rappeler mes souvenirs sur un savant bibliographe américain, pour qui j'ai acquis, au cours de trop brièves relations de confraternité littéraire, une vive sympathie et une haute estime. Je parle de M. Willard Fiske.

'Comment j'ai connu M. Willard Fiske? Je l'ai connu par un ami commun.

C'est ainsi souvent que se nouent les relations, et l'amitié amène l'amitié. Mais ici le cas est curieux ; l'ami commun vivait au quatorzième siècle ; c'est le poète, le moraliste, l'humaniste François Pétrarque. De son vivant, ce singulier et délicieux personnage exerçait un attrait si vif sur plusieurs de ceux qui l'ont approché, qu'ils ne pouvaient plus se détacher de lui, et, par un effet en retour, se trouvaient liés entre eux d'une indestructible amitié.

'Pétrarque après sa mort est resté ce faiseur d'amitiés. Les pétrarquaisants d'aujourd'hui sont liés entre eux par un lien qui devient vite une amitié. Ils habitent les pays les plus divers, des pays, comme la Suède ou la Russie, que Pétrarque ne connaissait que de nom ; ils habitent même ce continent nouveau que Pétrarque ne connaissait que par les rêves légendaires de l'Océanide !

'Les pétrarquaisants américains ne sont pas rares aujourd'hui. Nous en connaissons d'aussi importants que M. Kenneth McKenzie de Yale University. Mais M. Willard Fiske fut un des devanciers. Je le connaissais d'avance comme savant. Quand je le connus comme homme, j'appréciai sa bonté, sa bonne grâce, son éducation raffinée. Ceux qui ne savent pas le charme de la science bibliographique seront surpris de m'entendre dire qu'elle était la joie, et comme le sourire de sa vie. Il l'ajoutait à son amour pour la belle, noble, divine Italie, le joyau du monde !

'Je n'ai pas connu la dernière installation de M. Fiske à la Villa Landor ; je l'ai vu Lungo Mugnone, non loin de San Domenico de Fiesole, à mi-côte de la colline sacrée. Quel lieu pour aimer Dante ! Je crois pouvoir dire que les travaux de bibliographie Dantesque poursuivis là par votre compatriote sont les plus beaux et les plus complets que la science connaisse jusqu'à ce jour. Par un contraste, qui n'est pas rare chez les érudits, il poursuivait simultanément une étude toute différente, dans une direction opposée, — celle des livres infiniment rares qu'a vus imprimer la mystérieuse Islande.

'La bibliographie de Pétrarque ne vint qu'en troisième ligne. Mais elle devait venir nécessairement. M. Willard Fiske avait commencé sa collection pétrarquiesque sans y penser. J'ai une lettre de lui de 1892, écrite dans l'italien le plus pur, où il dit : "Ma bibliothèque pétrarquiesque croît très lentement, par la raison que je trouve peu de chose que je ne possède déjà."

'M. Fiske n'était pas seulement un bibliographe dont les travaux restent des modèles. Il était un excellent collectionneur. Sa patrie possède aujourd'hui tous ses livres, c'est-à-dire une des plus précieuses collections qui existent. Il a eu cette joie en quittant ce monde de réserver aux travailleurs de l'avenir des trésors qui lui avaient à lui-même, tant qu'il était en vie, procuré tant de bonheur.

'Il est doux de saluer la mémoire de ce parfait galant homme, de ce savant distingué.'

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL EXPLANATIONS

THE considerable number of incunabula in the collection makes opportune a word of explanation as to the method adopted in their description. (1) Following the date of printing in Part I—the author's name in Part II—are given the first words of the first printed page, which is designated by the number and face of the folio, as, '2^a'. (2) When, as often happens, these words are from the index ('Tabula'), the first words of the matter which follows it are next given, with page indication. (3) If the title of the work (or what corresponds thereto) has not yet appeared, it is shown in a further citation (with page)—often the colophon. Otherwise, (4) the colophon follows as the last citation. The collation, which follows in a small-type paragraph, is self-explanatory. Contents, when necessary, are printed in a third paragraph. In the case of editions of the Rime (1477-1497) issued in two parts, Triumph and Sonetti, bracketed numbers [I], [II], have been employed for the sake of clearness. After 1500, the title-page having made its appearance, the descriptions approach the modern form. Title-page punctuation is retained until the middle of the sixteenth century. Foreign accents are given according to the usage of the editions described.

For periodical articles the analytical form (with the reference in parentheses) is used, except when separate numbers or excerpts exist in the collection, in which case the place and date of publication are bracketed after the title, and the periodical reference is given in a note below. Separate reprints are entered with full imprint, their source appearing in a note below.

Brackets enclosing a title with imprint, place, and date indicate a work not in the collection.

Press numbers of books in the collection, as an indication of height, have, after the initial 'Pet', the sign '—' for those under six and a half inches, '+' for those over nine, and '‡' for those over thirteen inches. Press numbers are omitted after analytical titles which are referred to main titles entered elsewhere in the catalogue.

The arrangement is indicated in the table of contents, p. vii, and in the notes beginning Parts I and II. Translations in Part I, arranged under each language alphabetically by the name of the translator, have that name printed in small capitals, either in the title or in the note which follows.

THE PETRARCH COLLECTION

PART I.—WORKS OF PETRARCH.

The order of arrangement in the various divisions of Part I is, for texts, chronological, for translations alphabetical by (1) language and (2) translator.

COMPLETE WORKS.

1554. Francisci Petrarchæ Florentini . . . Opera quę extant omnia . . . Adiecimus eiusdem authoris, quę He-trusco sermone scripsit carmina . . . Hęc quidem omnia nunc iterum summa diligētia à mendis repurgata atq; innumerabilibus in locis, genuinę integritati restituta & in tomos quatuor distincta . . . Insigniorum atque doctissimorum in re literaria uirorum, de hoc autore testimonia in præfatione habes. Basileę ex-cudebat H. Petri. At end: Basileę per Henrichum Petri mense Martio, anno M. D. LIIII. Pet + A 554

4 v. in 1. f^o. (pp. [28], 1375, [84].) Device in t.-p. and at end, initials. Marsand, pp. 67-68. Hortis, 4.

This fourth collective edition of the writings of Petrarch is the first to contain the Italian verse. The table of contents, the editor's preface: Ioannes Herold Hœchstettensis Ioanni Baderio affini suo, S. D., the Epistola ad posteros, Squarzacico's Vita Petrarchæ and the index are included in the preliminary matter. Tom. iv: I sonetti e le canzoni et i Triomphi di messer Francesco Petrarcha . . . alla 'mendatione di S. Giovanni Andrea Gesualdo corretti', 84 pages, contains additional verse corresponding closely to the giunta of Filippo di Giunta's edition of the Rime, of 1522. At the end of the verse is the Italian letter to Leonardo Beccamuggi signed: Buon fratello, Francesco Petrarca. Among eulogistic citations in Herold's dedicatory letter is a passage of 28 lines from Boccaccio's 'Genealogie deorum', book xiv, c. 19. Hortis ('Scritti inediti di Francesco Petrarca', pp. x-xi) says of this edition: 'Salvo pochi divari nell'ordinamento dell'opera, ritrae fedelmente tutte le altre impresse in Venezia e in Basilea', citing a few of the numberless errors copied from the earlier editions.

1581. Same. Basileę, per S. Henricpetri. At end: Basileę, per Sebastianum Henricpetri, anno . . . CIO. IO. XXCI. mense Martio. Pet + A 581

4 v. in 1. f^o. (pp. [28], 1131, 205, [2].) Port. in t.-p., initials, device at end. Hortis, 5.

A reprint of the preceding. The half-title of tom. iv, instead of 'alla 'mendatione di S. G. A. Gesualdo corretti', has 'Hora di nuovo con summa diligenza corretti & ristampati'. The edition is described by Pimbioli ('Sulle opere di Petrarca', pp. 115-137).

The portrait is a woodcut (82 × 107 mm.) after one in the collection of Paolo Giovio, first published in the Basel edition of his 'Elogia virorum litteris illustrium', 1577, found also in Reusner's 'Icones siue imagines viuae literis Cl. virorum', 1589. The engraver is Tobias Stimmer. See Essling and Müntz, p. 72; Reusner's preface, f. 5; Müntz, 'Le musée de portraits de Paul Jove' (Mémoires de l'Académie des Inscriptions, tom. xxxvi. II, p. 279).

This is the earliest authenticated edition of Petrarch's collected Latin works. Surmise as to a Deventer edition of 1494 originated from an error in Maittaire (v, pt. 2, p. 544), whose index wrongly copied the reference to a Basel edition of 1494, reporting instead the place reference of the work which stood in I, pt. 2, p. 789, immediately below that Basel edition (see 'A bibliographical ghost', by Arthur Livingston, Romanic review, vol. i, pp. 434–436). Maittaire also cites editions of Basel of 1494 and 1495, but on the authority of earlier catalogues. Baldelli's statement, accepted by Blanc (Ersch and Gruber, XIX, p. 251), that he had seen the Basel edition of 1495—'Edizione nitidissima e da me veduta nella preziosa biblioteca del dotto signor Luigi Tramontani' ('Del Petrarca e delle sue opere', p. 210), is of little weight, as he derived the citation itself from Maittaire, and may actually have seen only the Amerbach volume of 1496. These are not cases of actual misprinting; they are either reminiscences of the Basel edition of 1496 in preparation, or faulty references to it. The same applies to a Venetian edition reputed to be of 1496, as Maittaire asserts, after the catalogue of Francesco Barberino's library. It is practically certain that this is the edition of 1501 or 1503, the earliest that contains the biography of Petrarch by Squarzafico (see Quarto, 'Petrarcha e Cino da Pistoia', p. 89). Ferrazzi (p. 211) cites without reference an edition of the Latin works, Parisiis, 1501, which Mr. Fiske considers apocryphal. The editor of this edition was Sebastian Brant, the author of the 'Narrenschiff', as we may deduce from the ten Latin distichs (1^b) entitled: De Commendatione Impressionis Francisci Petrarchæ Elogiū Sebastiani Brant. This evidence is corroborated by our knowledge of the relations of Brant to Amerbach as a humanist and editor.

There are three copies in the collection. The first, 280 × 204 mm., bears on the first two blank leaves, transcribed in a sixteenth-century hand, the work: 'Francisci Poete Laureati et Oratoris Clarissimi Psalmi Confessionales', which is attributed to Petrarch also by a Vatican codex and by several early prints (Vattasso, 'I codici petrarcheschi', pp. 197–206). This manuscript has been edited by A. H. Gilbert (see LATIN WORKS—ASCRIBED—PSALMI CONFSSIONALES). The blank leaves at the end (seven pages) are filled with manuscript reminiscences from Philip Beroaldus, Ovid, Tibullus, Propertius, Cicero, Seneca, Lactantius, etc., entitled: Auctoritates varie philosophorum poetarum oratorum et aliorum scriptorum de rebus variis collecte et primo de Fama bona et mala scilicet. The references are mostly suggested by the De remediis. Some of the categories are 'De bona vita et mala', 'De prospera et aduersa fortuna', 'De vitii et vitiosis', etc. There are also marginal annotations in two different hands. The first initial of the text is illuminated. The volume still wears the original binding in stamped vellum and oak. Fragments of the original bronze clasps still remain, bearing the gothic initial: W. (Notes of A. A. Livingston.)

The second copy, 262 × 185 mm., has the first leaf copied in exact facsimile. The third copy, 255 × 183 mm., has the De vera sapientia following De vita solitaria (ff. 57^a–60^b). There is also in the collection a separate copy of the De remediis (ff. 57^a–168^a) of this edition (Pet + B 496).

The second collective edition of Petrarch's Latin works. The publisher, Andrea Torresani, the father-in-law of Aldus Manutius, had purchased the press of Nicolas Jenson in 1482 or 1483. Upon the death of Aldus in 1515 he took charge of the Aldine press until the son Paulus Manutius became of age. The printer, Simone de Luere, was employed by different establishments of Northern Italy. The Vita Petrarche by Girolamo Squarza^{fi}cus, the commentator of the Canzoniere who supplemented Filelfo, is here first printed.

310 × 210 mm. Two volumes, in the original vellum binding. Folio numbers have been supplied in manuscript, but with errors. On the first cover of vol. i is transcribed Baldelli's estimation of the edition: 'Vi sono molte antiche edizioni dell' opere latine del Petrarca, e fra le molte a me note, merita la preferenza quella fatta in Venezia nel 1501, che ò consultata sovente per emendare e rischiarare vari passi corrotti nelle edizioni posteriori, pregevole anche per avere conservato nella collocazione delle epistole familiari, e senili l'ordine primitivo dato loro dal Petrarca [come apparisce dai testi a penna; ed è gran danno, che ingrata ella sia alla lettura per essere in lettere quadrate, piena d'abbreviature, senza numerazione di pagine, e non mancante d'errori]'. ('Del Petrarca e delle sue opere', 1797, p. 210.) A second copy, two volumes bound in one, has a few manuscript marginal notes. A third copy of pt. II has sheet 17 ii (ff. 128, 131) in place of sheet 7 ii (ff. 57, 59) and again in its own place, ff. 54, 59 being thus lacking.

The order of titles in the title-page 'Annotatio' is not that of the works in the volume. This is the third edition of the Latin works of Petrarch, interesting to bibliographers on account of the separately printed Bucolicum carmen, and its concluding phrase 'foeliciter expliciunt: per me Marcum horigono de Venet. Annis . . . currentibus .M.cccc.xvi. Die .vii. Iulii'. The explanation of the curious date suggested by Dr. Moser ('Die Fabel von der Presse des Markus Horigono') and elaborated by Mr. Fiske ('Petrarch books', pp. 20–21), that Horigono, whose name is unknown in the history of printing, was the scribe who copied the manuscript employed, and not the printer, is satisfactory. Mr. Fiske points out that the gothic types used in the half-title of the Bucolicum carmen are those employed in the general title-page and nowhere else in the book, the general title-page including in its 'Annotatio' the title of the appended Bucolicum carmen—a clear indication that no great length of time elapsed between the two impressions. 270 × 205 mm. Edited, with notes and an introduction (vol. i, pp. vii-xlvi), by Domenico Rossetti. Text and translation on opposite pages. Vol. i contains Eclogues I-XII; vols. ii-iii, the poetic Epistles, with appendices I-III, including various epi-taphs and Boccaccio's verses Pro Africa Petrarchae. Thirty-four names appear in the list of translators at the end of vol. iii (given also by Hortis), from which references are found in part II. The portrait is the engraving of Benaglia found in the Soave edition of the Rime, 1805. Three copies, of which one, printed on poorer paper, lacks the portrait.

Assigned by Proctor, as also by Campbell, to the press of Rodolphus Loeffs, established in Louvain Feb. 6, 1484. The first leaf is blank. The four books of De rebus memorandis begin on 2^a, 25^a, 61^a, and 113^a, respectively. Book IV ends (165^{a-b}) with an epitaph, 22 lines of verse, on the child of two bodies, described on 163^{a-b}. The index of the Memoria Haymonis fills the last four leaves, 219-222. This is the earliest known edition of the two Petrarch texts, De rebus memorandis, and Epistola ad posteros. 208 × 140 mm. A few marginal manuscript notes in a contemporary hand. Vellum index tags, some of which have been removed, are glued to the margins. Brown morocco, by Zaehnsdorf.

The table of contents, the translator's preface: Dem Edlen vnd besten Herren Leonharden Becken zu Augspurg . . ., and the index, precede the work, which in this edition is arranged, within the four books, in 'Tractats', 14 in all, and these in chapters. At the beginning of each 'Tractat' (with one or two exceptions) is a woodcut. Of these woodcuts four, at least, are those used in Stayner's editions of the early translations of De remediis, others may have been designed for the present work by the same artist. One or two are extremely crude. Dark blue morocco, by Pratt.

Following the preface are 54 lines of verse: Lob der Lehr vnd Kunst artlich in Rheimen verfasset. The division of the books into 'Tractats' is dropped, each book having a continuous chapter division. The spelling is revised, and in certain places the phraseology is altered. The Sprichwörter der sieben Weisen fill two unnumbered leaves at the end of the text, the contents and index following. A woodcut is introduced at the beginning of each book. On the last page a woodcut (154×136 mm.), representing a lamb upon a throne, has printed over it these lines:

All Kriegshändel vnd fräuel that Sich übel endt ohn weisen rath.
Drumb Schwerdt vnd Lorberkrantz weicht ab,

Die klüglich allen Krieg verricht,

In this edition, appearing fifty years after the first, the material is in part rearranged, in some places rewritten, and, as stated in the title, considerable additions have been made by the translator, who explains his purpose in a new preface of 14 pages. For example, in the fourth book, 26 new narrations have been introduced, found neither in the original nor in the earlier Vigilius editions. Of the two small woodcuts, the one in the title-page is repeated at the beginning of books II and IV, the other appears at the beginning of books I and III.

DE REMEDIIS UTRISQUE FORTUNAE.

* * The very full bibliography of this work prepared by Mr. Fiske and published as Bibliographical notices III (Florence, 1888) renders detailed description unnecessary in the present catalogue, beyond calling attention to points which have come to light since the publication of that list (references to which are here indicated by 'Fiske'). There have been added to the collection since 1888, copies of the first edition of the earliest French translation, 1523; of an early issue of the version of Grenailles, 1646, '44, and of the edition of 1652; of the German version of Vigilius, 1596; and of the Seville edition of Francisco de Madrid's Spanish translation, 1524.

The dedication: Ludouico Enecelio . . . Paullus Lentulus, contains the citations of Erasmus, Boccaccio, etc., in praise of Petrarch given in Herold's preface to the 'Opera omnia', Basel, 1554, 1581. Pinitian's distichs introducing each dialogue, first published in the German translation of Vigilius in 1539, are here printed with the Latin text for the first time. 32 lines are omitted from dialogue 57 of book I.

16°. pp. 199, 201-225, 227-728, [31]. Port. in t.-p., initials, orn. Hortis, 373. Fiske, 21.

A reissue of the preceding, with new preliminary matter, pp. [1-32]. Of this, the third portion, Francisci Petrarchæ Elogia, is still drawn from Herold's preface, but the material is rearranged. The portrait of Petrarch is a still poorer woodcut (41 × 50 mm.) after that of the 'Opera omnia', Basle, 1581. A second copy of this edition is bound with other Latin works issued by this press, making two volumes with the general title 'Francisci Petrarchæ operum' (see Collections, 1610); a third copy has III added in manuscript to the imprint date, making 'MDCXIII'.

Assigned by Campbell ('Annales de la typographie néerlandaise', no. 1385) to the press of Pierre de Os, about 1485. Illuminated initial at the beginning of each dialogue.

Concerning this work attributed to Petrarch, first published with Filelfo's Latin translation of Plutarch's 'Apophthegmata', see Uebinger's 'Die angeblichen Dialoge Petrarca's über die wahre Weisheit'. A part of the first dialogue is made up of passages from De remediis, the bulk of the work being taken from the treatise 'De sapientia' of Nicolas de Cusa. The two dialogues are included in the editions of Petrarch's collected works, 1496–1581, and were published by Jean Le Preux with De ocio religiosorum, Bernæ, 1604, in 16^o, filling pp. 138–173 of the volume. An Italian translation of the first dialogue is included in Silvestri's 'Biblioteca scelta di opere greche e latine tradotte in lingua italiana', vol. 33: 'Opere filosofiche di Francesco Petrarca, Milano', 1824, 1833, and is reprinted with 'Le confessioni' (Il Segreto) in the 'Biblioteca universale' of E. Sonzogno (no. 69), Milano, 1883.

There are many errors in the folio numeration. (The last printed leaf is 'clxxiii' instead of clxxiii.) f. 6^b, towards the end of the printer's dedication to Charles duc de Vendosmois, conte de Marle, has: 'de cestuy liure vous fais present Lequel a autresfois este traduit de Latin en Francois par Nicole oresme chanoine de la sainte chappelle de Paris a la requeste du feu Roy Charles le quint. Et depuis peu de temps recouuert, fait corriger et imprimer par moy Galliot du Pre...'. M. Delisle, in his 'Anciennes traductions...', describes six manuscripts of the present translation, in four of which the translator is named as 'son très humble et très petit subget et orateur Nicole Oresme indigne chanoine de la Sainte Chapelle royal à Paris', while in the remaining two the name JEHAN DAUDIN is written in place of Nicole Oresme. Further research produced the letter of the King (dated 14 April 1378 n.s.) reporting the payment of 200 francs d'or 'à maistre JEHAN DEUDIN chanoine de nostre Sainte Chapelle royal à Paris pour ce qu'il a translaté, de nostre commandement, de latin en françois, un livre appellé Patrae'; from which, as well as from the facts of Nicole Oresme's career, M. Delisle finds Daudin's authorship of the translation established. It is, at all events, the earliest translation of the treatise into another tongue. Lacks the title folio and the last blank leaf.

A reprint of the preceding, with different

engraving (203 × 266 mm.) from the frontispiece of an illuminated manuscript in the Bibliothèque of a second translation of De remediis, by an unknown author, dedicated to Louis XII. in 1503.

(See above ['Selections from De remediis . . .'])
It represents the translator in the act of presenting the work to the King, surrounded by courtiers. In the present edition of the earlier translation the same subject is represented in a fine woodcut (170 × 211 mm.), f. xxvii^b. Of the other woodcuts, six are the same as in Galliot while the first, fourth, sixth, and tenth are of new design. Red morocco and gold, by Masson-

The two instalments of FRANÇOIS DE GRE-NAILLE'S French version of De remediis here bound together and issued as one work represent the original form of its publication. The first part, whose title-page has 'seconde édition', with the date MDCXLVI, is clearly a reissue of the original sheets, with a new title-page. It contains the original Privilege, dated May 28, 1641, with the statement following: 'Acheué d'imprimer pour la première fois le 5. Octobre 1641'. The engraved title inserted on the fly-leaf preceding the title-page has had the words 'seconde édition' added, and the date '1641' changed to '1644' with a pen. The tables 'des Entretiens du premier liure [and] . . . du second liure' stand together as the third and fourth leaves of sig.
, although the catchword at the end of the second indicates its true position as preceding p. 1 of book II. The first part was, as it thus appears, originally published in 1641. It consists of 30 'Entretiens', preceded by the in-troduitory matter described in no. 56 of Bibliographical notices III, the reprint of 1650. The inserted frontispiece is the original engraving

De Remediis—French.

(156 × 213 mm.) from which that of the reprint is reduced (75 × 129 mm.). The same ornament and beautiful initials appear in both parts. Of 'Livre second', consisting likewise of 30 'Entretiens' with Petrarch's Prologue, this is undoubtedly the original edition, printed uniformly with the first part, in large roman type, on heavy paper, the type-page varying from 180 × 103 mm. to 187 × 109 mm. In the original vellum binding.

The 'troisième & dernière Partie' here first published reprints the Privilege of the 12^{mo} edition of 1650, at the end of which is: 'Acheué d'imprimer pour la première fois, le 3. Octobre 1651'. It is dedicated to Monsieur de Chamboy, mareschal des camps et armées du Roy, in a preface of 14 pages. The translator has continued selecting material from the original, here and there, according to his own design. It is arranged in three books of 22, 22, and 14 chapters, respectively, which in the following edition (Fiske, 57) make chapters 28-49 of book I, 21-42 of book 2, and 1-14 of book 3, in part II. At the end is a useful table of the dialogues as numbered in the original, referred by page to the corresponding paraphrase in the present work. This table shows the existence of a quarto edition of parts I and II later than that of 1646, '44, in which each part is arranged in two books, and chapters 31-34 have been added to part II. It is in the note addressed to the reader at the beginning of this table (which appears in no other edition) that Grenaille explains his method of rearrangement and elimination of the matter of the original. This 'troisième Partie' is printed in the types of the first edition and on similar paper, the type-page measuring 180 × 98 mm. The engraved frontispiece (138 × 215 mm.) showing Laura appearing to the sleeping poet (illustrating perhaps the sonnet Se quell' aura soave de' sospiri) signed: Champagne . . ., is badly worn. In the original vellum binding.

The translator's preface, addressed to Martin Weyss and signed: E. F. W. undertäniger vnd williger STEPHANVS VIGILIUS diener, Francisci Petrarche leben, als vil man ausz seinen Büchern allen, auch von anderen so von ihm geschriben, haben mag, with the Register and Errata, precede the text. Introducing each dialogue are the Latin and German couplets of Johann Pinitian, which are reprinted in the succeeding editions of the Vigilius translation. The Latin ones are printed later in the Latin editions of Le Preux and others, attaining popularity as a sort of poetical epitome of Petrarch's treatise. Brant's Vorred is found on the reverse of the title-page of the second book. The Register of each book furnishes a subject index to the work. Marginal arguments are also introduced. The woodcuts are those of the edition of 1532, in a slightly different arrangement.

In his edition of Valentin Schumann's Nachtbüchlein (Bibliothek des Litt. Vereins zu Stuttgart, 1893, Bd. cxvii, pp. 328, 389) Johannes Bolte notes the introduction of a folksong, quoted also by Vigilius in this translation,

Obl. 8°. pp. [4]. Port., 124 plates. Fiske, 76. The preface, signed: Eberhardt Kieser Kupfferstecher daselbsten, has the following note, with its interesting conjecture as to the authorship of the famous woodcuts: 'Als haben mir die darinnen [that is in the "Trostspiegel"] in Holtz geschnittene Figuren (wegen der Kunst vnd sonderlichen fleisses derselbige kunstreiche Mahler vnd auch der Formschneider, so solche gerissen vnd in Holtz geschnitten, angewendet) vber alle massen wolgefallen. Dann ob wol der Mahler seinen Namen nicht darbey gesetzt, man auch eygentlich nicht wissen kan, wer solche gerissen oder geschnitten, so lobt doch das Werck seinen Meister genugsam, seyn auch so gut vnd wol gemacht, dasz sie auch wol Albrecht Dürern, dem fürtrefflichsten, künstlichsten vnd weitberühmten Mahler vnd Künstler, möchten zugemessen werden.' (f. 3^a.) The engravings, somewhat reduced from the size of the originals (75 × 130 mm.), are accompanied by the Pinitian distichs, Latin and German. Only those of book I are here reproduced. Plates 1, 31, 66, 70 bear the signature of Balthasar Schwan. Röttinger ('Hans Weiditz', pp. 72-73) notes: '1652 erschien bei Paulus Fürst in Nürnberg unter dem Titel Glück und Unglück-Spiegel eine auf Grund eines Egenolfischen Druckes gearbeitete, die Schnitte des ersten Bandes reproduzierende Kupferstichausgabe in quer-8°. Die 124 Blätter sind von Balthasar Schwan 1619 und 1620 gestochen'. Can he have drawn his conclusion as to Schwan's authorship of the engravings, in the absence of Kieser's title and preface, from the four signatures above noted, the remaining 120 bearing no signature at all? The portrait, an engraving (by Kieser?), is a copy reversed of another in the collection, which has been ascribed to Theodore de Bry.

f°. Without sig. Unnumbered ff. 153. ll. 38. Type-page 1^b, 182 × 122 mm. Gothic. A few initial-directors. Hain, 4226. Proctor, 2456.

Assigned by Hain, and by Proctor, to the press of Conrad Fyner in Esslingen. To this earliest edition of Caesar's 'De bello Gallico' is prefixed the anonymous life of its author, which from this time was published with the title, 'Iulii Celsi Commentarii de vita Iulii Caesaris' (as in the editions entered below), until it received its true attribution in the title of Karl Ernst Christoph Schneider's edition of 1827: 'Francisci Petrarchæ Historia Iulii Caesaris', and was by the researches of that editor restored to its place as the most important portion of the 'De viris illustribus'. The suggestion of Petrarch's authorship had been made as far back as 1726 by Bernard de la Monnoye in his additions and corrections to the 'Menagiana' of Gilles Menage (tom. iv, pp. 80-85). In 1828 appeared Domenico Rossetti's 'Petrarca, Giul. Celso e Boccaccio', in which not only this portion but the entire collection of the Vitæ de viris illustribus, hitherto known only in the Italian version of Donato degli Albanzani, was described, and its manuscripts examined. During the next five years (1829-1834) appeared Schneider's publication of the Breslau manuscript containing 25 of the 36 lives, in full.

The tradition which connects the name of Julius Celsus with the Commentaries of Caesar appears in the note standing alone on f. 49^a, which reads: 'Hic incipit octauus commentariōrū liber quem fecit iulius celsus. septem autem primos et vsq; ad hunc passum fecit ipse cesar, quāuis hic actor aliquot in locis contradicit ⁊ male cicerone teste et ipso celso in prologo suo ic.': 'Here (at this point in Caesar's life) begins the eighth book of the Commentaries which Julius Celsus composed, but the first seven books down to this point (in the life) Caesar himself composed, although the present author speaks against this in certain places, incorrectly—Cicero being witness, and Celsus himself in his prologue (to the eighth book).' At the end of book VII of the Commentaries, 144^a, is the note: 'Suprascriptos .vii. libros de bello gallico composuit ipse cesar. Sequentem | autē. Iulius celsus cesaris familiaris c.' Rossetti's comment on the first puzzling interpolation (op. cit., p. 169) is as follows: 'Quella annotazione adunque e pel suo collocamento e per le cose che annunzia, e per lo stile in cui è scritta; non può meritare fede alcuna, ed è da tenersi per fattura di qualche imperitissimo menante, il quale, avendola ritrovata dopo il libro VII dei comentarii "De bello gallico" e prima del libro VIII, che sapevasi e leggevasi non poter essere di Cesare stesso, credette di doverla per la stessa ragione innestare od intrudere anche nella vita di Cesare. Non può peraltro egualmente negarsi che quell' annotazione provi almeno l' esistenza di un' antica tradizione od opinione di un Giulio Celso scrittore delle cose cesariane'.

It is interesting to note in this connection that in Albrecht von Eyb's 'Margarita poetica' published the preceding year by Sensenschmid (see DE REMEDIIS—INCOMPLETE EDITIONS) the portion made up of citations from Caesar's Commentaries (ff. 294^a–296^a) has the title: 'Julij Celsi de gestis Cesaris Autoritates', and that this title is changed to 'Julii cæsaris autoritates' in the edition of 1493.

'Lascia egli [Graevius] pure, secondo l' opinione dei più, il nome di Giulio Celso all' autore della vita di Cesare . . . ma non pare punto persuaso, e la ritiene per opera di autore di quattro a cinque secoli addietro' (Rossetti, op. cit., p. 177).

The biography: J. Celsi commentarii de vita Julii Cæsaris, vol. iii, pp. 7–261, has a preface, pp. vii–xix, by Lemaire, the preface of Graevius following, pp. 1–5. Lemaire had come upon the suggestion of Petrarch's authorship, both by Bernard de la Monnoye and by Friedrich Schoell ('Histoire abrégée de la littérature romaine', 1815, tom. ii, p. 11), but had not gone far enough to establish it.

Excerpts from the last full pages 54-80; Fragments inédits de la vie de Scipion, pp. 81-90.

M. de Nolhac finds evidence (contrary to the opinion of Rossetti, who did not have access to the Paris manuscripts) that eight of the biographies (Flaminius to Pompey) included in the translation of Donato degli Albanzani were written, not by Petrarch, but by Lombardo della Seta.

The translation of DONATO DEGLI ALBANZANI in this edition contains four lives not found in the Laurentian codex edited by Luigi Razzolini in 1874—Octavianus, Vespasianus, Titus, and Trajanus. (See Latin and Italian, 1874-79.) At the beginning of each life is a page with engraved border, the center being left blank for a portrait of its hero, to be supplied by the miniaturists. Mr. A. W. Pollard ('Italian book illustrations', 1894, p. 11) notes that one of the two patterns was used to adorn the cover of the magazine Bibliographica (London, Paul & Co., 1895-97). The title at the head of 5^a is without the colons indicated by Hain. Described by Rossetti, p. 24, Gamba, no. 754, Luigi Razzolini, 'Bibliografia dei testi di lingua', p. 266. 313 x 214 mm. As noted in B.M., 67^b has 36 lines and measures 187×107 mm. The copy in the Imperial Library of Vienna has written in an old hand beneath the colophon the date 1473. The work is often bound with the Secretum issued by the same press (see below), and Hortis describes the two as forming a single issue. The work is described by J. P. A. Madden ('Lettres d'un bibliographe', 4^e série, pp. 85-92) and is commented on by Costanzo Gazzera ('Osservazioni bibliografiche', pp. 47-50).

259×206 mm. Lacks the first ten leaves, the text being supplied in seven leaves of manuscript of about 1500. (The title and collation as given above are completed from B. M., p. 61.) Initials and paragraph marks supplied in red. After f. 58 appears the stub of 65, the extra leaf of the seventh gathering, one inch wide. 89^b bears the stamp: Bibliotheca Regia Monacensis.

The Prolegomenon, vol. i, pp. i-clvi, includes indexes of manuscript sources; of letters which should be omitted and of letters which should be added to Meneghelli's Index; an alphabetical index (by first word titles) of the letters; table of the letters as arranged in the present edition; alphabetical index of persons addressed; a chronological table of events connected with the letters. The Epistola ad posteros precedes the De rebus familiaribus, vol. i, pp. 1-11; the Testamentum is printed at the end, vol. iii, pp.

537-544. Vol. iii, p. 545, refers to the editor's notes made during the progress of the work, of which the publication was reserved for the Italian edition, which they greatly enrich. They were published in their original Latin form by C. Antona-Traversi and P. Rafaelli, in 1890 (see Fracassetti, G. In Epistolas Francisci Petrarcae . . . adnotationes).

'Questa edizione porgeva finalmente l'epistolario quasi completo, ordinato di nuovo, e corretto nel testo sull' autorità di buoni codici. The translations include 20 letters from De rebus familiaribus, four from De rebus senilibus, one each from Variae and Sine titulo, and the Epistola ad posteros. The portrait is a photo-engraving of the miniature of cod. Par. 6069 F; the facsimile is a page from Petrarch's copy of the Iliad. The cover bears an impression of Petrarch's autograph design: 'Transalpina solitudo mea jocundissima'. Inserted are clippings containing the reviews noticed below.

This book, Volpi informs us ('Le Rime di Petrarca', Padova, 1722, p. xcix), was in the Index of prohibited books published by Paolo Manuzio at the end of the Council of Trent, 1564. It was inferred that the three sonnets were prohibited, whence arose the custom of printing the Canzoniere without them, until Volpi restored them in 1722, contending that the prohibition applied to the book in question but not to the sonnets printed in their own place. See note of Carducci in his edition of the Rime, 1899, p. 223. This book, in reality a Reformation tract, was printed in several editions.

which that I lerned at Padowe of a worthy clerk' (ll. 26-27). 'We may conclude that Chaucer and Petrarch met at Padua early in 1373; that Petrarch told Chaucer the story by word of mouth, either in Italian or French; and that Chaucer shortly after obtained a copy of Petrarch's Latin version, which he kept con-

The introduction is signed: J. P. C. [John Payne Collier]. The title reprinted from the original edition reads: The pleasant comodie of patient Grissill as it hath bene sundrie times lately plaid by the . . . Earle of Nottingham . . . his servants. London. Imprinted for Henry Rocket . . . 1603. The authorship was revealed by a receipt entered in Henslowe's Diary 'in earnest of Patient Grissell' signed: By me Henry Chettle, W. Haughton, Thomas Dekker.

Mr. Collier found in the prose tract of the Percy Society's 'The history of patient Grisell' (see below) the immediate source of the drama. The editor of the following edition observes that the ballad of Deloney likewise furnished much of the material.

L. for William Lutter, 1619; pp. 43-59, The pleasant and sweet history of patient Grissell . . . Translated out of Italian. London, printed by E. P. for John Wright. [1640.] Of the first tract Hazlitt ('Handbook', 1867, p. 245) cites an edition printed by Edward All-de in 1607. Hübsch ('The pleasant Comodie . . .', p. ix) believed the present narration to have been prepared from Steinhöwel's German version. 'The ancient, true and admirable history' is nevertheless justly characterized by the present editor as a 'vernacular production', having a distinct literary style. The second tract, a ballad with prose beginning and ending, was printed (without the prose) without date, by Alex. Milburn. The ballad was inserted in T. Deloney's 'Garland of good-will', which was printed before 1596, reprinted by the Percy Society, 'Early English Poetry', 1852, vol. xxx, pp. 82-89 (1716 A 30). J. H. Dixon, editor of the reprint, believed Deloney to have been the author of 'The pleasant history', both the prose and the ballad.

Bound with the edition of the Latin text from the press of Johann Zainer, Ulm, 1473, and bearing the same ornamental border on its first page, Goedeke's ascription of the present edition to that press seems justified ('Grundriss', 1^{er} Bd., p. 365, 4). Goedeke gives the date 1474.

The translation of HEINRICH STEINHÖWEL was twice published anonymously, under the title: 'Diss ist ain epistel francisci petrarch von grosser stätigkait ainer frowen Grisel gehaissen', first by Günther Zainer, Augsburg, 1471, and again by Johannes Bämle, Augsburg, 1472. In 1473 its authorship was established in an edition by Johannes Zainer, in Ulm, of Boccaccio's 'De praeclaris mulieribus' with the title: 'Johannis Boccaccii Büchlen von den sinnrychen erluchten Wyben . . . Getutscht durch Hainricum Stainhowel von Wyl an der Wirms', the text of which was followed by the Griseldis translation prefaced by the first words of the present edition. In later editions of the Griseldis alone (five are cited in Goedeke, 1474-1482) these words, bereft of their proper connection, begin the text. Goedeke's ascription of the work to Nyclas von Wyle is apparently based upon the statement in the beginning of the second 'Translation' of Nyclas (see note under DE REMEDIIS—German, 1536). The Griseldis translation of Nyclas, however, is at present unknown.

The interesting woodcuts (colored in the present copy) are on 2^b, 4^a (2), 6^a (repeated on 7^b), 9^a, 9^b, 10^b, 11^b, 12^a. 282 × 200 mm.

In the same types as the preceding, and with the same woodcuts in a slightly less clear impression, and in a slightly differing arrangement. The title-page border and initial are very similar. This edition is nowhere described (excepting Quaritch's description, 'General catalogue', 1883, no. 12016, of what is doubtless the present copy). Quaritch thought the types were Günther Zainer's (Augsburg, 1468-1471), but the comparison of this with the preceding edition makes it clear that the work issued from the press of Johann Zainer, not much later than 1473. 275 × 185 mm. On the inside upper cover is the inscription: Iste liber est magistri hilbrandi de bibraco.

The letter following the Penitential psalms is, in Fracassetti, Fam. VII:17—'Franciscus Petrarca Gilberto Grammatico Parmensi S. P. D.' The letter 'Malicia salutabis Ganum' is epistola 5 of Fracassetti's appendix (vol. iii, p. 515). It is in reply to a sonnet sung by the jester Gano da Colle, in which he urges Petrarch, 'unico sole e splendidissimo luminare del mondo', to flee the tyranny of the Duke of Milan. The manuscript is rubricated throughout. Some of the initials have grotesque figures in pen-drawing. Many initial spaces are unfilled.

Text and expansive paraphrase of the seven Penitential and the nine Confessional Psalms. The ninth portion of the latter is not included in the 'quinze degrez'. It has the title: Cantique solennel de F. Petrarque. The preliminary matter includes, with the translator's prefaces and verses by I. Condential, 'La vie et mœurs de François Petrarque traduite d'italien', being a translation of the anonymous biography prefixed to Jean de Tourne's edition of the Rime, 1547. The engraved title-page represents fifteen steps surmounted by a glory, and the letters I. H. S., with two kneeling figures (Petrarch and Laura?) at the foot. Inserted is a manuscript description of the work.

ARS PUNCTANDI.

[Extract from the treatise Ars punctandi, ascribed to Petrarch.] (In Il Canzoniere di Francesco Petrarca riprodotto dal cod. Vat. Lat. 3195 a cura di E. Modigliani. 1904. pp. xxix-xxx.)

The treatise in question was published by Arnoldus de Colonna, Leipsic, 1493, with the title: Ars punctandi egregij oratoris Francisci Petrarche Poete laureati ad Salutatum Orationem insignem. It is followed by Guilhelmi Zaphonensis . . . pervtilis epistolandi modus. (Hain, 12830; Günther, 'Wiegendrucke der Leipziger Sammlung', no. 1144.) Copies exist in the Communal Library of Treviso, in the University Library of Leipsic, and in the Biblioteca Vittorio Emanuele of Rome.

Modigliani finds a correspondence between the rules of the treatise and the punctuation of the autograph Canzoniere which leads him to regard the work as a genuine production of Petrarch. For a different conclusion see F. Novati's 'Di una Ars punctandi . . .' See also Modigliani's reply: 'Intorno ad una Ars punctandi'. The matter is discussed in a brief note in Rassegna bibliografica della letteratura italiana, vol. xviii, p. 75.

EPISTOLAE.

The letters, edited for the first time, from cod. Borgiano M. V. 36, are addressed to Barbato da Solmona. The first begins: [M]ulta se offerunt, Barbato optime; the second: [B]arbato optime atque unice.

Lettera di Francesco Petrarca a frate Jacopo Bussolari da Pavia in nome di Bernabò Visconti signor di Milano.—Lettera di Francesco Petrarca a Giovanni da Mandello.—Lettera apocrifa di Petrarca a Giangaleazzo conte di Virtù. (In Petrarca (F.) e Lombardia. 1904. pp. 59-63, 68-72.)

Appended to F. Novati's article: 'Il Petrarca ed i Visconti'. The first two are genuine; the last, Novati pronounces 'il zibaldoncino d'un ignoto umanista ambrosiano'. An Italian translation of the first appears on pp. 36-38, of the second on pp. 50-52.

The Epitaph, 10 lines of verse beginning: Thusca parente pio, sed facta Ligustica dulci, here published from an Ambrosian manuscript, where it bears the above title, was published by Tomasini ('Petrarcha rediuius', p. 143) after Bonifacio ('Historia Trivigiana', 1591) and copied by later authors. Bonifacio's lines were copied from a monument to Francesca, which at the beginning of the 19th century was preserved in the cathedral of Treviso, having been brought thither from the church of S. Francesco. The two readings vary, the inscription nowhere implying Petrarch's authorship of the verse. See Mercati, G. Cosma Raimondi cremonese . . . e Sull' epitafio di Francesca Petrarca. 1894.

Concerning the authenticity of the work Henry Cochin says: 'Ce texte est destiné à faire suite aux Psalmi poenitentiales. Mais je ne pense pas qu'il soit authentique et tel est aussi, je le sais, l'avis de F. Novati. Ce n'est ni le style ni l'accent de P. Mais ce texte du moins est un type curieux d'une littérature religieuse née à l'imitation des œuvres pieuses de P., ces œuvres dont la diffusion fut si rapide dans tous les couvents de l'Europe.' (Giornale storico della letteratura italiana, 1909, vol. liv, p. 412.)

The fragment here ascribed to Petrarch is found in the works of St. Petrus Damianus, Opusc. xi, cap. xix, with the title: Laus eremitice vite (Migne's 'Patrologia', Latin ser., vol. cxlv, col. 246-251). This information is communicated by Mgr. (Editions of the Canzoniere and Trionfi, or of parts of the same. Portions of text printed in general works, as anthologies, histories of Italian poetry, etc., or accompanying incomplete translations, are not here included, but are noted under the proper entries of such works. Commentaries on single compositions accompanied with text, as well as those without text, are entered under the name of the commentator, in part II. Numbers assigned to the poems of the Canzoniere are those of the edition printed from cod. Vat. 3195 by the Società Filologica Romana, 1904.)

ff. [143]. 220 × 147 mm.

Pencilled on the last cover: 'Della 1^a metà del Secolo XV. D. Paolino Manciana Benedetto.' The first two and the last two folios are vellum. Sonnets and canzoni fill ff. 1^a-92^a. The canzone Sì è debile il filo on the second (vellum) leaf lacks 10 lines at the beginning and 10 lines at the end, indicating the loss of some leaves. The Triumphs begin on 93^a with the title: Franc. Petrarcae. poetæ. lepidissimi. triumpho. VI. incipiunt. et. primo. primum. quod. de. amore. inscribitur—ending on 119^a. The verse following, 119^b-133^b, includes 37 sonnets and 2 canzoni of Petrarch, 9 sonnets and 2 canzoni of Dante, 6 sonnets of Cina da Pistoia, with one each of Boccaccio, Sennuccio del Bene, Giacopo de' Garatori da Imola, Stramazzo da Perugia. 134-136^a are blank; 136^b has a few lines from 'Salustius bello Jugurthae'; 137-141, Index; 142^a, the note Laura propriis; 142^b-143^a, Latin verse, and a note concerning Francesco de Brossano. Illuminated initials, with a bit of border, begin the first sonnet and the first Triumph, and at the foot of each page (1^a and 93^a) is a coat of arms with the name: D'EVSTACHIO CONFIDATI. Many curious drawings in the broad margins. Oak boards and stamped brown leather, torn and worm-eaten.

ff. [186]. 263 × 170 mm.

Vellum. The text ends on 178^b, followed by the word finis. 179 is blank, the index filling ff. 180-186. Two blank vellum leaves are bound in at the beginning and end. The binding is by Bedford, of London. The manuscript, which dates from about 1470, was sold at the Libri sale of manuscripts in 1859, the cataloguer (Libri) giving this account of it: 'This magnificent manuscript, exhibiting a beautiful specimen of Italian calligraphy, has the first page in gold and blue, within an elegant wreath, upheld by Cupids. The first page of the Trionfi is adorned with a large miniature capital, shewing Petrarch dreaming, and an angel or diable boiteux [really the figure of Father Time retreating] in attendance. This page is surrounded by an exquisitely illuminated border, formed by portraits, cupids, birds, insects, flowers, &c., with the arms of an ancient Italian family in the centre of the lower margin. A very similar border adorns the first page of the Sonetti, having a miniature portrait of Petrarch in the initial letter. There are also throughout the manuscript numerous capital letters illuminated in gold colours. No finer or more costly manuscript of Petrarch than this has ever been offered in a public sale; for it is not only valuable for the fine penmanship, the illuminations, and the whiteness of the Italian vellum, but also for the text, which is remarkably pure. Under the elegant garland on the reverse of the first leaf there was formerly the name of an ancient owner, which, although defaced, is still legible, and shows that this volume belonged to the abate Ughelli, who, two centuries ago, published the celebrated work entitled, "Italia Sacra".'

Vellum, in a beautiful disjointed hand. Sonnets and canzoni fill ff. 1–170; Triumphs, ff. 171–216; Index, ff. 217^a–225^a, and, in a different hand, on the last three pages, an index of selections. Fine illuminated initials and borders begin the first sonnet and the first Triumph, the first lines of each being in gold majuscules. Gold initials begin each sonnet and ode. The chapters of the Triumphs have charming small initials in gold and color. Vellum binding lettered: Petrarca—Canzoniere—MS. Sec. xv.

The table fills seven leaves, a blank leaf following; the sonnets in the Aldine order fill ff. '1^a–91^a'; the canzoni follow, '91^b–136^b', beginning with Vergine bella; the sonnet Almo sol, omitted in its place, is copied in a different hand after the last canzone; the Trionfi, ff. '137^a–172^b', are followed by a brief note on the poet, and this by the Laura note, on the recto of the last leaf—the two notes in a different hand. Has a front cover of vellum inscribed on its recto: Venit post multos vna serena dies; on its verso, with four citations. Oak boards, brown leather back, lettered: Petrarca MS.

Vellum. Illuminated initials and borders begin the first, second, and third Triumphs. The capitoli are numbered consecutively throughout, with no titles to begin the last three Triumphs. In the Triumph of Love chapter II follows IV. The passage beginning Quanti già nella età matura is included in Death, and the rejected chapter Nel cor pien d' amarissima dolcezza precedes the other chapters of Fame. The leaf containing the last 31 lines of this chapter and the first 21 lines beginning Fame is lacking, as are all but one after line 74 of the third chapter of Fame—that one containing ll. 7–64 of Time.

Vellum. Sonnets and canzoni fill ff. 1–161, ending with the Greek words Τελος αμυν—θεο καριν [Tēlos hēmyn—thēō charin] followed on the same page by the title: Cominciano etriomphi sei di M Francesco petrarca cioe damore': di pudicitia: di morte': di phama: di tempo: deternita. The text of the Triumphs begins on the next page, and ends on f. 161, followed by: Tēlos—Chi semina uirtu fama richolie Chi tempo perde mai non s'erigerà, in a later hand. ff. 1 (title)—11, 16–17 are supplied in a modern hand. ff. 13 and 18 have been misplaced and bound in after 15 and 20 respectively. A handsome initial begins the first Triumph and is imitated in the supplied folio beginning the sonnets. Red and blue capitals alternately begin the compositions of the Canzoniere and the chapters of the Trionfi. In red morocco, handsomely tooled. Bought of Arrigoni.

The first edition of the Italian verse of Petrarch. Wendelin of Speyer was the successor of his brother Johann whose 'Epistolae familiares' of Cicero printed in 1469 is said to be the first book printed in Venice. Says Horatio Brown ('Venetian printing press', p. 33): 'There is an interesting testimony as to the avidity with which some of these early publications were bought up by scholars. In a copy of Petrarch's Canzoniere, with an autograph commentary in a contemporary hand, probably by Antonio da Canal—written about the year 1516, when Canal was already eighty years of age—the following notice of the Petrarch printed by Windelin of Speyer in the year 1470, occurs: "non se ne catta più alcuno, che subito fu venduto, e a pagarlo cento ducati non lo troveria" (Morelli, Zibaldoni, tom. i, 605. Cod. Cicogna, 3, 205). Windelin's Petrarch was bought up at once and did not come into the market again as a second-hand book, so that Antonio da Canal was unable to find a copy at any price.'

The text abounds in errors. The order of the poems of the Canzoniere is not exactly that of the later folio editions, e.g. the canzone I' vo pensando immediately precedes Vergine bella. The ballata Donna mi uenne spesso ne lamente finds a place, following the sonnet Quelle pietose rime in ch'io m'accorsi. The Triumphs, as in the succeeding 15th-century editions, include the fragment at the end of Chastity beginning Quanti già nell' età matura, and, as the first of Fame, the chapter beginning Nel cor pien d' amarissima dolcezza. A perfect copy, 245 × 170 mm. Printed on thick, firm paper, having the middle sheet of each quire (carrying the binder's thread) reinforced by a strip of parchment. The first page of the Sonnets and the first page of the Triumphs have elaborate illuminated initials and arabesque borders. Red and blue initials are supplied at the beginning of each composition. Italian vellum, in a Florentine case.

Attributed by Hain to the press of Georg Lauer. The edition is interesting in the illustrative material included. Here the famous Laura note first appears in print, as also excerpts from the Epistolae (Fam. II:9 and XI:4), and here is the first published biography, the one attributed to Antonio da Tempo. (For editions etc., see Tempo, A. da.) 'Le texte est expurgé des fautes nombreuses qui déshonorent celui de la première édition.' (Brunet, ii, c. 215– 216.) Marsand knew only three copies besides his own. The text he regarded as one of the purest, regretting that he had not had the use of it in the preparation of his edition. Printed on heavy, firm paper. Lines and spaces are uneven. Capitals begin each terzina in the Triumphs, each line of the other poems. The division of the Canzoniere into two parts is faintly indicated by the space for an initial (13 × 20 mm.) at the beginning of the canzone P'vo pensando. 205 × 147 mm. Lacks ff. 44, 45, containing the end of the life of Petrarch, 46, blank, eight lines of the fourth. An illuminated initial

105^b has, after the sonnet *aRbor uictoriosa
triumphale*, FINIT VITA AMORIS. | INCIPIT DE
MORTE AMORIS. | i Vo pensando . . . This mark of division in the Canzoniere is copied in the reprint of Leonardus Achates, 1474, and is found in the Siliprandi edition, 1477, then disappears until Aldus in 1501 prints two titles:
Sonetti et canzoni di messer Francesco Pet-rarcha in vita di M. Laura (f. 1^b) and, before the canzone P'vo pensando (f. 99^b), Sonetti et canzoni . . . in morte di M. Laura. The first sonnet and the first page of the Triumphs are printed in capitals, as are the titles of each chapter of the Triumphs. The sonnets are for the first time printed with the first, fifth, ninth and twelfth lines projecting at the left, the form ever after followed. The table of first lines refers to folio numbers, although the folios themselves are without numbers. It is not entirely accurate, e.g. it has 'Donna mi uien spesso nela mente xlviii', the ballata itself, of course, not being included in this text. The life of the poet is by Leonardo Bruni, published for the first time, without the author's name.

This edition, prized for its beauty as to typography and paper as well as for its rarity, has a greater claim to esteem in the source of its text.
'Di quest' edizione s' è presa la cura Barto-di prenderlo dall' autografo, e a questo attenersi.

Non mancano già in essa errori di stampa molti says Morelli in his edition of 1799 (vol. i, p. v).

This is an interesting reference to the autograph of the Canzoniere, now cod. Vat. 3195, where, opposite the first lines of the last 30 sonnets, are seen, in Petrarch's hand, numerals indicating a different order from that followed in the manuscript (and in this text). The paper has suffered great injury from chemicals which have been used upon it, erasing numerous marginal manuscript notes. Another copy (270 × 173 mm.) bears the book-plate of Sir Robert Shafto Adair, with the pencilled note on the fly-leaf: Bought at Heber's sale, 1835. It is perfect and in excellent condition, has the first page of text illuminated with a broad border in gold and colors and the letters of the text gilded, as they are also on f. 147^a. It is red-lined throughout. On the verso of the last leaf is a sonnet: Al sepolcro di M. Francesco P., in a modern hand.

The Canzoniere shows no mark of division between parts I and II. The Triumphs have titles at the beginning of each chapter. The passage beginning Quanti già nell' età matura, in the usual place, has the title: In laude della pudicitia. Large type, very clear, on heavy paper. The preface contains the statement: 'Igīt imprimi fecimus uolumina CCCL' notwithstanding which Brunet says (iv, c. 536) 'Sans nul doute cette édition est plus rare encore que celle de 1471'. The fact that some copies (e.g. the one in the Marquis of Bute's collection) are without the dedication to Lorenzo de' Medici led Mr. J. G. Godwin, sometime Librarian to Lord Bute, to believe that the Fiske copy was the one presented to Lorenzo, it being the frequent custom to put such dedications only in copies meant for presentation. 225 × 164 mm. A variation from other early editions is the inclusion of three compositions found in the giunta of later editions. The poems are, Quella ghirlanda che la bella fronte, Stato foss' io quando la vidi prima, and Donna mi viene spesso nella mente, here printed just before the canzone I' vo pensando. No mark of division occurs at this point. This edition attributed by Hain to the press of Niccolò Jenson is assigned by Proctor (no. 4187) to Gabriele and Filippo di Pietro. It is noted in the Morgan Catalogue that as Niccolò Marcello became doge in August 1473, the edition is later than Lignamine's. The type is smaller, the ink not so black. 225 × 148 mm. Formerly no. 9540 of the Sunderland collection. An illuminated initial in red, green, and gold begins the first sonnet. Old calf binding bearing the arms of Jacques

'V' è una stampa de' Trionfi fatta a Parma nel 1473, con un commento diverso da quello dell' Illicino; con uno strano commento, che parrebbe opera di tre persone: di un espositore, di un glossatore e di un terzo che rivede l'opera dell' uno e dell' altro; . . . il commento s'arresta al principio del Trionfo della Fama, o per esser più esatti, al verso 59 di quel canto [Nel cor pien . . .] con cui il Petrarca l'avea prima cominciato, ma che poi rifiutò, per essere troppo zeppo di nomi, ed ora generalmente si legge nella giunta alle Rime: nè accompagna tutti i canti precedenti; quelli dove non occorran allusioni storiche o mitologiche, sono saltati, dicono i tre, come troppo chiari.' (N. Quarta, 'I commentatori quattrocentisti del Petrarca', 1904, p. 8.) A manuscript copy of this commentary in the National Library in Florence bears the name of Jacopo Poggio as author. Ireneo Affò ('Saggio di memorie su la tipografia parmense del secolo xv', pp. l-lv) describes the edition, accepting the work as Filelfo's. In a letter addressed: Marco Aurelio Franciscus Philelphus S., the writer says he does not know whether the said commentary is good or bad, as he has never seen it—he himself has never even dreamed of writing on the Triumphs (De' Rosmini, 'Vita di Filelfo', 1808, vol. ii, pp. 15, 282-283). Quarta suggests that as the fame of Filelfo's commentary on the Canzoniere made it in great demand before it was published in 1476, Portilia may have thought to profit by giving his name to this commentary on the Triumphs. Few bibliographers have seen the edition of Portilia, some even doubting its existence. A copy was in the collection of De La Vallière (no. 3598 of the Catalogue) and Padre Affò ('Memorie degli scrittori parmigiani', 1791, tom. iii, p. xxi) mentions three copies in Italy—in the possession respectively of Ab. Lodovico Ardemani of Piacenza, Dott. Antonio Bertoli of Parma, and the Biblioteca Corsini in Rome.

Zaroto's press was established in Milan in 1471. This edition, pronounced by Brunet 'beaucoup plus rare que celle de Jenson', corresponds closely with that of 1470, the order of the text being the same. 322 × 210 mm. From the Sunderland collection. The first page is illuminated, red and blue initials are supplied throughout. ff. 11 and 20 are facsimiles executed by Bert from the copy in the British Museum. Old red morocco and gilt.

From the second press of Leonardus Achates of Basel, established in Vicenza in 1474. The edition is a reprint of that of Valdezocco, 1472. It is an imperfect copy of this edition, apparently, which Volpi describes (the third title of his 'Catalogo') as possibly earlier than 1470. See Hortis, no. 6, and Marsand's note in his edition of the Rime, 1819-20, vol. ii, p. 507. Panzer, iii, p. 507, gives the edition as 'con l'esposizioni di Bernardo Glicino', copying the error from the 'Catalogo della libreria Capponi'. Santander ('Dictionnaire bibliographique') following Panzer, substituted the word 'triomphi' for 'canzoniere' in the title, and added the note: 'Première édition avec le commentaire de Bern. Glicino' (Brunet, iv, c. 537-538). Two copies, the first, 266 × 175 mm., has illuminated initials beginning the first sonnet, the canzone Vergine bella, and the first Triumph. Blue initials are supplied throughout. It lacks f. 173, and the blank leaves at the beginning and end. The second copy, 218 × 148 mm., lacks ff. 1-8, 19, 39, 167-176.

ginning: [E]ssendo hora illustrissimo principe,

The table, unlike any other among the editions of the Filelfo-Lapini commentaries, gives the first lines of portions of the text as taken up in the commentary.

'Bernardo Glicini', called Bernardo da Siena, and again Bernardo da Monte Alano da Sena, was Bernardo di Pietro Lapini da Montalcino.
Pietro da Montalcino was lecturer on geometry in the University of Siena, himself a commentator of the sonnets of Petrarch, according to a statement of Bernardo in his commentary on the Trionfo d'Amore. The commentary must have been composed some years before it was printed, since the death of Borso, to whom it is dedicated, occurred in 1471. 'Incredibilmente prolisso' Quarta pronounces Bernardo's work
(p. 7). 'L'autore piglia occasione dai nomi ricordati nel poemetto per ammanire ai suoi let-tori quanto più può di storia orientale, greca e latina . . . Non fu però il primo commento ai Trionfi pubblicato per le stampe . . . due anni prima, nel 73, ne fu pubblicato un altro a Parma, incompiuto e meschinissimo tanto che non fu più ristampato.' (See note under [1473].) An anonymous French translation of Bernardo's commentary exists in at least three manuscript copies in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris
(G. Bertoni, 'Per la fortuna dei Trionfi del Petrarca in Francia', pp. 28–30). One of these manuscripts is described by Marsand ('I mano-scritti italiani della Regia Biblioteca Parigina', pp. 3–4) and again by A. P. Paris ('Les Triumphes de Pétrarque en italien avec le commentaire de Bernard Illicinius traduit en français'). Bernardo prefaces his commentary with a brief biography of the poet.

This edition, formerly ascribed to the press of Azzoguidi, Proctor gives to the first press of Ugo Rugerius, with whom was associated in Bologna, 1474–1476, Dionysius Bertocho. It is described by A. Sorbelli in 'I primordi della stampa in Bologna', 1908, pp. 200–203. 323 × 215 mm. A second copy in the collection lacks the first blank leaf and ff. 241–244, and has crude illuminations on 2^a and 5^a.

Contents:—1^a, Prologue of Nicolaus Thoma-soleus, in praise of the commentary of Francesco Filelfo; 1^b, Registrum, ending with the colophon; 2^a–136^b, Sonetti e canzoni, through the sonnet Fiamma dal ciel, with the commentary of Filelfo.

This work from the same press is a continuation of the preceding edition. Its 'Registrum' gives the first words of every sheet, and of the second leaf of those in the middle of the 18 gatherings, of which the first is in 10, the sixth, twelfth, sixteenth–eighteenth are in 6's, the others in 8's. The sonnets are numbered, for the first time.

Francesco Filelfo (1398–1481) composed his commentary at the request of Duke Filippo
Maria Visconti, whose death occurred August 13th, 1447. At the sonnet A piè de' colli the commentator mentions the death of Leonardo Bruni, which occurred the 9th of March, 1445.
Between these dates the commentary must therefore have been written. It ends with the sonnet Fiamma dal ciel. It was again published in 1478 and 1481, after which the commentary was completed for the Canzoniere by Hieronimo Squarzafico, and was published twenty times during the years 1484–1522, always in connection with Bernardo Lapini's commentary on the Triumphs. With regard to a commentary on the Triumphs attributed to Filelfo by Andrea Portilia, see note under [1473].

Of Filelfo's commentary De' Rosmini says
('Vita di Filelfo', ii, 14–15): 'Molte stravaganti ed assurde spiegazioni vi si leggono ed è scritto in rozzo stile e a buon diritto si meritò l'obli-vione in che ora si giace'. That Filelfo himself did not value it appears from his reply (13 February, 1470) to the request for it by the Bishop of Aleria, that he neither possessed a copy nor knew where one could be found.

The edition is one of those described by Angelo Pezzana in his 'Notizie bibliografiche intorno a due rarissime edizioni del secolo xv'.
 The question of the authorship of the commentary and of the biography, which is printed in each of the two volumes, is discussed by

Giusto Grion in his edition of Antonio da
 Tempo's 'Delle rime volgari', by Giovanni Patroni in Il Propugnatore, 1888, N. S. vol. i, pte II, pp. 57, 226, and again by Quarta ('I commentatori quattrocentisti del Petrarca' p. 49), who presents the following conclusion as to the authorship: 'Questo meschinissimo commento è opera d' uno sconosciuto letterato Veneto, e fu scritto dopo il 1437, verso la metà di quel secolo. Fu pubblicato per la prima volta a Venezia nel 1477 da Domenico Siliprandi, che, per rialzarne il pregio, lo attribuì ad Antonio Da Tempo, trecentista, l'autore della "Summa artis rithimi". . . Non esiste dunque nessun Antonio Da Tempo iuniore, quattrocentista e commentatore del Petrarca'. 200 × 140 mm.

 and that of the Biblioteca Estense at Parma, the Marsand copy having been destroyed with the collection in the Louvre.

In this second edition of the Filelfo-Lapini commentaries, the printers established a form followed in all later editions of separating the portions of text in rectangular spaces, the commentary filling the remainder of the page—described by Dr. Hiram Corson as 'an oasis of text in a desert of commentary'. The chapters of the Triumphs are supplied with titles. 274 × 190 mm. A few colored initials. Marginal manuscript notes. The printer is Filippo di Pietro, according to Hain. The edition is a reprint of Valdezocco's, 1472, abounding in errors. The subscription at the end of the Triumphs, 142^b, reads: FRANCISCI PETRALGAE POETAE EXCELLENTISSIMI TRIUMPHI EXBLICIVNT. The book shows two quires of nine leaves, five unsigned, following a iiii, and four unsigned following r v, which is pasted in. r v may have been printed after the other sheets to supply omitted text—its pages are much shorter than the others. In Earl Spencer's copy as described by Brunet sig. a had eight leaves and r ten leaves. The table in the copy described by Hortis omits a part of E, F, G, H, and a part of L. The Fiske copy has all the lines after A, B. The first and final folios are lacking (the first line and colophon are copied from Hortis). The copy measures 303 × 200 mm. In the wide margins of a iiii², f 6², e iii, f i, k 8, p 5, are drawings in brown crayon by Calisto di Piazza, a pupil of Titian's, who died in 1561. Opposite five of these drawings are inserted autograph memoranda of payments received by Calisto. On 74^a and 145^a is the manuscript note: 'Memorio come el puto de d. chalisto naseta in uenerdi a hore 23 | adi 21 de aprile 1536'. Other notes and much scrawling disfigure the pages. Contents:—[I.] f. 1, blank (wanting). 2^a–3^b, prologue; 4^a–152^b, text and commentary, followed by the letter of Bernardo and the colophon.

[II.] 1, blank; 2^a–30^a, text and commentary of Filelfo through the sonnet Fiamma dal ciel; 30^a (l. 40)–101^b, continuation, by Hieronimo Squarzafico, followed by the register and colophon. 102, blank (wanting).

Petrus de Piasis, de Cremona, 'dicto veronese' is the printer of this first edition of Squarzafico's commentary (Ferrazzi is in error in the statement that Squarzafico's continuation is published in the Reynsburch edition of 1478) completing Filelfo's after the sonnet Fiamma dal ciel, the last sonnet (preceding Vergine bella) being Vago augelletto che cantando vai. 'Questo Lettore carissimo sonetto sopra dichiarato e p tutti li canzonieri posto lultimo si che essendo ad esso puenuti mi ne allegro: et mi ni doglio,' says the commentator. ' . . . mi alegro per esser giunto al fine et per hauere seruito gl'impressori de quali ne sono stato molto p̄gato. Et anchora mi duole per non esser impresso ni correcto come io haria vogliuto egli ogimai facto col tempo piacendo a dio il riconzaremo' . . . (f. 99^b).

'Il commento dello Squarzafico è quanto si può immaginare d' ineguale. Spesso par che voglia gareggiare di brevità con quello del Da Tempo: ma gittando l'occhio a questo . . . si vede ch' egli non ha fatto altro che copiarlo, senza nemmen darsi la briga di ripulirne la dizione; talvolta però correggendolo, o tralasciandone la parte inutile e aggiungendovi in cambio qualche cosa di suo.' (Quarta, p. 14.) 294 × 195 mm. f. 8 of part I is lacking, also the first blank leaf, and the blank leaf at the end of part II.

Contents:—f. 1, blank (wanting); 2^a–4^a, prologue; 4^a–^b, 24 lines of the chapter Nel cor pien damarissima dolcezza, followed by the title; 4^b–125^a, commentary, including the text of this chapter, followed by the colophon; 125^b, register.

The commentary is entirely devoted to the chapter beginning Nel cor pien d' amarissima dolcezza, 'el quale,' says the author, 'in uero ame pare contenga in se tutta lintelligentia detriomphi'. (See Quarta's note under [1473].) The author's introductory statement that the work was undertaken because he found this chapter omitted in the commentary of Bernardo da Montalcino is puzzling, since the chapter appears, with comments, at the beginning of the Triumph of Fame in all editions of Bernardo's work. A 15th-century manuscript of the commentary in the Biblioteca del Seminario di Padua is described in 'Nel VI centenario dalla nascita di Francesco Petrarca la rappresentanza provinciale di Padova' (see Padua—Deputazione Provinciale). 185 × 126 mm. The printers set the fashion of large type for the verse, smaller for the commentary. The sonnets have roman numerals. 290 × 200 mm. Lacks f. 64 [K viii], containing the Babylonian sonnets, and f. 112 [Ox]. This last leaf is supplied in a second copy which, however, lacks [I.] ff. 1, 2, 64, [II.] 1 (blank) and 3, while the illuminated initials are cut out from 2 and 4. Initial D ([II.] 4^a) is in blue, green, and gold, other initials in red and blue. It measures 285 × 193 mm. The engravings mentioned by Marsand must have been inserted in his copy.

Folio numbers appear for the first time, printed in arabic numerals (except 'xi'), with errors here and there. The marginalia, letters of the alphabet printed for reference from a subject index such as later editions show, would indicate that such an index was prepared for this edition.

Rime—Italian Texts.

No bibliographer reports it, and if printed it could not have been uniform with the one appearing in the seven editions which follow, 1490-1497.

This is the first edition with woodcuts illustrating the Triumphs. Of these full-page illustrations in the early folio editions of the Rime there are three sets of designs: 1. The engravings of the present edition (described in R. Fisher, 'Introduction to a catalogue of early Italian prints in the British Museum', 1886, pp. 331-332, in Essling and Müntz, 'Pétrarque', pp. 175-176, in de Rivoli, 'Bibliographie des livres à figures vénitiens', 1892, pp. 35-38) are found also in the edition of the Triumphs by Piero di Quarengi bearing the date 'MCCCCLxxxixii [1492] die xii Ianuarii'; 2. Woodcuts copied from the plates acquired by the British Museum in 1882 (reproduced in G. W. Reid, 'Works of Italian engravers of the 15th century', in the Cambridge U. S. A. edition of Boyd's translation of the Triumphs, 1906, and in Essling and Müntz) are found in the editions of Piero Veronese, 1490, 1491-92, of Scinzenzeler, 1494, 1507, 1512, and in that of Zaroto (much worked over and with different borders), Milano, 1494; 3. Engravings described by Essling and Müntz, pp. 176-177, and de Rivoli, pp. 45-47, are found in the editions of Giovanni Co de Ca (Capcasa), 1492-93, of Bartholomæus de Zanis, 1497, 1500, 1508, of Albertin de Lissona, 1503, and of Antonio de Zani, 1515. The plates in the possession of the British Museum copied in the second set of woodcuts above mentioned were inserted in an imperfect copy of the present edition of 1488, which had also its own woodcuts. The copy was purchased at the Sunderland sale in 1882 at a cost of £2,050, the sum being provided by a special grant of Parliament (Reid, p. iii). Adam Bartsch ('Le peintre graveur', 1811, tom. xiii, p. 293) describes the plates under the name of Nicoletto Rosa, or Rosex da Modena. Ottley ('History of engraving', 1816, vol. i, p. 437) and others believed the plates to be the work of Botticelli. (See Botticelli 'Petrarch' (The) in the Sunderland sale, and [Sunderland sale, Note on].) The woodcut copies introduce with good effect the shading of the plates. The sixth woodcut, Triumph of Divinity, was used by Scinzenzeler as an illustration ('Triumph of the Trinity') in his edition of 'Sermoni di Sancto Bernardo sopra la cātica di Salomone', 1494 (L. S. Olschki, 'Catalogue L', 1900, p. 464).

'Toutes ces figures [1488] sont très inférieures à celles de l'édition de 1492 [Co de Ca] non pas tant par le dessin que par la taille des gravures. On trouve déjà un certain style dans la composition, dans la façon de traiter le nu et de draper les vêtements. On sent qu'une école se forme et que, le jour où les tailleurs seront plus habiles à manier leur couteau, ces bois, qui semblent un peu négligés, deviendront des chefs-d'œuvre. . . . Les figures de l'édition de 1488 . . . sont différentes de toutes les compositions que nous connaissons: elles sont originales, et l'inspiration même en appartient au dessinateur.' (Duc de Rivoli, p. 37.) See also note under 1508, edition of Pacini. 307 x 210 mm. Brown crushed levant, by Zaehnsdorf.

This, the second edition of Piero Veronese (Petrus de Piasii), introduces the name of Hieronymo (Girolamo) Centone, a jurist of Padua, as reviser of the Filelfo-Squarzafico commentary, and presents, Graesse says, 'un bon texte'. It has an alphabetical index of subjects in each part, with references to the folio and marginal letter. These indexes are reprinted with slight variation in all the later folio editions, down to 1515. Concerning the woodcuts, see note under 1488 and 1508 (Paciñi). 300 × 210 mm. Bears the stamp: Soc. Reg. Lond. ex dono Henr. Howard Norfolciensis. A second copy of the Triumphi lacks ff. 1 (blank), 8, and 44, '45', '110', including three woodcuts. f. 128 has lost the colophon.

Contents as in the edition of Piero Veronese, 1490. 'Giovanni Capcasa (Ioanne di co de ca) uses Matheo Capcasa's types, device, and ornaments' (Proctor, 5510, 5511). The mark is a circle with horizontal and vertical diameters and the letters M. C. P., white on black ground. Of the new woodcuts Mr. Pollard says ('Italian book-illustrations', p. 46): 'The illustrations are certainly the most successful of the three series designed for the book. The artist takes his ideas from his predecessor of 1490, but by judicious selection reduces the overcrowded pictures of his model into harmonious arrangement, while his designs were interpreted by a fairly competent engraver'. The border is used again by Matheo Capcasa in his Divina commedia of 1493. Small initials (12 × 12 mm.) are used to commence each paragraph in the beginning, with larger ones (20 × 20 mm.) for the chapters, but the stock is soon exhausted. The folio numbers are roman and very erratic, as in all the early folios. The index, a copy of Piero Veronese's second one with its misplaced sheet, is rendered useless by the fact that the pages run differently in the new impression—though ending with the same number. 300 × 205 mm. Blank leaf at the beginning of the Triumph, and at the end of the Sonetti, lacking. f. lviii, part II, has been supplied from another edition. The woodcuts are colored. Many marginal manuscript notes, in various hands. Brown morocco, old Italian style, by Tout.

Type-page 3^b, 232 × 156 mm. 3 initials, device.
—Roman. Hain-Copinger, 12775. Marsand, p. 19. Hortis, 19.

Contents as in the edition of Piero Veronese, 1490, with an addition (II, 102^a): Presbyter Franciscus Tantius Corniger lectori salutem, followed by the new editor's letter of 46 lines, in which he states that the text is restored to its original soundness, partly through his diligence, but largely by the emendation of cavaliere Messer Gaspar Vesconte, a lover of Petrarch, whose annotated copy he had used. Graesse finds the edition 'plus correcte que la plupart des édd. précédentes'. The printer's device, a cross with two arms aslant rising from within a circle enclosing the initials VS, white on black, follows the register of part [II]. The woodcuts are those of the edition of 1490. The twisted index of 1491 is retained. 279 × 200 mm. f. 42 (part I), with the woodcut representing Chastity, and f. 102 (part II) containing the letter of Corniger, are supplied in facsimile. On ff. q5, q8 of part I, A I and N 5 of part II are drawings in brown crayon by Speluzzi, the last one representing Petrarch in his study. The first leaf (blank) is badly scrawled. Maroon, crushed levant, by Zaehnsdorf.

The woodcuts are after those of 1490, filled in with shading lines, the blur of which is not unlike poor half-tones in the modern process. The borders are new. 291 × 199 mm. Contents as in the edition of 1490, except that the printer has brought into 96 leaves the text and commentary of part II, which end on 97^b. The table for this part, retained from the preceding edition, is therefore rendered worthless. That of part I is again the faulty one of 1491. The woodcuts of Giovanni Capcasa's edition of 1492 are used. Initials, 44 × 50 mm., begin the first Triumph and the first sonnet (the latter by a curious blunder is 'P'), with smaller ones

On the reverse of the title-page, which appears for the second time in this edition, is the preface of the editor, Nicolo Peranzone altramente Riccio Marchesiano dal monte de sancta Maria in Cassano, followed by three poems by him: In laude del Petrarcha & de Laura; In laude dela uirtu; Dialogo dela uirtu. Then follows the table and the prologue of Bernardo Illicini, which is extended by the editor to include the note on Laura and the passage from the Epistolae beginning: Quid ergo ais finxisse, with the verses Valle locus clausa. The editor has substituted for the brief life of Petrarch given by Bernardo in his prologue the so-called Da Tempo life, under the title: La origine de

Misser Francesco petrarcha, at the end of which is introduced a passage on the friendship between Petrarch and Boccaccio, found only in the Peranzone editions of this prologue. The woodcuts and some of the initials of the edition of 1497 are used. New and fuller indexes show improvement in alphabetical arrangement. 280×205 mm. In brown stamped morocco, by Pratt. Another copy in oak boards and stamped calf, worm-eaten, measures 308×215 mm.

Contents:—1^a, title; 1^b, title: SONETTI ET CANZONI DI MESSER FRANCESCO PETRARCHA IN VITA DI MADONNA LAURA; 2^a-99^b, text through the sonnet, Arbor uittoriosa triumphale, followed by the title: SONETTI ET CANZONI DI MESSER FRANCESCO PETRARCHA IN MORTE DI MADONNA LAURA; 100^a-141^b, text through the canzone, Vergine bella; 141^b, title: TRIUMPHI DI MESSER FRANCESCO PETRARCHA; 142^a-179^b, text of the Triumphs, followed by the colophon; 180, blank; 181^a-187^b, index; 188, blank; 189^a-191^b, Aldo a gli lettori, followed by Errori, 191^b-192^a; 192^b, blank.

The first Aldine edition, and the first Italian work printed in the new cursive or chancery type (italic) type (used only once before in the Virgil of the same year) and in the small size so widely adopted in the editions of the 16th century. 'Le nouveau caractère révolutionnaire l'art typographique, puisqu'il fut une des causes principales de la diffusion des petits formats, l'italique s'adaptant mal aux anciens volumes in-folio.' (Fumagalli, p. 500.) The letters were an adaptation from forms already in use in 15th-century official documents. The type-cutter was Francesco da Bologna (see notes under 1503, Soncino edition, and 1516, edition of Francesco da Bologna). Aldus engaged as editor the young scholar Pietro Bembo, then at the beginning of his interest in Italian studies, who had the great fortune to obtain as the basis of the text the autograph of the poet. Such at least is the assertion of the printer—an assertion which did not remain unchallenged. A new standard was set by the edition, nevertheless. Morelli ('Rime di F. Petrarca', Verona, 1799, vol. i, p. xi) expresses the estimate of it held by the older editors: 'Ma qualunque stato sia il codice autografo che servi di norma all' edizioni del 1472 e del 1501; il certo si è che in questa seconda, oltre ad essere state le poesie emendate da moltissimi errori nelle precedenti stampe corsi, vi acquistarono esse piena conformità all'originale, e della propria eleganza adorne comparvero per la prima volta, mercè l'opera da que' due . . . benemeriti uomini, Bembo e Aldo, accuratamente posta; di maniera che va ella guardata come il fondo di ogni altra buona ristampa.' Since the rediscovery in 1886 of the veritable autograph in cod. Vat. 3195, discussion of the first Aldine has been revived (see bibliography in the Library, 1911, 3d ser. vol. ii, pp. 92-100). Mestica, the first editor of the manuscript (1896), says in his preface (p. xi): 'L'Aldina del 1501, con tutti i suoi difetti . . . è fra esse dal testo originale la men lontana; perciò a ragione divenne e restò fondamento (benchè alcuni degli editori che ne approfittarono lo abbiano dissimulato) alle stampe posteriori; a ragione perciò deve chiamarsi la Volgata antica'.

One of the ten or twelve known copies on vellum. Only vellum copies appear to have in the colophon the lines, after Bembo's name, 'nobile Venetiano, & dallui, doue bisogno è stato, riueduto et racconosciuto', which suggests that these copies may have been prepared for the editor as gifts to his friends, especially as Lord Spencer's vellum copy has under the heading Petri B. de simulacro F. P., some manuscript verses in Bembo's autograph. This copy, formerly in the Sunderland collection, is intact, saving that the sonnets Fiamma dal ciel, L'auara Babilonia, and Fontana di dolore, have been erased (though still legible). Another copy on paper is complete, the colophon lacking the words above quoted after Bembo's name.

sm. 8°. ff. [188].

A counterfeit of the first Aldine edition, without the colophon and the four leaves containing 'Aldo a gli lettori' and the 'Errori'. With a few exceptions the corrections indicated in the Aldine are made in this edition, which, on the other hand, has some misprints not found in the Aldine. Two counterfeits of the first Aldine are mentioned by Graesse (tom. iv, p. 224) and Brunet (tom. iv, c. 543-544) as printed in Lyons, 1501-1502. A second copy, from the Syson Park collection, lacks the last blank leaf and has ff. 4 and 5 mended.

Of the other false Aldine edition a copy which formerly belonged to Apostolo Zeno is now in the Biblioteca Marciana at Venice, and another is in the Biblioteca Nazionale of Florence. The title reads: 'Le cose volgari di messer Francesco Petrarca', the reverse of the title-page being blank.

The sonnets and canzoni are numbered. There is no mark of division between the two parts of the Canzoniere.

Soncino's edition was intended to rival that of Aldus. Its types were likewise cut by Francesco da Bologna. On the decree of the Signoria of Venice giving to Aldus the exclusive right to use the cursive letters Francesco had left Venice and united his fortunes with Soncino, who calls him 'vn nobilissimo scultore de littere latine græce et hebraice . . . l'igeno del qle certamēte credo che in tale exercitio nō troue vnaltro equale. Perche non solo le vsitate stampe perfectamente sa fare: ma etiam ha excogitato vna noua forma de littera dicta cursiua, o vero cācellaresca. de la quale non Aldo Romano, ne altri che astutamente hanno tētato de le altrui pēne adornarse, Ma esso M. Francesco è stato primo inuentore & designatore . . .'. The charge against Aldus seems to be unjust, for the first words printed in the cursive types, at the beginning of the Aldine Virgil, named Francesco as their engraver. Soncino is at some pains to justify his retention of the chapters excluded by Aldus from the Triumphs, and claims to have used an autograph manuscript in the preparation of his text, and concludes: 'Per laqual cosa questa nostra editiōe esser perfecta & absoluta'. It is pronounced on the contrary 'Scorrettissima' by Amram of the dedicatory sonnet, and the letter to Caesar Borgia. The first leaf with its title and half-title (on the reverse) is supplied in facsimile, but with PETRARCA for PETRARCHA. f^o. ff. 116, [10], 128. Port. in t.-p., initials, 6 wdcts. Roman. Marsand, pp. 25-26. Hortis, 26.

The composition of this edition is not accurately stated in the long title. Its first part is the Sonetti and canzoni with the usual Filelfo-Squarzafico commentary, to which is subjoined, paragraph by paragraph, the commentary published by Domenico Siliprandi in 1477, ascribed by him to Antonio Da Tempo. The second part is the Trionfi, with Bernardo Illicini's commentary, and the prefatory matter as in the preceding Peranzone edition of 1500. The Da Tempo life of Petrarch from the edition of 1471 is included in each preface. The comment on the sonnet Arbor vittoriosa triunfale ends with the words: E questo e lultimo .S. chel fece in uita de Madonna Laura, marking for the first time in the Squarzafico commentary the division of the Canzoniere at this point. This variation appears in the eight later editions (1507-1522) of the commentary.

A portrait appears for the first time in this edition—a crude woodcut showing a full-length figure crowned with laurel, a book in his right hand. At the left is a laurel bush, in the background a cathedral and campanile with the word FIORENSA above. Marsand, noting this as a portrait of Petrarch in the bibliography published in vol. ii of his edition of the Rime, 1819-20, in his 'Biblioteca petrarchesca' of 1826 calls it St. Albertino. The details, however, indicate the design of the publisher thus to introduce to his patrons the poet himself. The other woodcuts are those of the 1497 edition. Four woodcut initials, 45×41 mm., are on white ground, one, 20×20 mm., on black. 'Cette édition', says Graesse, 'a été faite avec un grand soin et l'emporte beaucoup à toutes les éditions avec commentaire dues à la même époque'. Inscribed is the name: Giuliano Malpeli della repubblica di S. Marino—Roma, 1809.

The Triumph, reprinted from de Zani's edition of 1500, the Sonetti, from Albertino da Lissona's edition of 1503, with (for the first time) a title-page, reading: Sonetti & Canzone de Misser | Francescho Petrarcha. The register and printer's mark follow the table on 116^a. The title-page is in gothic, with a vignette of S. BARTHOLAMEVS (105 × 70 mm.), a full-length figure bearing a knife in the right hand. Woodcut initials beginning the two parts and the different capitoli of the Triumphs are of three sizes. ff. 50–56 of the Sonetti are discolored by smoke. f. 66, containing the Babylonian sonnets, is lacking. Contents:—1^b–37^b, text; 38^a–40^b, Vita di Messer Francesco Petrarcha [by Leonardo Bruni] followed by the colophon and devices.

A reprint, described by Hortis as 'rarissima', of the edition of 1499 by the same printer, of which the only copy known is in the Biblioteca Nazionale Vittorio Emanuele in Rome. A facsimile of the 1499 edition was published by the Unione Cooperativa Editrice, Rome, 1891.

The woodcuts, described by de Rivoli ('Livres à figures vénitiens', pp. 56–58), offer considerable variation from those of the folio editions, though suggested, says Mr. Pollard ('Italian book illustrations', 1894, p. 70), by those of the edition of Venice, 1490. 'The Venetian edition is a pretentious folio in which the commentary overshadows the text. The Florentine is a thin quarto, probably sold for a few pence. But in grace and artistic feeling the Florentine edition is incomparably the finer. This is especially shown in the Triumph of Divinity, in which the woodcutter has unconsciously reproduced much of the charm of the earlier Florentine copperplate, though he does not seem to have known of the existence of this, and worked, as we have said, from the Venetian edition of 1490.'

This edition has two printer's marks, that of 1499, the crowned dolphin between the letters S P with the word PISCIA underneath, and another, slightly smaller, showing a bird, the same letters and the word PISCIA. The present copy lacks the first leaf, containing the title, the woodcut for the Triumph of Love, and 24 lines of text. The title is supplied from Hortis.

four commentators (the others are Stagnino's of 1513, 1519, and 1522), begins with Peranzone's arrangement of the Sonetti (as in 1503), the canzoni Quel c'ha nostra natura and Noua bellezza being added, at the end. The Triumphs follow, with Bernardo's Prologue in its original form (as in 1475–1497). A new set of woodcuts, by the artist known as 'the Master of the Column', show long processions winding down the hillside after the car in the foreground, with the laurel tree much in evidence, all in spirited drawing. In the Triumph of Love, Petrarch sits below, viewing the pageant—the earliest appearance in print of the hooded figure which later becomes so familiar. Fame is printed on the last page of the text of that Triumph, thus changing places with the woodcut for Time. On the recto of the woodcut for Time, f. 66, are 16 lines printed in form of a vase, preceded by the title: De quodam qui propter gloriam incendere voluit templum Dianae. SAL.* (1^b); the Triumph of Fame begins with the rejected chapter Nel cor pien damarissima dolceza, 165^b, the text of the Triumphs ending on 181^b, followed by the colophon; 182^a–184^a, the canzoni Quel cha nostra natura and Noua bellezza; 184^b, blank; 185^a–191^b, table; 192, blank (wanting). The sonnets and canzoni are numbered. The table of first lines refers to the sonnet number instead of the folio.

Of this second Giunta edition Marsand says: '... quanto alla correzione del testo, benchè l'editore, censurando l'Aldina, prometta più cose . . . pur, esaminandosi attentamente, dee giudicarsi all'Aldina inferiore'. This copy bears notes of successive owners, among them, Capel Lofft, the compiler of 'Laura, or An anthology of sonnets'. Written in his hand under the sonnet Io son sì stanco sotto 'l fascio antico, De le mie colpe . . . are the words: 'This sonnet I have just read Sept. 15. 24. Whenever again I turn to this page let me thank Heaven that that evil day is passed, passed, as I trust I may then feel, with all its thoughts and miseries. C. L.' f. 8 is lacking. Brown crushed levant, by Zaehnsdorf.

12°. ff. [8], CLXXV, [1]. Devices, orn. Marsand, p. 30. Hortis, 33.

Contents:—1^a, title; 1^b, Agli lettori; 2^a–8^b, table, followed by 12 lines of verse; 9^a–183^b ('1–CLXXV'), text, ending FINIS. Laus deo: optimo maximoq;, followed by the colophon and register; 184^a, 13 lines of verse followed by the words: 'Deo & candidissime virgini gratie', and device; 184^b, device.

The text includes the disputed compositions Quel ch'a nostra natura, Noua bellezza, here following the canzone Vergine bella, Quanti gia nella eta matura, beginning the Triumph of Death, and Nel cor pien damarissima dolcezza as chapter 1 of Fame. There is no mark of division in the Canzoniere. The sonnets and canzoni are numbered, and, for the first time, have headlines. The device on the recto of the last folio is the familiar double-armed cross and circle with the printer's initials, on black ground; on the verso a more elaborate one shows three hands holding a scroll upon which is an inverted map of the world over the motto 'Così va lo mondo', above it the legend: BIBLIOGRAPHVS. | S'alcū di nostra stampa il modo e forma | Vora sequir per suo pocco sapere | De gli becchi sara fauola e norma. Each page of text is surrounded by a narrow border, of which there are two patterns. The type of this edition is singular, a sort of compromise between the gothic and the roman. Small tortile ornaments fill out the lines to the border, the page to the outer margin measuring 123 × 65 mm. Folio CLVII is bound after CLXVII.

fo. ff. [10], CXXVII, CXVI. Device in t.-pp., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, pp. 30-31. Hortis, 34.

A reprint 'più scorretta', according to Marsand, of the edition of 1507, with the title copied from De Zani's edition of 1508. A second title for the Sonetti reads: Sonetti et Canzōe de Miser Francescho Petrarcha. Both titles are printed in gothic and each is followed by Scinzenzeler's device described above (1507). Unlike the 1507 edition the Triumphi precede the Sonetti and canzoni, beginning on the verso of the title-page, but the old colophon and register for both parts are retained at the end of the Triumphi. The headlines are mostly in gothic, the folio numbers partly in arabic, partly in roman capitals. This copy is from the Sunderland collection. It lacks ff. 55 and 66 of the Sonetti. A second copy lacks ff. XLV, CXXVI-CXXVIII of the Triumphi and I-III, VI-VIII of the Sonetti.

Pet N 513

4^o. ff. 158, [6], 184. 7 wdcts., initials. Marsand, pp. 31-32.

Text and commentary in italic. The Sonetti, reprinted from Gregorio's edition (1508), have a new frontispiece (3^b) showing Petrarch seated at the base of a laurel tree, two volumes at his feet, while Apollo places the laurel crown upon his head. The Triumphi begin with two sonnets by the editor, Pre Marsilio Umbro Forsem-pronese (pseud. of Girolamo Giganti, according to Melzi), who dedicates the edition to Ludovico Barbarigo. The Laura note, and the fragment Quid ergo ais finxisse, with Valle locus clausa, follow the dedication. The woodcuts are those of Gregorio's edition, in finer engraving and with the addition of borders. That of Fame is again misplaced, while Time is lacking altogether, Chastity being repeated on f. 85^b, at the beginning of the Triumph of Fame. Some of the initials are those of Gregorio's edition. Apropos of the second colophon, Graesse says the edition 'a été faite sur un man. auto-graphe de Pétrarque. On estime les leçons comme conformes à celles de la célèbre éd. de 1472'. Red morocco, by Kaufmann.

sm. 8^o. ff. 184, [24]. Device at end. Mar-sand, pp. 32-33. Hortis, 35.

Contents:—1^a, title; 1^b-2^a, Latin preface addressed by Aldus to Desyderius Curtius; 2^b, half-title; 3^a-183^b, text, followed by the colophon; 184, blank; 185^a-191^b, table; 192, blank; 193^a-195^b, Aldo agli lettori; 196^a-207^b, Giunta; 208^a, errori; 208^b, device.

The second Aldine edition, considered by the editors and critics of the early 18th century (Castelvetro, Muzio, etc.) the best that had then been printed. In the new address: A gli lettori, Aldus takes up the matter of the disputed compositions for whose omission in his first edition he had been called to account by Soncino and Soardo. He says that Petrarch undoubtedly wrote many verses which should not appear in a final edition, discussing in particular the chapter Nel cor pien d'amarissima dolcezza, which for the general satisfaction he prints, with seven sonnets of Petrarch, four addressed to Petrarch, and the canzoni Donna mi prega, of Guido Cavalcanti, Così nel mio parlar, of Dante, and La dolce uista of Cino da Pistoia, as an appendix or giunta to the Rime proper. The familiar Aldine device, the anchor and dolphin, appears on the last page. The compositions are not numbered. The division of the Canzoniere in this and the later Aldine editions is made at a new point, the second part beginning with the sonnet Oime il bel uiso, instead of with the canzone I' vo pensando, as heretofore.

Pet-N 515

sm. 8^o. ff. 193, [7]. 6 wdcts., border, tail-piece. Marsand, pp. 33-34. Hortis, 36.

This edition includes the giunta of the second Aldine with the addition of the canzone Nuova bellezza, and without the chapter Nel cor pien, which here retains its old place as chapter I of the Triumph of Fame. In a new preface, lauding the edition, Francesco Alpherio pays a tribute to Aldus, who had just died. Catchwords are introduced at the end, and the running title: Petrar., at the bottom of the page beginning each sheet. The six woodcuts are after those of the quarto editions of Gregorio and Stagnino, with a part of the drawing left out to reduce the size, which is 127 × 77 mm. in this edition. In place of the usual one for the Triumph of Time is the engraving of Apollo crowning the poet, which in Stagnino's editions faces the first sonnet. An architectural border surrounds the title, which, in this otherwise perfect copy is supplied in facsimile. P. Kristeller ('Early Florentine woodcuts', 1897, p. 128) cites this edition as having the illustrations of the edition of 1499, P. Pacini. This is an error, as a comparison with the reprint of the 1499 edition in 1508, or with the facsimile of 1891, makes clear. Broad margins. Bound in modern Florentine painted morocco. A second copy, with ordinary margins, lacks the title-page.

Contents:—1^a, title; 1^b, Franciscus Bononiensis Lectoris S.; 2^{a-7^b}, table; 8, blank; 9^a, title repeated; 9^b, blank; 11^{a-b}, Thomassclarcinus Gammarus Lectori Cādiddissimo; 111^{a-CLII^b}, text, followed by the note: 'El correttore non si estende oltra li Triōphi: parēdo in linfra scritte iuctiōe esser atribuito alo poeta alcuni scritti ch' nō tēgono il suo legiadro stile', introducing the giunta of Philippo di Giunta's edition of 1515, CLII^b-CLX^a, at the end of which are the words: FINIS. PETRARCHA, followed by the colophon.

Francesco da Bologna, whose identity with the painter Francesco Raibolini, known as Il Francia, was maintained by Panizzi ('Chi era Francesco da Bologna?') and A. Gualandi ('Note intorno F. Raibolini'), is shown by documents published by Adamo Rossi in Atti e memorie della R. Deputazione di storia patria per la prov. di Romagna, 1883, 3^a ser. tom. i, p. 412, to have been really Francesco Griffi or Griffo. His connection with the presses of Aldus, 1501, and of Soncino, 1503, has been noted. He worked also for Bernardino Stagnino and others, and set up a press of his own in Bologna from which five books were printed in 1516 and one in 1517, all in the size and type of the Petrarch. (Fumagalli, p. 42.) That he had cherished a growing grievance against Aldus for the glory and gain acquired by the introduction of the new type-forms which he had designed appears in his prefatory letter. He scores the recent Aldine edition (1514) so greatly esteemed by later editors, and claims the superiority of his own, having engaged as editor Tommaso Sclarcino Gammara, a Bolognese poet and littérateur—seeking thus to vindicate himself to posterity. The edition is extremely rare. Brown morocco, by Pratt.

A reprint of the Giunta edition of 1515 (including the preface) with a new title, and new woodcuts. The title-page border is an elaborate framework; the designs for the Triumphs (122 × 80 mm.) are new, the engraving crude, each bearing the initials z. a., believed to be Zoan Andrea (Duc de Rivoli, 'Livres à figures vénitiens', p. 51); the device at the end is a figure, 'S. This fourth and last edition from the Giunta press in Florence has two letters of Bernardo di Giunta, the dedication to Don Michele da Silve, and the letter: A lectori. In the latter are discussed his disposition of the disputed passages of the Triumphs of Death and of Fame, and the new verses introduced, the ballata Donna mi viene spesso, in the Canzoniere (not included in editions after 1470), and four sonnets in the giunta. The giunta is arranged in two parts—the second, after the colophon and device, appearing almost as a separate issue. The four sonnets are: Ser Dio ti salui di Pietro da Siena à. M. F. P., Giacopo de Garatori da Imola à. M. F. P., and Petrarch's Se Phebo al primo amor and Quella ghirlanda chella bella fronte. The designations 'Ballata', 'Madrigale', for the shorter compositions are used for the first time. Marsand says of the edition: 'Questa . . . è veramente superiore nel merito reale ed intrinseco della lezione e della correzione del testo'. The woodcuts are those of the edition of 1515. The final blank leaf is lacking.

Contents are as in the last Giunta edition, 1522, without the letters of Bernardo Giunta. The imprint belongs to a dozen works printed, it would appear, by Paganino Paganini and Alessandro his son, who had a press in Toscolano from 1519 to 1538. Lechi ('Tipografia Bresciana'), according to Fumagalli, reads the inscription as follows: 'Paganinus et Alexander Paganini Benacenses fecerunt. Benacus vivat'. Marsand regards the edition as a copy of the second Aldine, instead of the Giunta, as noted. This copy has f. 193 bound between 195 and 196. It is bound in the Grolier style, with the legend: A.G. | ET | :A:, on the cover. A second copy lacks ff. 9, 16, and 179–196.

A reprint of the third Aldine, with the dedication: Alo eccellente messer Marco antonio da Bologna giouani lāzo Gabbiano. This edition, cited by Volpi in the Comino editions of the Rime, had not been seen by him. Marsand ('Rime del Petrarca', 1819–20, vol. ii, p. 351) mentions a copy cited in the Catalogue of the MacCarthy-Reagh collection which was printed on vellum, its first folio lacking. Count Giacomo Manzoni, from whom the present copy was purchased, believed it unique. The copy is perfect, in a handsome binding of the 17th century.

sm. 8°. Sig. A–F⁸. Unnumbered ff. 48. Border in t.-p., 6 wdcts., device at end. Marsand, pp. 38–39.

Evidently a reprint or reissue of an edition of March, 1521, a copy of which is in the British Museum (see its Catalogue under PETRARCA, CANZONIERE.—TRIONFI, 1500). The text is in roman, with marginal subject index in gothic. The life of the poet is Leonardo Bruni's. The engravings are Z[oa]n A[ndrea's]. Hortis (no. 23) quotes a manuscript note of Dom. de' Rossetti regarding the date of this edition as follows: "'M. Dxxiiii de Luio", ce qui veut dire: ANNO M.D., DIE XXIIII', citing Brunet's description of the two Zopino editions of the year 1500 (as he judges), the other being the Triomphi of 'M. D. xxi. de Marzo'. This interpretation seems not to be supported. Fumagalli (pp. 486–488) gives 1508–1544 as the term of Zopino's Venetian press. See also Publicationen die Stadtbibliothek zu Triest betreffend. As to the reading of the dates in the forms cited, there is in the Fiske collection a copy of the Secreta with the colophon: 'Im-presso in Venetia per Nicolo Zopino & Vicentio compagno . . . Nel anno . . . M.D. xx adi .ix. de Marzo', indicating 1521, 1524, as the true reading for the editions of the Triomphi. The title-page with engraved border also points to a date later than 1500. This border of the 1524 (not that of Zopino's 1521 and 1526 Rime) is a rough woodcut copy of the border of the third and fourth Giunta editions (1515, 1522).

The first edition of Vellutello's commentary. Text and commentary in italic. The Canzoniere is divided into three parts, part II beginning with the sonnet Oime il bel uiso, as in the second Aldine and its copies. To the third part, verses on various themes, Vellutello brings a larger number of compositions than Marsand in his 'Sopra vari argomenti'. This plan of separating the verse which does not relate to Laura, Mestica pronounces an offence to both art and fact, 'spezzando la complessa unità di quel portentoso ingegno, che celebrava simultaneamente i suoi amori per la donna, per la patria, per la gloria, per la virtù, per la religione' ('Rime di F. Petrarca', 1896, p. vi). Vellutello's apology for his arrangement: Trattato de l'ordine de son. et canz., is found only in this edition and in the reprint of 1528. The disputed passages of the Triumphs are not retained in the text, and of the usual giunta only the four sonnets of Stra-mazzo, Geri Figliuzzi, Jacopo Colonna, and Giovanni di Dondi are found in the original Vellutello editions. ' . . . il Vellutello fu il primo che così in quanto all' istoria, come in quanto alla dichiarazione fosse il primo, che cauasse il Petrarca delle tenebre & che aprisse la uia a tutti gli altri che dappoi han seguito . . . A reprint of the edition of 1525, without the dedication. Marsand's account ('Rime del Petrarca', 1819-20, vol. ii, pp. 353-354) of two Vellutello editions of 1528, one in 4°, the other in 8°, is explained in his 'Biblioteca petrarchesca', of 1826, in the record of two copies of the same edition, one having wide margins. Hortis, not noting the correction, repeats the statement of two editions. Three copies, one perfect, one lacking the title-folio and f. 165, the third lacking ff. 1-12.

This is the only edition of Fausto's commentary. The interpretations Marsand characterizes as 'bizzarre e stravaganti', but he pronounces the text superior to any other published in the 16th century. See note under the Gesualdo edition of 1533. Two copies, one from the Sunderland collection, bound in old vellum; the other, with manuscript correction of folio numbers 287-302, in green crushed levant, by Chatelaine.

The fourth Aldine edition. The dedication of Paulo Manutio to Giovanni Bonifacio, marchese d'Oria, precedes the text. After the table is the address: A candidi lettori, discussing orthography and syntax, followed by 'la promessa ispositione' of the text—'annotazioni già promesse da Aldo, padre di Paolo', says Fontanini (1753, vol. ii, p. 23). This exposition fills 28 pages. It is found in the Ravano edition, 1535, the Nicolini, 1539, the Bindoni editions, 1541, 1543. It is introduced, beginning with sonnet xl., to complete Sansovino's 'Annotationi' in Ravano's edition of 1546, under the title 'Vecchie annot.', and in 1562 appears in Comin da Trino's edition, where it is referred to as 'Vn ragionamento d' incerto Autore'. The only edition of Venaphro's commentary. Preceding the text are the dedication to Philipppo della Noi, principe di Solmone, the Privilege, the letter Ai lettori, Vita et costumi del poeta, and Di .M. Laura. There is no division of the Canzoniere. The giunta, consisting of the canzoni Quel c'ha nostra natura, Nova bellezza, the seven sonnets of Petrarch and the four sonnets addressed to Petrarch, follows the Triumphs. The life of the poet is an abridged translation, with slight additions, of his Epistola ad posteror. Of the commentary Carducci says it offers 'disquisizioni su'l tempo in che alcune poesie furono composte e qualche saggio d' interpretazione acuto e nuovo fra molti stranisimi'. ('Rime di F. Petrarca', 1899, p. xxvi.) The text Marsand finds comparatively free from errors. There are many errors in the folio numeration.

1533. Il Petrarca colla spositione di Misser Giovanni Andrea Gesualdo. [Privilege.] M D XXXIII. At end: Stampato in Vinegia per Giouann' Antonio di Nicolini & fratelli da Sabbio, Nel anno di Nostro Signore M D XXXIII del mese di Luglio.

4^o in 8's. ff. [24], CCCLXXXIII, [80]. Marsand, pp. 44-45. Hortis, 56. Ferrazzi, 135.

Gesualdo's commentary, of which this is the first edition, is described by Antonio Minturno as 'parto d' elefante', an epithet justified by the extent of the work. The introduction, with dedication to the marchesana de la Palude, includes a life of Petrarch filling 35 pages, with a six-page list of the passages from the poet's writings upon which the biography is based. Part II of the Canzoniere, beginning with the sonnet Oime il bel uiso, has its own title, and a second dedicatory letter. The giunta, consisting of five sonnets to Petrarch, follows the table of the Sonetti. The Triumphs, with a separate title-page, begin with a brief dedication to the contessa di Colisano, followed by further prefatory matter. The chapter Nel cor pien d' amarissima dolcezza is omitted. On f. 2^b is printed a letter from Giovambattista Bacchini of Modena to Minturno, dated Bologna, 15th of July, 1532, in which the writer says the work was sent to press more than two years before, 'ma quando l' Autore istesso & io sperauamo di uederla stampata; ecco intendiamo per colpa di colui, à cui fu l' opera commessa, non esser anchora cominciata à stamparsi: & in uece di lei ueggiamo impressa la spositione di non so chi Fausto da Longiano'. Of Fausto's work he says, 'Ella é breuissima, poco o nulla espone del testo', going on to cite errors from it, and concluding with a charge of plagiarism: 'E giurerei che 'l Fausto o per se stesso, o per alcuno de gli amici suoi habbia letto la spositione del Gesualdo, Percioche alcune cose hauea costui trouato le quali ha poi notato colui'. Baldelli ('Del Petrarca', p. xxiii) cites Gesualdo,

The text follows the dedication: A la magnifica madonna Laura Badoara, Francesco Marcolino. The Canzoniere is divided before the sonnet Oime il bel uiso. There is no giunta. This is the first edition with numbered pages. The lines are numbered, in fives. The wood-engraved title-page shows a portrait of Petrarch, a smaller copy, reversed, of the one used by Giolito in his edition of Vellutello's commentary, 1538.

dedication of Daniello to Andrea Cornelio, vescovo di Brescia, and the table. The Canzoniere is divided before the sonnet Oime il bel viso. Five sonnets addressed to Petrarch are added. The Triumphs are prefaced by a letter of Daniello to Benedetto Varchi. At the end is the Capitolo di M. F. P.: Nel cor pien d'amarissima dolcezza, followed by a brief list of errata, the register, and colophon.

In his dedication Daniello acknowledges his debt to Trifon Gabrielle, disclosing the fact that the commentary was regarded by the public, quite unjustly, he avers, as the work of Gabrielle. Ménage and other critics have attributed the commentary to Gabrielle, who is described by Alessandro Zilioli in his 'Storia inedita de' poeti italiani' as the Socrates of his time, attracting to his villa at Murano choice spirits of the city, to whom he discoursed upon philosophy and the poets, being, as Daniello says, 'intenditissimo del Petrarca'. 'E dal conversare con lui', Zilioli continues, 'Bernardino Daniello attinse il buono e il meglio di ciò che pubblicò nel commento al Petrarca.' (G. Crespan, 'Petrarca e Venezia', p. 203.) The text Marsand finds 'sano e di ottima lezione ne' passi più importanti'. Two copies, one of which has a book-plate—a crown and shield, with 'Ex libris N. B. P. V.'

f. 196^b has another colophon: Stampato In Venetia per Bernardino bindoni Lanno M.D.XLII. del mese di Marzo. The portrait is the one used by Giolito in Franco's 'Il Petrarchista', 1539-1543, and later in editions of the Rime. It is in profile, left, with laurel crown but no cowl, the shoulders draped as in classical subjects. The face is that of Giolito's Vellutello edition of 1538, where, in full ecclesiastical dress, it is easily traceable to the Laurentian miniature. The text, with giunta as in the Aldine editions, is preceded by the letter, dated August 25, 1545, of Jean de Tournes to Maurice de Seve on the discovery of the tomb of Laura, with the sonnet Qui riposan quei caste & felice ossa, and the epitaph on Laura composed by Francis I., here first published. This letter is the first published account of the reputed discovery, made in 1533. (See De Sade's 'Mémoires', tom. i, note IV.) At the end of the giunta is a sonnet addressed by Pietro Corvesio to Carlo de la Porta. The portrait is a medallion of the Laurentian type, not appearing in any other edition. 'Quanto alla lezione del testo e alla correzione tipografica non può averne lode il Tournes.' (Marsand, p. 61.)

plemented from that point by those of the Aldine exposition 'A candidi lettori', first published in the edition of 1533, and introduced here with the title: Vecchie annot. This fact seems to have escaped the notice of bibliographers. One editor, Carl Friedrich Hermann ('Petrarca's italienische Gedichte', 1796, p. xii), names Sansovino first in a list of six best commentators of Petrarch. The edition is dedicated to Antonio Altoviti. The woodcuts are Zoppino's.

The fifth and last Aldine edition. It is without preface or exposition. It has the usual (Aldine) giunta. Of it Ruscelli ('Tre discorsi a M. The preference of later editors for the 1514 Aldine has already been noted. Brown crushed levant with the Aldine anchor and dolphin stamped in gold on the front cover, by Capé.

Text and giunta in the Aldine order. Dolce was for some time editorial supervisor of Giolito's publications, living under his roof (Bongi, 'Annali di Gabriel Giolito', vol. i, p. xxvii). Of his revision of Petrarch's Rime no less than fourteen editions (all but two of which are in the Fiske collection) were published during the period of the Vellutello series, 1547-1560. Eleven are in 12°, three in 8°. In the brief preface Giolito says of the Petrarca 'eccoui o Lettori, che hora io ue le porgo non pure emendatissime, ma in cosi picciola forma stampate, che ciascuno le potrà hauer seco in tutti i tempi e luochi senza incomodo o fatica alcuna'. Cittadini's judgment ('Opere', p. 160), 'che è senza fallo il migliore che io abbia mai veduto, eziando non ne traendo fuora quel d'Aldo del 1507 [1501?] e del 1514', is not sustained by those who quote him, though Marsand finds the edition 'accurata'. The illustrations are abundant and characteristically delicate. The portrait in the 12° editions is

A reprint of the Lyons edition of 1545, with the addition of woodcuts, new portraits in the title-page and, on its reverse, Sonetto sopra le sacre ceneri, and an anonymous Vita di M. F. Petrarca. The sonnet of Pietro Corvesio is not included. The portraits of Petrarch and Laura, in a heart-shaped vignette, with Cupid above, are after the Laurentian miniatures. A vignette following the title of the Trionfi shows Fame holding a palm and a crown of laurel, mounted on a column which is borne by a car. In the engravings which follow no car shows, the triumphal figures appearing upon the clouds and (in Divinity) the sun. 'Charmanes gravures, dans lesquelles le petit Bernard [Bernard Salomon called Bernardo Gallo] a révélé toute la finesse et tout l'esprit de son burin.' (Essling & Müntz, p. 250.)

sm. 16°. ff. [22], 140, [52]. Device in t.-p. Marsand, p. 56. Hortis, 80.

The text, in the Vellutello order, is preceded by the Vellutello lives of Petrarch and Laura, and followed by the preface: Aldo a gli lettori, of the edition of 1514, with a giunta which has, in addition to that of the Aldine editions, the sonnets of Stramazzo, Giacopo di Garatori and Pietro da Siena, Petrarch's Nova bellezza and Se Phebo al primo amor and the Sonetto sopra le sacre ceneri. The device bears the motto 'O infelice miseria de mortali Che puon qui sue speranze in cose tali'. f. 52 is supplied in manuscript. Several leaves at the end are misplaced in binding.

The text, in the Aldine arrangement, is preceded by the editor's dedication to Lucretia da Este, and an index of words explained in the annotations, filling 12 pages. The annotations follow the compositions. The giunta is that of the Aldine editions, without the four sonnets addressed to Petrarch. Marsand values the edition 'per la grande diligenza e dello stampatore e dell' editore'. 'Il Brucioli e il Da Castiglione ... hanno anche, come fiorentini, il pregio di rilevare e dichiarare con acconcia eleganza certe proprietà di lingua.' (Carducci, 'Rime di F. The dedication by the editor, Apollonio Campano, to Giovanvincenzo Belprato, conte d'Aversa, is followed by five pages of annotations, after which is the table and a part of the Aldine giunta—the capitolo, canzone, and seven sonnets of Petrarch. The text, which is in the Aldine order, begins on p. 7. At the end are five sonnets addressed to Petrarch. Marsand finds the text 'arbitrariamente o malamente mutato', though the edition had been pronounced by Apostolo Zeno (Fontanini, 1804, vol. ii, p. 31) 'correttissima . . . principalmente per le annotazioni del Campano, che vi emendò il testo d'Aldo del 1501'.

1549. Sonetti canzoni e trionphi di M. Francesco Petrarca, con la spositione di Bernardino Daniello da Lucca. Con priuilegio Del Illustrissimo Senato Vinitiano. 4°. ff. [2], 237, [3]. Portrs. in wdct. t.-p., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, pp. 57–58. Hortis, 84.

The second edition of the Daniello commentary has an engraved title-page modelled upon Giolito's, containing portraits of Petrarch and Laura copied from Giolito's urn. The woodcuts illustrating the Triumphs (105 × 84 mm.) are elaborate in design, showing the figures in extended landscapes. The brief preface by Giovanbattista Pederzano is followed by a life of the poet and an exposition of certain passages of the text not found in the first edition—the comment on the first sonnet, for example, is doubled in length. At the end are six sonnets and the canzone Quel c'ha nostra natura of Petrarch, not found in the first edition. As in the Giolito quartos the text is in italic, the commentary in roman.

The Osseruazioni [II], which in this copy are bound before the text, have the engraved title-page with portrait of Alunno of the edition of 1539, and a second title-page which reads: Le osseruazioni di m. Francesco Alunno da Ferrara sopra il Petrarca. Nouamente ristampate, & con diligenza ricorrette & molto ampliate dall' istesso autore . . . The work is thus expanded to three times the size of the original. Prefatory matter consists of the Privilege, Alunno's dedication to Ronchegallo (changed from that of the first edition), 'A Messer Francesco Lunno Fran-

The first edition from the Roville press, dedicated by the printer to Lucantonio Ridolfi. The Vita et costumi del poeta, followed by vignette portraits and Epitafio del Petrarca et di Madonna Laura, precedes the text. The Aldine giunta, with the addition of Stramazzo's sonnet, follows the Trionfi. Brucioli's annotations, as in the edition of 1548, accompany the text, with additional notes in the Triumphs, probably by Ridolfi. Brucioli's Tauola also is found at the end. The Vita e costumi del poeta is Vellutello's, with the substitution at the beginning of a paragraph from Gesualdo's Life of Petrarch, reading 'L'origine del Poeta se riguardiamo alla patria . . .'—the form in which it is printed in later editions not containing the commentary of Vellutello. The woodcuts (oval, 52 × 42 mm.) are of new design and finely engraved. The portraits are of the Laurentian type. Three copies, of which one has the Roville edition of Ridolfi's 'Rimario' bound between the text and tables. A copy with no other difference than the date 1551 exists in the Hofbibliothek at Munich, to which Melzi refers (vol. ii, p. 333).

A close imitation of the Giolito-Dolce editions of 1547, etc., with the same preface and very similar woodcuts—the device being nearly a counterfeit. Dr. A. J. Butler in his paper on the Gioliti (Transactions of the Bibliographical Society, x, 98) citing Giglio's edition of 'Il Cortegiano', 1552, says: 'The curious thing is that Giglio's device is obviously modelled upon Giolito's. There is the globe in the form which Giolito had now adopted, with the satyrs' masks affixed to either side. . . . There is as yet nothing to correspond with Giolito's phoenix'. But here, in Giglio's first Petrarca, the device described by Butler is surmounted by the bird pecking its breast and the scroll, bearing the motto, 'Conservando lor vita io sempre vivo', in place of Giolito's 'De la mia morte eterna vita i' vivo'. Marsand finds this edition both as to editing and typography 'fatta molto accuratamente'. ff. 127–129, 137–138, and the last blank leaf are lacking in this copy, which is made up of two imperfect copies.

1551. Il Petrarca con nuoue, e breui dichiarazioni. Insieme vna tauola di tutte le sue rime, ridotte co i versi interi sotto le cinque lettere vocali. Lyone, G. Rouillio, 1551. Pet—N 551a

The Tauola di tutte le sue rime [by Ridolfi] has its own title-page, imprint, and pagination. The edition differs from that of 1550 only in the dedication to Giovanni Mannelli, and in the addition of the Privilege. The Rimario is prefaced by a letter and sonnet addressed by Ridolfi to Piero Niccolini, dated 1537. A second copy is in two volumes.

Following the Triumphs is the sonnet Qui riposan quei casti & felici ossa with the title: Sonetto di M. Francesco Petrarca ritrouato nella sepoltura di M. Laura. The Sonetto sopra le sacre ceneri, and the Rime aggiunte—consisting of seven sonnets to Petrarch, the usual canzone, ballata, and nine sonnets of Petrarch—with the table, conclude the volume. The woodcuts are those of the preceding edition, except the device, which has lost Giolito's phoenix and scroll.

A reprint of the Giolito-Vellutello edition of 1547. Two copies, one having on the first fly-leaf in 18th-century manuscript two sonnets with the superscriptions: Vn zoccolante manda ad Alessandro Tassoni di Modena chi haueua scritto contro le Rime del Petrarca il seguente sonetto, and Risposta del Tassoni. On the reverse of the title-page is another sonnet: Alessandro Tassoni col zio ch'era canonico e segretario del vescouo così parla, and on the two fly-leaves at the end of the volume is written a poem of 96 verses relating to Petrarch and Vellutello's commentary. It begins: Saggio lettor che i' uolgere Nobil desio t' accese. Appended is the note: 'Il Natali fu un improvisatore peritissimo e di gran valore. Si fermò in Vercelli due mesi nell' anno 1784 . . .' On the title-page is the autograph of a former owner: Gio. Giose Lorda di Vercelli 1758.

With the woodcut title-page and the woodcuts of the Nicolini-Daniello edition of 1549, Giglio issued in the present one a Petrarca rivalling Giolito's Gesualdo of the same year. The title-page is repeated for the Trionfi. A letter from the printer to Bernardo Priuli precedes the Gesualdo introduction. Gesualdo's dedication, the index to the commentary, and the giunta are not found in this edition. Three copies, the third without the Trionfi.

A new preface by Giolito, the Vellutello biography as printed by Roville, 1550, and the Sonetto sopra le sacre ceneri, precede the text. The Trionfi have a separate title-page with device and imprint and the title of each Triumph is extended, as, 'Trionfo del Tempo: nel quale il Petrarca dimostra il Tempo trionfar nel fine di tutte le cose humane', etc. The Auertimenti of Camillo, etc., mentioned in the title and also in the preface, do not appear until the following year. Bongi ('Annali di Gabriel Giolito', vol. i, p. 408) supposes the edition of 1554 already printed, and that Giolito in pronouncing the present one 'tanto piu corretto del primo e del secondo' considers as two editions those of 1547, 1548, 1550, and 1551.

Annotationi di M. Giulio Camillo, tables, etc., fill the 92 unnumbered leaves at the end, having a separate title-page with Privilege, device, and imprint, and at the end the register for the whole work, with colophon and device. Three different printer's marks are used, one of them on each of the three title-pages. The woodcuts for the Triumphs, and the vignette with portraits of Petrarch and Laura, are those of the Giolito-Vellutello series. The preliminary matter includes an epigram by Camillo: Super tumulo Laurae, dedication by Dolce to Zaccaria Delfino, bishop of Lessina, the Vellutello lives of Pe-

After his dedication to Francesco Melchiori dated 21st of October, 1554, is a long introduction by the editor on the orthography of the early writers in Italian. At the beginning he says, 'Dell' ordinare, & ricorreggere queste rime del Petrar. seguiremo inquitto alle parole il testo d'Aldo, il qual ueramente è il più sincero di tutti gli altri'. He expresses doubt, however, of the autograph source of the Aldine, and adopts the Vellutello arrangement in the Canzoniere. The Vellutello life of Petrarch as in the Giolito-Dolce editions, the Testament, in Italian, and the Vellutello life of Laura follow the text. The Rimario, vocabulary, etc., fill 285 pages at the end. The preface to the vocabulary printed on the last leaf of sig. +++++ is repeated in slightly different typography on the following leaf, sig. a [i]. The last blank leaf is wanting. The first edition from this press. Contents as in the Giolito edition of 1544, after a preface by Girolamo Ruscelli, dated 8th of March, 1554. The map of Vacluse measures 183 × 145 mm. The illustrations of the Triumphs are those of the Niccolini-Daniello edition of 1549. Text in italic, commentary in roman.

1554. I sonetti e le canzoni et i triumphi di messer Francesco Petrarca . . . alla 'mendatione di J. Giovanni Andrea Gesualdo corretti. See COMPLETE WORKS.

1557. Il Petrarca nouissimamente reuisto e corretto: et alla sua integrità ridotto. Vinegia, L. Auanzo, e fratelli, 1557. Pet—N 557

sm. 12°. ff. 155, [7]. Vign. in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 69. Hortis, 101.

Text and giunta as in the Aldine editions. The portraits, in a new vignette of the same type as Giolito's, are not so good. The woodcuts measure 52 × 38 mm. A second copy lacks f. 141 and a part of 51.

1557. Il Petrarca. Sonetti, canzoni, et trionfi di M. Francesco Petrarca di nuouo corretto et ristampato. Venetia, F. Rampazetto, M D LVII. Pet—N 557c

sm. 8°. ff. [8], 280, [8]. Vign. in t.-p., initial. Marsand, p. 70. Hortis, 103.

A reprint of Brucioli's edition of 1548. The dedication, which is obviously written by the commentator, Antonio Brucioli, has in this edition the signature: P. S. Brucioli's name does not appear in the book.

1557. Il Petrarca. Nuouamente reuisto, e ricorretto da M. Lodouico Dolce. Con la vita del Petrarca. Vinegia, G. Giolito de' Ferrari, M D LVII.

Pet—N 557a

sm. 12°. pp. 396. Device in t.-p., port., wdcts., initials. Hortis, 104.

Differs from the Giolito-Dolce edition of 1553 only in the title and the substitution of a woodcut and epigram for the Sonetto sopra le sacre ceneri. Lacks pp. 291-292 and 309-310.

1557. Il Petrarca. Nuouamente reuisto, e ricorretto da M. Lodouico Dolce. Con alcuni dottissimi auertimenti di M. Giulio Camillo, & indici di esso Dolce utilissimi di tutti i concetti, & delle parole, che nel Poeta si trouano. E di piu con una breue, e particolare spositione di tutte le Rime di esso Poeta. Con Priuilegio. Vinegia, G. Giolito de' Ferrari, M D LVII. Pet—N 557b sm. 12°. pp. 20, [4], 21-288, ff. 132. Device in t.-pp., port., wdcts., initials. Marsand, pp. 69-70. Hortis, 102.

There seem to have been four issues of the

Rime—Italian Texts.

Dolce edition from the Giolito press during 1557, three with the Annotazioni di Camillo and one without. Of the former, Bonghi ('Annali di Gabriel Giolito', vol. ii, pp. 45-47) describes one dedicated to Antonio Zantani, and one of 396 pages, without a dedication. The present one is dedicated to Gio. Bonifacio, marchese di Oria. Its prefatory matter includes the Vellutello lives of Petrarch and Laura, the Privilegio della incoronazione del Petrarca, and the Testamento di M. Francesco Petrarca, tradotto per quelli che non sanno lettere. The new Spositione is printed in brief paragraphs preceding the compositions. The illustrations are those of 1553. Of the Annotazioni, issued as before in a separate part, there are three copies, one bound with the above text, lacking ff. 126 and 127, one printed on vellum, bound separately, by Pratt, as a companion to the vellum copy of the 1558 text, and one on paper, bound with an edition of 1560.

1558. Same. Vinegia, G. Giolito de' Ferrari, MDLVIII. Pet—G 558

sm. 12°. pp. 20, [4], 21-288, ff. 232. Device in t.-p., port., wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 71.

A reissue of the preceding, printed on vellum. The date MDLVIII is found only on the first title-page, the Trionfi and the Annotazioni having MDLVII. Formerly no. 9569 of the Sunderland collection. Bound in two volumes.

1558. Il Petrarca con dichiarazioni non più stampate, Insieme alcune belle annotazioni, tratte dalle dottissime Prose di Monsignor Bembo, cose sommamente vtili, à chi di rimare leggiadramente, & senza volere i segni del Petrarca passare, si prende cura. E più vna conserua di tutte le sue rime ridotte sotto le cinque lettere vocali. Lyone, G. Rouillio, 1558.

Pet—N 558b

16° in 8's. f. [1], pp. 5-577, [48]. Device in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, pp. 70-71. Hortis, 105.

The prefatory matter includes the dedication of Roville to Madamigella di Gagio, a brief life of Petrarch (ascribed by Solerti to L. A. Ridolfi), Varchi's Sonetto al sepolcro del Petrarca, the epitaph of Francis I., the epigrams of Giulio Camillo and Luigi Alamanni, the sonnet Qui riposan quei caste & felici ossa, and the Privilege. The text is followed by the giunta of the first Roville edition, 1550, a table of rhymes and the table of first lines. The annotations follow each composition. The portraits, in a vignette, are minute, the Petrarch after that of Bindoni's 1541 edition. The woodcuts are of new design, measuring 50 × 42 mm. Marsand is in error in the statement that the present edition is a copy of Roville's of 1551. Bembo's annotations are introduced, the table of rhymes is given without the lines in which they occur, and the illustrations are new. A second copy is red-lined throughout.

1558. Il Petrarca con l'espositione d'Alessandro Vellutello. Di nouo ristampato con le figure a i Trionfi, con le apostille, e con piu cose vtili aggiunte. Vinegia, G. Giolito de' Ferrari, MDLVIII.

Pet + N 558d

4° in 8's. ff. [12], 216. Device in t.-p., portrs., wdcts., initials. Marsand, pp. 71-72. Hortis, 106.

The seventh Giolito-Vellutello edition (counting from that of 1538 'ad instantia di M. Alessandro Vellutello e di M. Giouanni Giolito'—the sixth from Gabriel's press) has a new preface by Gabriel Giolito, and includes the coronation Privilege and the Testament of Petrarch, in Italian. Giolito claims that the present edition is 'molto piu corretto e purgato' than any of the preceding.

1558. Il Petrarca di nuouo ristampato, e diligentemente corretto. Venetia, V. Valgrisi, MDLVIII. Pet—N 558a

sm. 12°. pp. 333, [15]. Device in t.-p. and at end, initials. Marsand, p. 72. Hortis, 107.

The Aldine text and giunta, preceded by the Vellutello life of Petrarch, as in the Giolito-Dolce editions.

1559. Same. Venetia, V. Valgrisi, MDLIX. Pet—N 559

A reissue of the preceding.

1559. Il Petrarca nuouissimamente reuisto, e corretto da M. Lodouico Dolce. Con alcuni dottissimi auertimenti di m. Giulio Camillo, et indici del Dolce de' concetti, e delle parole, che nel Poeta si trouano, & in ultimo de gli epitheti; & un' utile raccoglimento delle desinenze delle Rime di tutto il Canzoniere di esso Poeta. Vinegia, G. Giolito de' Ferrari, MDLIX. Pet—N 559a sm. 8°. pp. [48], 400, [128]. Device in t.-p., map, portrs., wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 73. Hortis, 108.

Reprinted from the Dolce edition of 1554, with the addition of the coronation Privilege and the Testament of Petrarch in Italian. A fine copy with broad margins. Yellow crushed levant, by Pratt.

1560. Il Petrarca. Nuouamente reuisto, et ricorretto da M. Lodouico Dolce. Con alcuni dottissimi Auertimenti di M. Giulio Camillo, & Indici di esso dolce utilissimi di tutti i concetti, & delle parole, che nel Poeta si trouano. E di piu con una breue, e particolare Spositione del medesimo Dolce, di tutte le Rime di esso Poeta. Vinegia, G. Giolito de Ferrari, MDLX.

Pet—N 560

sm. 12°. pp. 20, [4], 21-488, ff. 132. Device in t.-p., port., wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 74. Hortis, 113.

A reprint of the Dolce edition of 1557 (Pet—N 557b). The Annotationi, instead of a date, in the imprint, have *. Three copies, one perfect, a second lacking pp. 187-188, containing the Babylonian sonnets, the third having the same deficiency supplied in manuscript. The title at the head of the map of Vaucluse reads in the first copy: Iscrittoin della Sorga . . ., in the second (correctly): Discription . . ., in the third: Cisdrittoin . . . The Trionfi in the second copy bear the date MDLVII.

1560. Il Petrarca nuouamente reuisto, et ricorretto da M. Lodouico Dolce. Con la vita del Petrarca. Vinegia, G. Giolito de' Ferrari, MDLX.

Pet—N 560b

sm. 12°. pp. 396. Device in t.-p., port., wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 73.

A reprint, with slightly different ornament, of the Dolce edition of 1557 (Pet—N 557a).

1560. Il Petrarca nuouamente reuisto, et ricorretto da M. Lodouico Dolce. Con alcuni dottissimi auertimenti di M. Giulio Camillo, & indici di esso dolce utilissimi di tutti i concetti, & delle parole, che nel Poeta si trouano. Con Priuilegio. Vinegia, G. Giolito de' Ferrari, MDLX.

Pet—N 560a

sm. 12°. pp. 396. Device in t.-p., port., wdcts., initials. Hortis, 112.

Differs from the preceding only in the title and ornament. With it are bound the Annotationi of 1557.

1560. Il Petrarca con l'espositione d'Alessandro Vellutello. Di nouo ristampato con le figure a i Trionfi, con le apostille, e con piu cose vtili aggiunte. Vinegia, G. Giolito de Ferrari, MDLX.

Pet N 560d

4° in 8's. ff. [12], 216. Device in t.-p., portrs., wdcts., initials. Marsand, pp. 74-75. Hortis, 110.

A reprint of the edition of 1558. This, the last Giolito-Vellutello edition, is 'pregevole sì per la correzione del testo che per la nitidezza de' caratteri', according to Marsand. |

1560. Il Petrarca con l'espositione d'Alessandro Vellutello di nuouo ristampato con le figure a i Trionfi, con le apostille, e con piu cose vtili aggiunte. Venetia, V. Valgrisi, MDLX.

Pet N 560e

4° in 8's. ff. [12], 213, [3]. Engr. t.-p. with portrs., vign. with portrs., initials, device at end. Marsand, p. 75. Hortis, 111.

Differs from the preceding only in the dedication to Carlo Grotta by Nicolò Bevilacqua and in the illustrations. It has the Niccolini engraved title-page of 1549, with the portraits repeated in Avanzo's vignette above the Sonetto sopra le cineri. The woodcuts illustrating the Triumphs are new, a variation of Giolito's designs. The map of Vaucluse is omitted.

Pet—N 561

sm. 8°. ff. 162, [8]. Vign. in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 76.

A reprint of the Avanzo edition of 1557. A second copy lacks the two blank leaves [163, 164].

1562. Rime di M. Francesco Petrarca in vita, e in morte di M. Laura. Con vn ragionamento in fine d'incerto Autore dell' opinione d'alcuni intorno a' Triomfi di detto Poeta, e con la dichiarazione di molte voci toscane, & in che modo si debbono vsare. Venetia, Comin da Trino di Monferrato, MDLXII.

Pet—N 562a

sm. 8°. ff. 180, [44]. Vign. in t.-p., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, pp. 76-77. Hortis, 115.

Contents as in the last Giunta edition (1522), except the preface, which is the earlier Giunta preface: Fran. Alph. lectori salutem (1510, 1515), and the Ragionamento d'incerto Autore at the end, which is the Aldine exposition beginning: A candidi lectori. (See note under 1533, Aldus.) The woodcuts are the Zoppino engravings of Zoan Andrea. Lacks the blank leaf at the end. Green morocco, by Chatelin.

sm. 12°. pp. 490. Vign. in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts. Marsand, p. 76. Hortis, 114.

A reprint of Roville's edition of 1558, with the illustrations of the Avanzo editions, 1557, 1561. Bound with it is a copy of Ridolfi's Rimario, Venetia, 1562.

1563. Il Petrarca con l'espositione di M. Alessandro Vellutello: Di nuouo ristampato con le figure a i Trionfi, con le apostille, e con piu cose utili aggiunte. Venetia, N. Beuilacqua, M D L X I I I. Pet N 563

4° in 8's. ff. [12], 213, [3]. Device in t.-p. and at end, 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 77. Hortis, 116.

A reprint of the Valgrisi edition of 1560, with a new title-page and without portraits. Brown morocco, by Chatelin.

1564. Il Petrarca riueduto et corretto, et di bellissime figure ornato. Vinegia, G. Grifio, M D L X I I I. Pet—N 564

sm. 12°. ff. 144, 141-162, [8]. Vign. in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 77. Hortis, 119.

A reprint of the Avanzo editions, 1557, 1561, with an additional sonnet, that of Stramazzo, in the giunta.

1564. Il Petrarca con nuoue sposizioni, Nelle quali, oltre l'altre cose, si dimostra qual fusse il vero giorno & l'hora del suo innamoramento. Insieme alcune molto vtili & belle annotationi d'intorno alle regole della lingua toscana, e vna conserua di tutte le sue rime ridotte co' versi interi sotto le lettere vocali. Lyone, G. Rouillio, M. D. L X I I I. Pet—N 564b

16° in 8's. pp. [48], 19-587, [55]. Device in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 78. Hortis, 117.

A reprint of the Roville edition of 1558, with the addition in the introduction of a correspondence between Alfonso Cambi Importuni and Ridolfi, the editor, and a letter of Francesco Giuntini to Domenichi Piacentino—all on the subject of the exact time of the innamoramento of Petrarch. The edition of Roville, 1574, which is a reprint of the present one, has a certain fame with bibliographers as the only Petrarch text cited in the first edition of the 'Vocabolario' of the Accademia della Crusca, for which reason it seems to have been chosen by Volpi as the basis of the celebrated Comino editions of Padua, 1722, 1732. In the 'Vocabolario' the editorship of this edition (1574) is attributed to Cambi. Apostolo Zeno, in his notes to Fontanini (vol. ii, p. 30, edition of 1753), asserts that Cambi contributed only to the correspondence, and that Ridolfi was the editor. p. 588 is numbered 558. Two copies, one red-lined. A copy of Ridolfi's Rimario, 1564, is bound with each.

1564. Il Petrarca con la dichiarazione del vero giorno del suo innamoramento. Lyone, G. Rouillio, 1564. Pet—N 564c

sm. 16° in 8's. pp. [16], 387, [13]. Vign. in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials.

This second edition of 1564 from Roville's press is described by A. Moschetti, 'Notizia bibliografica petrarchesca'. It omits the Privilege found in the other Roville editions, is without annotations, has no table of first lines, and does not contain the correspondence of the preceding edition, the points therein discussed being summarized in the lengthened biography. The type-page, like that of 1558, measures 100 × 50 mm.

1564. Il Petrarca con dichiarazioni non più stampate. Insieme con alcune belle annotationi tratte dalle dottissime Prose di Monsignor Bembo, cose sommamente vtili, à chi di rimare leggiadramente, & senza volere i segni del Petrarca passare, si prende cura. sm. 12°. pp. 490. Vign. in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts. Marsand, pp. 77-78. Hortis, 118.

A reprint of Bevilacqua's edition of 1562, the portraits in a poorer vignette. Bound with it is Ridolfi's Rimario of 1564.

1565. Il Petrarca di nuouo ristampato, et diligentemente corretto. Venetia, N. Beuilacqua, 1565. Pet—N 565

sm. 12°. pp. 192, 203-367, [13]. Device in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 78. Hortis, 120.

The Aldine text and giunta, preceded by the Vellutello life of Petrarch as given in the Roville edition of 1550. Printed in very small type, clear and beautiful, with 34 lines on the page measuring 91 × 45 mm. The illustrations are those of the preceding edition. Volpi (p. x of his edition of the Rime, 1732) defends himself for departing from the reading riverire and riverenza by which, in the fifth sonnet, Petrarch's pun is spoiled in the text of Bevilacqua, 'che dagli oppositori vien creduto l'ottimo'. Marsand finds the text faulty, citing the same instance, and believes the edition was admired for its workmanship, not for its text. Marsand, however, finds the reissue of 1570 'correttissima'. Old Grolier binding.

1568. Il Petrarca con l'espositione di M. Alessandro Vellutello. Di nuouo ristampato con le figure a i Trionfi, con le apostille, e con piu cose utili aggiunte. Venetia, N. Beuilacqua, M D L X V I I I.

Pet N 568c

4° in 8's. ff. [12], 213, [3]. Engr. t.-p., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 79. Hortis, 121.

A reprint of the edition of 1563, with different title-page and ornament.

1568. Il Petrarca con dichiarazioni non più stampate. Insieme con alcune belle annotationi, tratte dalle dottissime Prose di Monsignor Bembo, cose sommamente vtili, à chi di rimare leggiadramente, & senza volere i segni del Petrarca passare, si prende cura. E più una conserua di tutte le sue rime ridotte sotto le cinque lettere vocali. Venetia, N. Beuilacqua, 1568.

Pet—N 568

sm. 12°. pp. 490. Device in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 79.

A reprint of the editions of 1562, 1564, from the same press. Bound with it is Ridolfi's Rimario of 1568. Also a second copy, without the Rimario.

1568. Il Petrarca riueduto e corretto, et di bellissime figure ornato. Vinegia, G. Griphio, M D L X V I I I.

Pet—N 568a

sm. 12°. ff. 144, 141-162, [8]. Vign. in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Hortis, 122.

A reprint of the edition of 1564 from the same press, with correction of the errors therein noted. The list of errata is retained. The title-page vignette is reversed.

1570. Il Petrarca di nuouo ristampato, et diligentemente corretto. Venetia, N. Beuilacqua, 1570.

sm. 12°. pp. 182, 193-357, [13]. Vign. in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 79. Hortis, 123.

A reprint of the edition of 1565. The biography, printed in italic, fills pp. 3-14 instead of pp. 3-24, as in 1565. The curious break in the pagination again occurs.

1572-73. Il Petrarca con dichiarazioni non piu stampate. Insieme con alcune belle annotationi, tratte dalle dottissime Prose di Monsignor Bembo, cose sommamente vtili, à chi di rimare leggiadramente, & senza volere i segni del Petrarca passare, si prende cura. Et piu una conserua di tutte le sue rime, ridotte sotto le cinque lettere vocali. Venetia, D. Nicolini, M D L X X I I I. Pet—N 573

16° in 8's. pp. 544. Vign. in t.-pp., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 80. Hortis, 124.

The Trionfi have a separate title-page bearing the date MDLXXII. The text and annotations, with giunta as in the Roville editions of 1558, etc., are preceded by the Vellutello biography as in the Giolito-Dolce editions. The vignette of portraits is Avanzo's (1557). The woodcuts are Giglio's (1551). The text is printed in roman, the annotations in italic. Three copies, of which one has the Babylonian sonnets erased, a manuscript note on p. 544 calling attention to the erasure; in another the title-page is mutilated, and in the third the title-page of the Trionfi is substituted for the true title, and the leaves containing the Babylonian sonnets (pp. 179-182) are removed. A copy of Ridolfi's Rimario is bound with each.

1573. Il Petrarca riueduto, et corretto, et di bellissime figure ornato. Vinegia, G. Griphio, M D L X X I I I. Pet—N 573a

sm. 12°. ff. 144, 141-162, [8]. Device in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 80. Hortis, 125.

Reprinted from the edition of 1568, but with the space of the Babylonian sonnets (f. 55) left blank—this variation appearing here for the first time. The list of errata is omitted.

1573. Il Petrarca con l'espositione di M. Alessandro Velutello. Di nuouo ristampato con le figure a i Trionfi, con le apostille, e con piu cose utili aggiunte. Venetia, G. A. Bertano, MDLXXIII.

16°. pp. [48], 19-587, [55]. Device in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, pp. 81-82. Hortis, 127.

As already mentioned this is a reprint of the first Rovillio edition of 1564 (see note on that edition), repeating many of its errors and adding others. Volpi in selecting it as the basis of his text (1722) used it with caution, as his preface informs us, and he says in his Catalogue of Petrarch editions, 'Il Cambi' (or rather Ridolfi, according to Zeno) 'non v' ha dubbio, l' avrà ottimamente preparata, ma il Rovillio l' ha pessimamente eseguita'. Ridolfi's Rimario, 1574, in a uniform edition, is bound as volume ii. Another copy, having the Rimario bound with it, has the Babylonian sonnets (pp. 207-210) extracted.

1574. Il Petrarca con l'esposizione di M. Gio. Andrea Gesualdo. Nuouamente ristampato, e con somma diligenza corretto, et ornato di figure, con doi tauole, vna de' sonetti e canzoni, & l'altra di tutte le cose degne di memoria, che in essa esposizione si contengono. Vinegia, I. Vidali, MDLXXIII.

Differs from the Giolito-Gesualdo edition of 1553 only in the illustrations, which are poor imitations of Giolito's. The vignette with portraits is the one used by Bevilacqua in the edition of 1564.

1575. Il Petrarca di nuouo ristampato, et diligentemente corretto. Venetia, D. Nicolino, MDLXXV.

Pet—N 575

sm. 12°. pp. 345, [12]. Vign. in t.-p., port., 6 wdcts., initials. Marsand, p. 83. Hortis, 129.

A close imitation of the Bevilacqua editions of 1565, 1570, with the same contents. The type-page is 91×47 mm., with 34 lines. The woodcuts are very similar, but with the movement directed to the right. The portrait on the reverse of the title-page is reduced from the medallion in the Bindoni edition of 1541.

1579. Il Petrarca. Riueduto et corretto, e di bellissime figure ornato. Vinegia, D. Farri, MDLXXIX.

sm. 12°. ff. 144, 141-162. Device in t.-p., portrs., 6 wdcts. Marsand, p. 83.

A reprint of Grifio's edition of 1573, with a different device and imprint. Grifio's error in folio numeration (see 1564, 1568) remains. There is no table.

1579. Il Petrarca con l'esposizione di M. Alessandro Velutello. Di nuouo ristampato con le figure a i Trionfi, con le apostille, e con piu cose utili aggiunte. In Venetia, MDLXXIX.

Pet N 579

4° in 8's. ff. [12], 213, [3]. Engr. t.-p., wdcts. Marsand, pp. 85-86. Hortis, 130.

Title-page and contents as in the Bevilacqua edition of 1568 and Bertano's of 1573. The woodcuts are those of the Nicolini-Daniello edition of 1549. The device representing a stork holding a stone, with the encircling motto: Vigilat, nec fatiscit, is found on the third and thirteenth folios and at the end. Marsand's evidence that the printer is Bertano is inconclusive, as is that of Volpi and Haym in favor of Bevilacqua.

Contents as in the Bevilacqua editions of 1565, 1570, with the addition of the Laura epitaph, following the vignette of portraits, and with the note 'Qui mancano tre Sonetti' in the place of the Babylonian sonnets, which are printed on a separate leaf, at the end. The type-page measures 80×38 mm. and has 36 lines. The illustrations are correspondingly minute, but full of spirit and well executed. The vignette of portraits (after the Laurentian) measures 30×35 mm.

The date at the end is MDLXXXII. This is the sixth and last edition of Gesualdo's commentary. The contents are as in Giolito's edition of 1553, except in the omission here of the three Babylonian sonnets. (Marsand was in error in his statement that four sonnets are omitted.) Valgrisi's vignette with portraits of Petrarch and Laura (1560) is used. The illustrations of the Triumphs are those of the Niccolini edition of 1549. A second copy lacks the first two leaves.

The text in italic with the commentary in roman is preceded by the Privilege, the dedication of Giacomo Castelvetro, nephew of the commentator, to Duke Alfonso II. of Ferrara, and the preface: A lettori. The Triumphs as 'Parte terza' are paged continuously with the second part of the Sonetti, the pages being numbered 1-295, 298-395, with three unnumbered at the end. The Aldine giunta follows the table. The Babylonian sonnets are omitted.

Castelvetro's commentary has been only twice published, the second time by Zatta, Venice, 1756. It was censured by Catholics as giving a heretical construction to certain verses of the text (this is discussed at length by Fontanini, tom. ii, pp. 36-47), but is nevertheless counted superior to any which had yet appeared, surpassing Gesualdo's, Carducci says, 'tanto di concisione quanto certamente di acutezza, di profondità e di erudizione classica e filosofica' ('Rime di F. Petrarca', 1899, p. xxvii). The text is copied from the Aldine of 1514, but with many errors, according to Gamba. Four copies, one with broad margins, another with manuscript annotations by Giovanni Galvini (d. 1875).

The Discorso sopra la qualità dell' amore del Petrarca is signed: Pietro Cresci detto l' Inflammato, Accademico Fantastico. The portrait is that of the Nicolini edition of 1575. The new woodcuts (38 x 37 mm.) show 'quelques traits dignes d'être relevés: tels les quatre chevaux de l'Amour, dans une attitude fort mouvementée; telle la Mort qui se baisse à la façon d'un faucheur'. (Essling and Müntz, p. 198.) The Aldine giunta follows the Trionfi. The three Babylonian sonnets are omitted. Two copies.

This is a reimpression of the edition of Zaltieri, 1592, with a new engraved title-page and copperplate engravings illustrating the Triumphs, in place of the poor woodcuts of the earlier issue. The engravings are original in design, introducing, for the first time, the triumphal arch through which the processions pass. A map of Vaucluse (33 × 26 mm.) fills the space of the portrait-vignette of the earlier issue, portraits of Petrarch and Laura (10 × 10 mm.) being cleverly introduced in the border of the engraved title-page in the present one. These plates were unknown to Essling and Müntz, whose illustrations include nothing of like design.

Dedicated by Federigo Ubaldini to Taddeo Barberino. The Petrarch portion is a page-for-page copy of cod. Vat. 3196, the so-called 'Fragments' which, formerly in the possession of Cardinal Bembo, had come to the Vatican Library in the collections of Fulvio Orsini in 1600. Ubaldini, a student of the early Italian writers, shows a keen interest in this original, first excited, perhaps, by the mention in Bembo's 'Prose' of autograph sheets in the latter's possession. The editor's apology for the publication is interesting: He would encourage literary workers by the example of the poet, whose rude beginnings are here seen in the process of polishing, until the verse by this labor becomes perfect—'tutte le buone cose a noi si vendono dal cielo a prezzo di fatica'. The studies of recent years based upon the rediscovered autograph of the Canzoniere and its relations to the Fragments give a new interest to Ubaldini's work. Two leaves (ff. 17, 18) preserved in the edition have since been lost from the original manuscript. In its execution the work fully merits Appel's praise: 'in für jene Zeit sehr anerkennenswert genauer und typographisch geschickter Weise abgedruckt'. The edition was reprinted by the Stamperia Reale, Torino, 1750. A new edition prepared from the manuscript by Carl Appel was published in 1891, and a facsimile, prepared for the series of Monaci, L'Archivio paleografico italiano (tav. 52-71), was reissued by the Vatican Library in 1895-98. (The statement of Hortis in 1874, 'È questa la prima edizione de' Frammenti . . . frammenti che si ristamparono poi molte volte,' is misleading, the fact being that only a small portion: 'alcuni sonetti e fragmenti del Petrarca [i. e. 13 compositions] i quali non si veggono nel l'altre edizioni' was reprinted at the end of the Canzoniere in Muratori's edition, and copied in the giunta of Volpi, 1732, and many later editors.)

Picini f.—pp. 63-96 are numbered 61-94. Excepting the text found in Placide Catanusi's 'Œuvres amoureuses de Pétrarque traduites en François', 1669, 1709 (see French), this is the last edition of the Rime printed in the 17th century. Muratori's dedication and preface, Tassoni's preface to his 'Considerazioni sopra le Rime del Petrarca', and a life of Petrarch by Muratori precede the text. Part II of the Canzoniere begins with the sonnet Oime il bel viso. Following the Canzoniere are a reprint of 13 compositions from the 'Frammenti' published by Ubaldini in 1642, six sonnets, the canzone Quel c'ha nostra natura, the chapter Nel cor pien d'amarissima dolcezza, after which are printed the Trionfi and the index. Of the Babylonian sonnets only the first lines are printed.

This is the first edition with a commentary since Castelvetro's, published in 1582. As indicated in the title the commentary consists mainly of an examination by Muratori of the criticisms of Tassoni published in his 'Considerazioni' in 1609, and introduced here after the verses criticised, Muratori's observations following. The few annotations of Muzio selected from his 'Battaglie' (1582) by Tassoni and appended to the 'Considerazioni' are here incorporated with the Tassoni criticisms. [Il Muratori] 'vi aggiunse un corollario ancor per grazia, aggiunse, dico, alle considerazioni dell' autor dei Pensieri le osservazioni di sé autore della Perfetta Poesia . . . Il Muratori si propose di far discernere ai lettori "quello che noi chiamiamo buon gusto poetico" e osò anche di "andar toccando qualche imperfezione da cui non è stato esente il P. medesimo". Noi ammiriamo e rispettiamo, come nessun più, il gran padre della storia italiana; . . . ma ciò non c'impedisce di dire che il Muratori nelle osservazioni al P. e nella Perfetta Poesia è il rappresentante dell' Arcadia, e non di quell' Arcadia che conservò certe buone tradizioni di dottrina e di stile . . . ma di quella vera degli abbatì pastori. Ora costoro ammiravano, o affermavano di ammirare, i classici dei grandi secoli; ma che cosa ammirassero nei classici, e come, si può vedere anche un po' dalle Osservazioni del Muratori su 'l P.' (Carducci, 'Rime di F. Petrarca', 1899, pp. xxxi-xxxii.)

The text is copied without alteration from the edition of Valgrisi, 1540, Muratori says in the preface. Only Fontanini and Ebert (in Fernow's translation from Mérian: 'Francesco Petrarca', 1806) cite an edition of 1540. Except through Muratori's reference it is unknown to Volpi, Haym, Gamba, Marsand, Hortis, and the rest. Is the date 1540 possibly misprinted for 1549, the date of the edition by Apollonio Campano, based upon the first Aldine? Two copies, in one of which is inserted an autograph letter of Muratori dated 20. Mag° 1748; in the other is inserted a portrait (225 × 173 mm.) Printed in roman. The prefatory matter includes Beccadelli's life of Petrarch, the compend of the Giornalisti d' Italia written to correct the errors of Muratori's life of the poet, the Testament, the document concerning the donation of the poet's library to the republic of Venice, various 'Elogi', and a catalogue (130 titles) of the principal editions of the Canzoniere. The text, in the Aldine arrangement, is followed by the most comprehensive giunta that had yet appeared, including all the verse thus published in earlier editions, and, in addition, verse from the 'Fragmenti' of Ubaldini's edition (1642), the frottola Di rider ho gran voglia, and Antonio da Ferrara's ode on the death of Petrarch. The Babylonian sonnets are restored to their proper place (see note under EPISTOLAE—ITALIAN: 'Alcuni importanti luochi fuor delle epistole latine di M. F. Petrarca [by P. P. VERGERIUS]'). The editor, Giovanni Antonio Volpi, who with his brother Gaetano had founded the Stamperia Cominiana five years before, reminds the reader that only one edition—the famous one of 1472—had hitherto been printed in Padua. 'Si è copiato il Testo dalla edizione che ne fece in Lione il Rovillio l'anno 1574. unicamente citata da' Sigg. Accademici della Crusca nel loro Vocabolario,' he says, going on to cite other editions and an early manuscript consulted. The catalogue⁸ is one of the most valuable bibliographies of the earlier editions of the Rime. Two copies.

1727. Le rime di Francesco Petrarca, riscontrate co i testi a penna della Libreria Estense, e co i fragmenti dell' originale d'esso poeta. The giunta includes all the compositions found in the Comino edition (1722). It is preceded, p. 705, by the title given in the Comino edition, following which is printed the privilege to Coleti to reprint 'il libro intitolato Le Rime di M. F. Petrarca giusta l' esemplare stampato in Padoa nell' anno 1722'. This appendix begins with the four Babylonian sonnets, omitted in the usual places, and here accompanied with notes. Three copies.

The second Comino edition, in which the editors have 'raddoppiate le diligenze', in the language of the new preface. Additions are made in the introduction, in the catalogue (placed at the end in this edition), and in the giunta, at the end of which is printed Flaminio's Latin translation of the canzone Chiare, fresche e dolci acque, so often included in later editions of the Rime. 'Questa edizione fu per molto tempo il più autorevole testo del Canzoniere: ristampata molte volte a preferenza d' ogni altra, per la bontà della lezione, per le copiose giunte, le ricche notizie sul poeta e l'edizioni delle Rime volgari, e per la diligenza ammirabile usatavi da' Volpi. La copiarono per molto tempo tutti gli editori venuti più tardi, i quali per dare autorità alle loro stampe, spacciavano ne' titoli di aver conferito il loro testo coll' edizione cominiana del 1732 quantunque spesso volte ciò non fosse vero.' (Hortis, p. 75.)

The portrait, a fine copper-plate engraving (120 × 85 mm.), with the inscription: FRANCISCUS PETRARCA—Ex eleganti antiqua tabella apud Vulpios—M. Beylbrouck sculp. ('che vi diamo copiato da una tavoletta dipinta, di buona mano pur da noi posseduta' says the editor), shows the poet, three-quarters face, in hood and gown, a band without laurel encircling the brow. Two copies, in one of which the portrait is printed in a blue tint. This copy is in old Italian binding of dark brown stamped leather.

Contents as in the Comino edition of 1732, without the catalogue, and with Ridolfo's Rimario, pp. 391–621. Hortis describes an edition identical with this but for the date MDCCXXXVI, the Privilege, however, being dated 1739, which suggests that the date 1736 is an error. The frontispiece engraved by Carlo Orsolini shows a bust of Petrarch, the face directed upwards to a medallion of Laura. Underneath is a shell-shaped device bearing the verse. Dal loro onesto, ardente, e vivo amore.

Two sonnets, Al sepolcro del Petrarca, by Domenico Lazzarini and Giovambattista Carminati, complete the introduction. Dedicated to Carlo de' Silvestri by the editor, Luigi Bandini, who is also the author of the life of Petrarch, pp. xiii-liii. The giunta is that of the Comino edition of 1732 without the verse from the Ubaldini Fragments. The editor cites many Florentine manuscripts used in the preparation of the text, not always judiciously, according to Serassi (see preface to the edition of 1752), Marsand, and others, though the Academicians prized the edition. Morelli says of it (preface to the Rime, 1799, pp. xvi-xvii): 'La Fiorentina del 1748 veramente presenta le Rime come riscontrate sopra ottimi testi a penna e da molte macchie ripurgate e corrette: e sembrava pure ch'ella esser tenuta volesse in grande reputazione, vedendosi ch' era opera dell' Abate Luigi Bandini e del M. Domenico Maria Manni . . . Ma in vece, bene considerate, specialmente dall' Abate Pierantonio Serassi, uomo di sottile discernimento, le molte variazioni introdottevi; conobbe egli che buone ragioni non v'erano di ammetterle nella seconda sua edizione fatta in Bergamo l'anno 1752. Indarno si cercherebbero nelle due antiche stampe sopra l'autografo lavorate; e dalla licenza di Toscani copisti derivate si veggono, per poco esame che se ne faccia'. In the preface is mentioned a second volume of annotations to be prepared, which, it appears, never saw the light. The portrait, a copper-plate engraving (80 × 63 mm.), is full face, in hood with cape of fur, without the laurel, the right hand holding a book. It is engraved after the Petrarch of the fresco formerly attributed to Simone Memmi in the Spanish Chapel of Santa Maria Novella. This engraving is found only in this edition. Three copies.

A reprint of Bandini's edition, 1746. The frontispiece contains portraits of Petrarch and Laura, those of Orsolini in the Bortoli edition of 1739, but here showing Petrarch standing gazing upward at the meditation of Laura, a pen in the right hand, a book in the left. Lacks the last blank leaf. Gift of Charles Godfrey Leland to Mr. Fiske. Another copy has Flaminio's Latin translation of the canzone Chiare, fresche e dolci acque printed on pp. 370-371, which are blank in the first copy.

In a new preface the editor, Serassi, says, 'abbiamo stimato bene di pubblicarla in tutto somigliante alla nostra prima del 1746 così quanto alla forma . . . come molto più quanto al testo', going on to criticise the readings introduced in the edition of Bandini (1746) from Florentine manuscripts. Two sonnets, Al sepolcro del Petrarca, by Varchi and Alessandro Piccolomini, are added in this edition. The statement in Marsand that the edition varies from the first only by the addition of the sonnet of G. B. Carminati Patrizio, is erroneous, that sonnet being included in the first edition.

Contents:—Dedication to Marina Sennacchi Muratelli, signed: N. N. L'autore delle note [Sebastiano Pagello] a chi legge.—La vita di Francesco Petrarca ridotta in compendio.—Sonetti in vita [e in morte] di Madonna Laura.—Le canzoni in vita [e in morte] di Madonna Laura.—I trionfi in vita e morte di Madonna

Laura.—Giunta d'alcune composizioni del Petrarca, e di altri.

The arrangement in separating the canzoni from the sonnets is copied from Fausto's edition of 1532. The life of Petrarch is the compend of the Giornalisti d'Italia, printed in the Comino edition of 1722. The giunta corresponds in large part to that of the Comino editions, but concludes with Pagello's Latin translation of the canzone Chiare, fresche e dolci acque, and of the sonnets Voi ch'ascoltate and A piè de' colli. 'Pochi annotatori ebbe del resto [i.e. after Muratori] il P. nel secolo decimottavo. Più originale l'ab. Sebastiano Pagello bassanese [1718-1795] offre qualche cosa di nuovo e di meditato.' (Carducci, 'Rime di F. Petrarca', 1899, p. xxxii.)

'Brutta carta, brutti caratteri e ristampa di altra brutta edizione, contuttociò è stimabile . . . per accuratezza di testo e per succose annotazioni' is the comment of Gamba on this edition. It is printed in double columns. The arrangement of verses in the giunta varies from that of the preceding edition. Included are additional translations into Latin by the editor: the sonnets Se mai foco per foco, Quando giunge per gli occhi, Ricercando del mar. The printer's name appears in the license on the recto of the last leaf. Lacks the second leaf containing the dedication.

2 v. l. 4°. Frontispp., engr. t.-pp., portrs., plates. Marsand, pp. 105–106. Hortis, 174.

The second edition of Castelvetro's commentary. Vol. i contains, in addition to the introductory matter of the 2d Comino edition (1732), 'Testimonianze di diversi uomini' concerning Petrarch, the 'Giudizio' of Vincenzo Gravina, and Muratori's life of Castelvetro, followed by the text with commentary of part I of the Canzoniere. Vol. ii has at the beginning the letter of Bindo Peruzzi accompanying the portraits of Petrarch and Laura engraved after the marble bas-relief which he had recently discovered. At the end are the giunta and catalogue of the Comino edition, Luoghi tratti dalla Poetica d' Aristotele tradotta e comentata dal Castelvetro, Della difesa del Petrarca dell' Estatico Insensato (Filippo Massini), and the Lettera postuma intorno alla natura ed alla qualità dell' amore di M. F. Petrarca by Paolo Gagliardi.

Besides the Peruzzi portraits of vol. ii, vol. i has an engraved frontispiece: Francesco Fontebasso invent., Z. Batta Brustolon inci., representing the coronation of the poet; an engraved dedication, with sonnet, to Maria Antonia di Baviera, by il conte Don Cristoforo Zapati di Cisneros; portraits of Petrarch and Laura after Bellini with that of Castelvetro brought into a single engraving by Crivellari. More than a hundred vignettes by various Italian engravers are printed in the text of the two volumes. A Dichiarazione de' rami immediately precedes the text of each volume. Printed on very large, heavy paper. Bound in Italian full calf.

Another impression on ordinary paper has printed title-pages, that of vol. i with letters in red and black, that of vol. ii in black only. In this copy the dedication is signed: Antonio Zatta. (Pet + N 756a.)

Preceding the text is the preface, and an abridgment of Beccadelli's life of Petrarch. The text is based upon the Comino edition of 1732, with a few variants from the Castelvetro editions. Brief arguments precede the compositions. The giunta contains 12 sonnets besides the usual capitoli and canzoni. The portraits, oval medallions (35 × 24 mm.) after the Laurentian miniatures, are shown resting against a lyre. Two copies, one of which bears the autographs of former owners; Charlotte Smith the poetess, and Cyrus Redding, with a satirical comment of the latter upon the poetess.

The dedication in verse to marchese Francesco Albergati Capacelli is followed by the biographical compend of the Giornalisti d' Italia, and four (not nine, as Hortis says) sonnets, preceding the text. The giunta is that of the Comino edition of 1732. The engraved portrait (60 × 47 mm.), after that of the Comino edition, is inferior to the one by Littret in Prault's edition of 1768. It is signed, as is the title-page engraving: Pomp. Lapi scul. Libur., the latter with the date 1778. The plates illustrating the Triumphs (110 × 60 mm.) have the inscription: Ioan. Lapi inv. et scul. Libur. 1778. The drawing is admirable in the grace and expression of the figures, and the execution is not less good.

A brief preface by the editor of the series, Andrea Rubbi, precedes the text in each volume. The giunta of 1732 follows the text in volume II, and is followed by: Francesco Petrarca—notizie storiche, Notizie letterarie, and Ritratto del Petrarca, all by the editor. It is interesting to note that the second 'Notizie' make a plea for a modern edition of the collected works of Petrarca, a project not yet realized. This edition, beautiful as to paper and press-work, is further enriched by a series of fine engravings by G. dall' Acqua, printed in the text. The portrait, a medallion after the Laurentian (36 × 36 mm.), is printed in both title-pages. The edition reduced by photolithography was republished by F. Ongania, Venezia, 1879. This copy lacks the series title-pages.

Following the text is the verse of the Aldine giunta with three additional sonnets, the canzone Donna mi viene spesso, the frottola Di rider ho gran voglia, the fragment Quanti già . . . and the ode of Antonio da Ferrara on the death of Petrarch. The third leaf in vol. i is lacking.

2 v. sm. 8°. Marsand, p. 114. Hortis, 203. The text is preceded by the preface of the editor, Jacopo Morelli, pp. iii-xxi; Beccadelli's life of Petrarch from the manuscript of Fontanini 'dall' autore rivista, corretta e accresciuta [col] discorso più volte citato sopra gli originali del Petrarca', pp. 1-86; the sonnet of Boccaccio, the Laura note, the Testament, 'ora per la prima volta ridotta a buona lezione', the four sonnets: Sopra il sepolcro del Petrarca, and the 'Giudizio' of Gravino. The giunta adds the sonnets of Jacopo Notaio and a second one of Muzio Stramazzone, with the response of Petrarch to the latter, to those before published, and omits Flaminio's O fons Melioli sacer, being for the rest like the giunta of the Comino edition of 1732. Regarding it the duty of the editor 'a conoscere e adottare quelle [lezioni] che veracemente dalla penna del poeta alla fine uscite siano', Morelli employed as a basis for his text the editions of Valdezocco, 1472, and Aldo, 1501, both claiming an autograph source, collating with these that of Comino, 1732. Owing to careless printing, Marsand says, the result was not what the editor desired. The edition is important for the publication in full of Beccadelli's life of Petrarch with its account of the autographs of the Rime—not published again until Solerti's 'Vite di Dante, Petrarca e Boccaccio' appeared in 1904. Three copies.

Poesie dirette al Petrarca, at the end of vol. ii, consists of six sonnets (with two of Petrarch in response), four canzoni, and Flaminio's O fons Melioli. Marsand's adjective 'splendidissima' is appropriately applied to this edition so far as appearance is concerned. Of the text he says: 'Monsignore Dionisi usò forse troppa franchezza nel por mano al testo, e mi sembra abbia pigliati de' granchi ben grossi'.

The text is preceded by the prefaces of the publishers and the editor, the life of Petrarch from Tiraboschi's 'Storia della letteratura italiana', and Riflessioni sopra la vita di F. Petrarca scritta dall' abate de Sade, from the same work. The notes are at the end of vol. i and after the giunta in vol. ii. The giunta and the supplementary matter are the same as in the edition of Comino 1732, including the catalogue of Volpi. Marsand says that greater accuracy in the correction of the text was to have been expected. The portraits are engravings (113 × 84 mm.) by Giuseppe Benaglia. That of Petrarch has for its original the one followed in the engravings of Kieser and De Bry. That of Laura has the inscription: Angiolo Bronzino dipinse, Ricavato dalla Galleria Arese Lucini, Deposito alla Biblioteca Nazionale. The preface says a long and unbroken tradition in the Aresi family leaves no doubt of the authenticity of the portrait. It is the least attractive of all Laura portraits. See also edition of [1820].

the editions of Volpi and others, pp. xxv-xxxi, and Memorie della vita di F. Petrarca, pp. xxxvlix, precede the text in vol. i (Parte 1^a: Sonetti text are notes on the engravings. Vol. ii contains the text (Parte II^a: Sonetti e canzoni in morte di M. Laura; III^a: Trionfi; IV^a: Sonetti e canzoni sopra varj argomenti) and the Biblioteca petrarchesca, pp. 291-444. Concerning the Memorie see the entry under EPISTOLA

AD POSTEROS.—ITALIAN. The Biblioteca petrarchesca is a description of all the editions of the Rime known to the editor, completing the catalogues of Volpi and others. The 'Biblioteca petrarchesca' published by Marsand in 1826 covers only the works in his own collection.
It omits the Quadro cronologico delle edizioni del Canzoniere (a tabulated arrangement showing date, place, printer, size, type, and commentator) which in the present edition precedes the bibliography. Portraits (175×130 mm.) of Laura: Simon Memmi pinxit—Raphael Mor-ghen sculpsit—Archetypum est Senis penes Eq. Antonium Piccolomini Bellanti, and of Petrarch: Guariento dip.—Gaet. Bozza dis.— Mauro Gandolfi inc., are found in vol. i, with an account of the originals and a discussion of their authenticity, pp. 341-353. Marsand's attribution of the Paduan portrait of Petrarch (here first reproduced) to Guariento is admitted as a doubtful possibility by de Nolhac, who assigns it to the 14th century ('Pétrarque et l'humanisme', 1892, pp. 378-379). Its authenticity is denied by Essling and Müntz (p. 65) on the ground of a total lack of resemblance to the type existing in the early miniatures: 'Dire que la fresque du palais épiscopal de Padoue a été mise en lumière par Marsand, ce n'est pas précisément en augmenter l'autorité, car qui ignore que l'acuité de la critique n'était pas le fort de cet érudit !'

This handsome edition, described by Hortis (1874) as 'la più splendida, la più notevole di quante, abbiano veduto sin ora la luce', was duly celebrated, two volumes of verse being composed in its honor and published the same year (1820), while in scores of editions the text of the 'Volgata moderna', as Mestica terms it ('Rime di F.
Petrarca', 1896, p. vi), has been followed. 'E i letterati e i critici posteriori, senza pensar più oltre, messa quella edizione sugli altari, per tutto il mondo civile le arsero incensi.' Marsand's arrangement of the Canzoniere in three parts, with the Trionfi interposed before the third: Sonetti sopra varj argomenti (making these appear, as Mestica says, 'come disiecti membra poetæ'), is difficult to understand when one considers his familiarity with the early editions and manuscripts, and his express adoption of the 1472, the 1501, and the 1513 as authentic sources for his text. 'L' assunto del Marsand, come mi diceva egli stesso in Milano, non fu altro che di rappresentare fedelmente le tre edizioni antiche da lui citate nel suo proemio e giudicate ottime, lasciando altrui la critica di sì fatto testo' says Leopardi ('Le rime di F. Petrarca', 1839). The text Mestica finds practically agreeing with that of the Comino edition. In Marsand's 'Biblioteca petrarchesca', 1826 (pp. 128-129), is printed his letter of June 11, 1824, describing his chagrin over the discovery of an erroneous reading (vol. ii, p. 34, son.
XXIII. v. 11) Che non ha a schifo le tue 'bionde' chiome, for 'bianche' chiome, whereupon he had had the sheet reprinted with the error corrected, and begs to supply it free of expense to all possessors of the edition. Seventy years later, in the second number of the Bollettino del bibliofilo italiano of March, 1896, one 'A. B.' records his discovery of the common experience in that painstaking attempt. The reprint came out with a new error in the argument of Sonnet XXII where 'chia-mava' crudele became 'chiama' crudele. The present copy measures 330×233 mm. In it are inserted four autograph letters of Marsand.

Rime—Italian Texts.

[1820.] Le rime di M. Francesco Petrarca illustrate con note dal P. Francesco Soave C. R. S. Milano, Società tipografica de' Classici italiani, 1805 [1820].

Pet N 805a

2 v. 8°. 2 portrs. Marsand, p. 116. Hortis, 206.

A reprint of the edition of 1805 made in 1820, according to Marsand. The errors noted in the original edition are here corrected, while new ones are noted on the last page of each volume. Two copies.

1820. Le rime di messer Francesco Petrarca pubblicate da A. Buttura. Parigi, Lefèvre, 1820.

Pet—N 820

3 v. 32°. 2 portrs. (Biblioteca poetica italiana scelta e pubblicata da A. Buttura. 4-6.) Marsand, p. 130. Hortis, 237.

The reverse of the series title-page has: Dai torchi di G. Didot maggiore, stampatore del re. The preface: Della poesia lirica, e del Petrarca, fills 12 pages. Annotations by the editor, and others selected from Tassoni, Muratori, and Soave, are found at the end of part I and of the Trionfi. Buttura expresses the opinion (vol. iii, p. 240) that the last two Triumphs were not written by Petrarch. The portrait of Petrarch (37 × 28 mm.): Pamela Dautel Sc., is after the Tofanelli-Morghen engraving. Pamela Dautel (1796-1861), the wife of Pierre Daubigny, was a pupil of Aubry and of Granger. The portrait of Laura in vol. ii, bearing the same inscription, is after Bronzino. Two copies.

1820. Le rime di messer Francesco Petrarca; edizione formata sopra quella di Rovillio del 1574, con aggiunte indicate nel seguente avviso. Venezia, Molinari, 1820.

Pet—N 820a

2 v. 16°. Port. Marsand, p. 130. Hortis, 239.

Contents, after the Avviso degli editori Tramontin, eight pages, are as in the edition of Vitarelli, 1811, of which this is a revision. Three copies.

1820. Le rime del Petrarca. Livorno, dai torchi di G. Masi coi caratteri di F. Didot, trovansi ancora presso G. Gamba, 1820.

2 v. 8°. 2 portrs. Marsand, p. 131. Hortis, 234.

Marsand's Memorie della vita di F. Petrarca, and his Argomenti, precede the text, which follows the Comino edition of 1732. There is no giunta. In vol. ii, pp. 233-244, are given the variants of the Marsand text. The portraits (96 × 75 mm.) are Petrarca: F. Wagner inc., a copy in mezzotint of Benaglia's engraving in the edition of Milan, 1805, and Laura, copied from the portrait of the Marsand edition.

1820. Rime del Petrarca con note. Venezia, G. Orlandelli, 1820.

Pet—N 820c

2 v. sm. 8°. 2 portrs. (Collezione dei poeti classici italiani.) Marsand, p. 129. Hortis, 235.

Based upon the edition of Pagello (Feltre, 1753), including its preface and notes (slightly abridged), and the same biography. The giunta is not included. Marsand variants are given at the beginning of each volume. The portraits are fine engravings (60 × 42 mm.) after the Laurentian miniatures, signed: Felice Zuliani in. (A later copy of this engraving, 90 × 57 mm., is signed: Ermini dis.—E. Lapi inc.)

Dedicated by the commentator to the Duchess of Berry. The text is preceded by Cenzo sul Petrarca, by Biagioli, and his Avvertimento. The commentary of part I of the Canzoniere (bound separately in this copy) follows its text; that of part II follows the text of the Trionfi. The text is based upon that of the Comino edition—'Questo ho seguitato ma non servilmente'. There is no giunta. In the commentary are included notes of Alfieri which, with the title: 'Studj di Vittorio Alfieri sul Petrarca, 1776', were written in the margin of his copy of an edition of the Rime, afterwards presented to Thiebaut de Berneaud, from whom Biagioli had the book. Included also are observations from Vincenzo Monti's 'Proposta di alcune correzioni ed aggiunte al Vocabolario della Crusca'. Biagioli directs much criticism against the commentators who have preceded him, especially Tassoni and Muratori, in consequence of which he is in turn unsparingly dealt with by those who come after. Carducci, who is perhaps far enough removed to reach a juster estimate, says, comparing Biagioli and Leopardi, 'Rappresenta il primo nel suo commento quell' appassionato e affannoso ritorno alla tradizione letteraria del trecento per il quale si segnalò la generazione che fiorì nei primi trent'anni del secolo: si propose il secondo di fare intorno al Canzoniere un commento simile a quelli che gli antichi greci e latini fecero sopra gli autori loro . . . Il primo è un apologista, ed ha pur troppo delle apologie la verbosità e la contumelia che disgusta: il secondo è uno scoliaste, secco e inutile in più d'un luogo. Il Biagioli, che pure portò primo maggior luce in certe interpretazioni ed è ricco di raffronti utili del P. a Dante, fu biasimato oltre il giusto e ora è obliato: il Leopardi fu lodato sopra il merito, e si ristampa tuttavia'. ('Rime di F. Petrarca.' 1876. p. xlv.) Inserted is an autograph letter of Biagioli, dated 15 di Feb. 1825.

lisher's preface states, with the use of the Comino (1732) and the Marsand (1819-20) editions. The contents are the same as in the previous editions (1727, etc.) except that the Babylonian sonnets are restored to their place in the Canzoniere, and the giunta is arranged in three chapters: I. Rime originali del [Petrarca]; II. Rime che si credono da lui rifiutate; III. Rime di altri al Petrarca. Marsand's arguments are introduced preceding the compositions. The frontispiece shows Petrarch presenting a leaf of manuscript to Laura, and, below, the engraved sonnet, Lasso ch'io ardo & altri non mel crede. The portraits are signed: Filip. The Marsand text 'seguitata in ogni cosa . . . eccetto solamente nella punteggiatura' is preceded by the preface of the publishers and that of Leopardi. Comments follow each composition. 'L'intento di questa Interpretazione si è di fare che chiunque intende mediocrementemente la nostra lingua moderna possa intendere il Petrarca, non mica leggendo spensieratamente, perchè in questo secolo non si può far l'impossibile, ma ponendoci solamente quell' attenzione che si mette nel leggere l'articolo delle mode nei Giornali . . . Intendo sempre di scrivere per le donne e per gli stranieri . . .—a design which Carducci ridiculed ('Rime di F. Petrarca', 1876, p. xlv). 'Il solo Leopardi, perchè ti aiuta a sentire e non discute nè dottoreggia, ha fatto il commento migliore, come che paia il più semplice e modesto.' (Luigi Settembrini, 'Lezioni di letteratura italiana, vol. i, p. 200.) Inserted in vol. i is an autograph letter of Leopardi addressed to the publishers, 28 gennaio 1828, and a portrait of Petrarch (205 x 103 mm.): Vincenzo Pizzoli disegnò—Niccola Mellini incise 1823, after the Volpi portrait (see Comino edition of 1732). 2 v. 12°. Hortis, 266.

Dedicated to Antonio Meneghelli by the editor, A. Sicca, whose preface of three pages, with Marsand's Memorie, precedes the text. The Rime sopra vari argomenti precede the Trionfi, following which is a giunta consisting of all the verse attributed to Petrarch found in Carrer's giunta (edition of 1826-27). A name-index follows the index of first lines. Vol. ii contains Sicca's Rimario, followed by the index of citations from the Rime in the 'Vocabolario della Crusca' (newly arranged), ending p. 357, where one reads: Fine del volume secondo. After this, with separate pagination but included in the table of contents at the end, are Rimarios of the 'Divina commedia', Berni's 'Orlando innamorato', Ariosto's 'Orlando furioso', and Tasso's 'Gerusalemme liberata'. On the recto of the last leaf are engravings of the medal inscribed: Ateneo di Brescia ad Angelo Sicca . . . anno MDCCCXXIX, with a tribute, reprinted from the Giornale di Brescia, marzo, 1829.

2 v. 1. 8°. 2 portrs., 6 plates, facsim. Hortis, 275. Ferrazzi, pp. 144-145.

Introductory matter comprises the editor's preface, pp. v-ix; Notizie sopra la vita del Petrarca, from Perotti's Italian translation of Ginguenè's 'Histoire littéraire d'Italie', chap. xii; Appendice, on the Italian verse of Petrarch, from the same work, chap. xiv (not by Albertini, as Hortis says); Sommario cronologico della vita del Petrarca. Following the text are: Notizie intorno a Madonna Laura, translated from Tytler's 'Historical and critical essay'; Quadro cronologico delle edizioni del Canzoniere; Catalogo delle principali edizioni del Canzoniere. The editor offers the work as 'il primo saggio d'un' edizione de' nostri classici fatta ad imitazione delle tanto rinomate de' classici latini con note di varii . . . pubblicato per mero zelo della classica letteratura patria'. The text follows Marsand, with variants, a list of which is given in each volume. The notes are printed at the bottom of the page. The plates are those of the edition of 1821 from the same press. A reprint of this edition, Firenze, 1842, is noticed in the Foreign quarterly review, July, 1843, no. lxii, p. 396. Two copies, the second lacking the bastard title-pages and the plates.

The publisher's preface and a new preface by Leopardi (which in the edition of Le Monnier 1847 has the date 1836) precede the text, which is Marsand's, with the punctuation revised and with the addition of arguments to the chapters of the Triumphs. The compositions have the numbers of the Aldine order in Arabic added to the Marsand numbers in Roman. Following the text, Alcune osservazioni al testo e alla interpretazione, the index of first lines, a table of first lines in the Aldine order, and an index of proper names. The present volume contains only part ii of the collection, including the Petrarch, 1839, Ariosto's Orlando furioso, 1840, and Tasso's Gerusalemme liberata, 1840. It is without the general title-page, which bears the date 1838. The engravings, signed: Pollastrini dis.—Lauro inc., illustrate passages from Trionfo della Morte, cap. II and canzone XI.

8°. pp. lv, 175. Ferrazzi, p. 147.

The preface of 44 pages is devoted to the history of the text and commentaries of the Canzoniere. The text consists of 30 compositions, nos. 7, 10, 24-28, 40, 53, 58, 91, 92, 98, 99, 103, 104, 114, 119, 120, 128, 136-139, 166, 232, 244, 262, 287, 322. 'Lavoro nel suo genere colossale quando sia compiuto e da rendere di creta qualunque altro per lo addietro sul Petrarca fosse fatto.' (Il Profugnatore, 1876, vol. ix, p. 277.) 'Carducci hat das Beste was seine Vorgänger gegeben haben aufgenommen: sein Commentar sollte zugleich die Geschichte und die Kritik der anderen Commentare enthalten.' (H. Schuchardt in Literarisches Centralblatt, 1877, col. 53.) 'Per gli studiosi della storia giovano parecchie delle note che sono come dissertazioni: principalmente degne d'attenzione ci paiono tre: intorno alle canzoni Spirto gentil, Italia mia, e intorno a' sonetti sulla corte di Roma.' (Archivio storico italiano, 1876, vol. xxiii, pp. 192-193.) In this copy is inserted an autograph letter of Carducci addressed: Al Sig.^r Willard Fiske, dated, Bologna 22 febr. 83. It is in acknowledgment, undoubtedly, of the gift of a copy of 'A catalogue of Petrarch books', and expresses the pleasure of the writer in its testimony 'che il nostro gran poeta e padre del Rinascimento abbia culto sì fervido e intelligente nel parte del mondo che ha più avvenire'.

Text and commentary of the Sonetti and canzoni, preceded by the introduction and followed by an index of the words and phrases commented upon, and the usual index of first lines. Carducci's introduction of 1876 is here extended to include a history of the autograph of the Canzoniere (cod. Vat. 3195), which is the source of the present text, collated with the edition of 1472 and the Aldine edition of 1501. The commentary, consisting in large part of selections from those already printed, is designed, as stated by the editors, to investigate the time, occasion, and argument of each composition, to explain the allusions to the poet's own life and time and the allusions to classical learning, to interpret the sense, and to point out the debt of Petrarch, the Father of the Renaissance, to Latin writers. Acknowledgment is made to Mario Menghini for the labor of collating the proofs with the autographs. This edition is pronounced by Sicardi indispensable to all students of Petrarch. '... Gli inevitabili difetti di questo commento ci sono infatti compensati da tali e tanti pregi che possiamo dichiararci, per una volta, ben contenti.'

The 'sommari' are not those of Leopardi as above stated but are Castelvetro's (1582). The incidental statement further on, that the poems 'sono di solito ordinate secondo il sistema di chi curò la stampa dell' anno 1501 (edizione aldina del Cardinal Bembo), cioè in tre parti: Sonetti . . . in vita . . . Sonetti . . . in morte . . . e Sonetti . . . sopra varj argomenti', is likewise erroneous, Vellutello (1525) having been the first to introduce such a division, which was again adopted by Marsand (1819-20) with the titles here quoted. The order in the present edition is that of cod. Vat. 3195.

Rime—Italian Texts.

The text is preceded by Notizia sul Petrarca, signed: G. L. P. [Giuseppe Lando Passerini], pp. v-xvi, and the Testamento del Petrarca (Italian). On p. xiii is the statement: 'Il Canzoniere si divulgò presto fra le genti, e nel 1470, per cura di Pietro Bembo, fu stampato la prima volta a Venezia da Vindelin da Spira'. 'Per cura di Pietro Bembo' should of course refer to the Aldine of 1501, not to an edition of 1470, the date of Bembo's birth. The portraits are colored photo-engravings (140×110 mm.) after the Laurentian miniatures. Of the twelve plates illustrating the Triumphs (four of Love, one of Chastity, two of Death, three of Fame, one of Time, one of Divinity) six are copies of the blocks used by Gregorio de Gregorii in 1508 (or from the better blocks of Bernardino Stagnino in 1513 and later). One (Fame) is from Piero Veronese's edition of 1490.

This compilation, made up from the works of all previous translators of Petrarch, was first published in 1859, the present being simply a new impression. The name of Campbell is so prominent on the title-page that the volume is often spoken of, by error, as Campbell's translation of Petrarch. The biography is an abridgment of Campbell's 'Life of Petrarch' published in 1841, with the same portraits of Petrarch and Laura. The statement in the preface that the order of arrangement is 'that adopted by Marsand and other recent editors' is misleading. The order is the Aldine. With each translation is given the first line of the Italian, and an index of Italian first lines is printed at the end.

Translations from Petrarch by BARBERINA LADY DACRE. (In Foscolo, (N.) U. Essays on the poetry of Petrarch. 1823. pp. 279–317.)

The translations of the preceding volume, with an additional one, the canzone Chiare, fresche e dolci acque, are all found in this edition of Foscolo's 'Essays', for which most of them were originally prepared by Lady Dacre, one of several friends who contributed in this way to the work. In dedicating to her this, the first published edition of the 'Essays', Foscolo says: 'Your poetry has preserved the very spirit of Petrarch with a fidelity hardly to be hoped for and certainly unattained by any other translation'. The dedication, according to Viglione ('Foscolo in Inghilterra', pp. 201–202), Foscolo wrote in English, taking one part from Mr. Lamb, another from Lady Dacre. Not pleased with this he made another attempt independently, then sent the two to Lady Dacre for her choice.

Has also an Italian title-page facing the one in English, and preceding both is the half-title: Traduzioni dal Petrarca — Translations from Petrarch. In this edition are included eight sonnets and two canzoni not previously published, besides fragments from the Triumph of Death, and Stanzas suggested by the canzone Amor se vuot ch' i' torni al giogo antico. Following the Petrarch verse are a few stanzas translated from the 'Morgante maggiore' of Pulci, a sonnet of Tasso, and stanzas of Fortiguerra. All the translations are accompanied by the Italian text. The dedication: To my grandchildren, and the sonnet to Mathias precede the text.

Two of the translations, Movesi il vecchierel and Nè per sereno ciel, are reprinted in S. Waddington's 'The sonnets of Europe', 1886, pp. 31, 32. That of the sonnet Padre del ciel is reprinted in O. Kuhns, 'The great poets of Italy', 1903, p. 136.

pp. 1-298, Petrarch; translations with notes. 'The announcement by an enterprising publisher [G. Bell, publisher of the Bohn Library] of his intention to produce shortly an English Petrarch is the immediate cause of the appearance of the present volume. Three years ago I printed a translation of the Odes, and I had by me ready for the press a version of the Sonnets of Petrarch. As I intended, some time or other, to publish these also, and did not wish to be forestalled from any other quarter, as the edition of the Odes was exhausted, I determined to print both together and at once.' (Preface.) MacGregor's is the first published English translation of the entire Canzoniere of Petrarch, the only omission being the canzone Mai non vo' più cantar. The Triumph of Death is also here included. The editor of the Bohn edition of Petrarch's verse (1859, 1879) acknowledges his debt to MacGregor's translations, a large number of which are reprinted in that collection. Several sonnets and the canzone Vergine bella are reprinted in O. Kuhns, 'The great poets of Italy', 1903.

his translation of the Petrarch Canzoniere—the gift of Miss C. F. Ireland of Cambridge. It is in two volumes. The title in vol. i reads: 'Sonetti, e Canzoni. Parte prima.—Sonnets, and Odes. Part the first'. The following leaf has: 'Sonnets & Odes of Petrarch meant (with those of my selection 1808) for a complete version. The Italian Text to be taken from the little 12^{mo} edition in 2 volumes printed in London, 1784. The Italian Index, or Table of Sonnets and Odes to be printed from an 8^{vo} Florence edition 1745, which I have corrected for that purpose'. The manuscript fills 412 pages closely written in a small hand, beautifully clear, on one side of the leaf (except where notes run over). The notes, which are copious, after the manner of the Italian commentators, many of whom—as Velutello, Tassoni, Castelvetro—are cited, follow the verse on each page, a red line separating them. Citations from Latin classical authors are abundant. This is the only English commentary on the Petrarch verse as a whole which has thus far been attempted. The arrangement of the compositions is the translator's own. The index mentioned, giving first lines in the order of the 1784 edition, refers to pages of the manuscript. It is written in the same hand, filling two leaves, which are inserted in the beginning of the second volume. As implied in the introductory statement, the translations of the edition of 1808 are not here repeated, but they are included in the index, marked by an asterisk. A note at the end of the list says that those 'so marked are translated Pieces in my last Petrarch'. The name of the translator nowhere appears in the manuscript. On the first fly-leaf is written in pencil, 'Translations by Dr. Nott bought at Dr. Scot's sale by N. T. Nov. 1850'; on the first cover of vol. i, in pencil, and on the first fly-leaf of vol. ii, in ink, 'Edgar Walker, Welbeck, Bournemouth'.

Gothic. The text begins f. [D vii] recto, after the title: A briefe declaration of the Authour vpon his visions, takē out of the holy scriptures, and dyuers Orators, Poetes, Philosophers, and true histories; translated out of French into Englishe by Theodore Roest. The 30 folios preceding contain verse in praise of the work by M. Rabilas and Doctor Gerardus Goossenius, the dedication to Princesse Elizabeth Quene of Englande . . ., followed by 6 'Epigrams' and 15 'Sonnets', illustrated each (excepting the first sonnet) by a full-page woodcut. The 'Epigrams' consist of a version of Petrarch's canzone Standomi un giorno; the 'sonnets' are translations in blank verse from the 'Visions' of Du Bellay. These translations, with the blank verse turned into rhyme, are included in the work 'Complaints . . . by Ed. Sp.' described below—the sonnets with the title: The Visions of Bellay, the epigrams with the title: The Visions of Petrarch, formerly translated [i.e. by Clément Marot, 1495-1544]. (See French. Les visions de Pétrarque translatez par C. Marot.) The French edition of 'A Theatre for Worldlings' (such is the running title of the present work) published by J. Day, London, 1568, contained the Epigrams or 'Visions de Pétrarque' by Marot. W. C. Hazlitt ('Handbook to the literature of Great Britain', 1866, p. 625) conjectures an earlier Flemish original. These 'Epigrams', or 'Visions of Petrarch', are thus, as pointed out by Sir Sidney Lee ('Cambridge history of English literature', 1909, vol. iii, pp. 284-285), a translation made by Spenser, at the age of seventeen, from Marot's version, and contributed, along with the 'Sonnets' from Du Bellay, to the English edition of the 'Theatre for Worldlings' in 1569. 'With some changes, these youthful poems were reprinted, twenty-two years later, in an acknowledged collection of Spenser's minor verse, called Complaints, for the whole of which the poet's responsibility goes unquestioned.' The poems are discussed by Grosart in his edition: 'The complete works of Spenser', vol. i, pp. 15 et seq.; by Emil Koeppel: 'Ueber die Echtheit der Edmund Spenser zugeschriebenen "Visions of Petrarch"', Englische Studien, 1891, vol. xv, pp. 53-81; by J. A. A. J. Jusserand in the Athenæum, May 10, 1902. The present copy lacks the title-page. The title given above is copied from the Grolier Club's Catalogue of its Spenser exhibition, 1899.

The editor of the Bohn translation of Petrarch's Rime includes from the Harington collection the sonnets Fiamma dal ciel and Fontana di dolor over Wyatt's name with a query. These sonnets, however, are not included in Wyatt's collected works, London, 1816, nor are they listed in the contents of the Harington MS. (Sir Thomas Wyatt's own manuscript) as given in vol. ii of that edition. The sonnet Pace non trovo is reprinted in Capel Lofft's anthology 'Laura', 1813, vol. iii, p. ccclxxxiii. 'Wyatt chose Petrarch for his first exercises because he was the recognized master of Italian lyrical forms. . . . There is hardly anything more suggestive in literary history than Wyatt's progress seen in his imitation of Italian authors. When studying Petrarch he is like a cripple leaning heavily on crutches, but he gradually and surely progresses, becoming more original as he grows more confident.' (A. K. Foxwell, 'A study of Wyatt's poems', 1911, pp. 81, 102.)

Thirty sonnets (text and translation on opposite pages), preceded by a sonnet by F. B. de Veruille: Sur les amours de Hierosme d'Avost de Laval; the dedication, followed by a sonnet in Italian by D'Avost: Alle medesimo; the portrait of the translator, with Latin stanza by Io. Auratus Poëta-Regius; and again a sonnet in Italian addressed to Signora Filippa del Prato. pp. 60, 61 are numbered 46, 47. The 'Poésies' mentioned in the title (20 numbered leaves including a separate title-page bearing the date M.D.LXXXIII) follow the translations. At the end of these D'Avost has introduced for comparison with his own some sample translations of Petrarch—two sonnets of Vasquin Philieul, and one each of Jacques Peletier and Estienne du Tronchet—to his advantage, in the opinion of abbé Goujet ('Bibliothèque françoise', vol. vii, p. 317): 'D'Avost, dans sa traduction, employe le vers héroïque, mais sa versification est rude, dure & sans politesse. Sa traduction au contraire est assez fidelle & communément littérale'.

The earliest edition of this prose translation, 'dont l'Auteur est nommé George de la Forge, Bourbonnais, dans le catalogue, page xi. des livres de Madame la Princesse trouvés après son décès, l'an 1723, au Château d'Anet', says Goujet ('Bibliothèque française', vii, 310), was published by Berthelemy Verard, Paris, 1514. Another edition was published by Hemon Le Febure, Paris, 1519. (A vellum copy of the edition of 1519 in the Bibliothèque Nationale has the imprint of Jehan de La Garde, Brunet says. See also Essling and Müntz, pp. 244–245, where it is stated that many of the woodcuts of 1520 are from the edition of 1519.) Goujet continues: 'Cet ennuyeux Traducteur voulant faire montre de son érudition & de ses lectures, ne s'est pas contenté de paraphraser son original, il l'a commenté, & il a inséré son commentaire dans le texte. Souvent il entre dans le détail de la vie des personnages que le Poète se contente presque de nommer'. Brown morocco, richly embossed, bearing the binder's stamp: Chambolle-Duru. 1865.

Comprises the entire Rime and the giunta of the second Aldine edition. Prefatory matter includes the translator's dedication to prince Maximilian, his apology (verse), various verses addressed to the translator, and the life of Petrarch and of Laura. The biography of Petrarch is a translation of Vellutello's (in the later form) while that of Laura is translated from Gesualdo. Notes accompany the translations. In his Excuse aux poètes françois, the translator describes his passion for verse. Having been introduced to Petrarch through a French prose version, he set himself to learn Italian that he might produce a translation of the poet—which he finally accomplished in the intervals of military service. That he was 'plus propre en effet à la profession des armes qu'à faire sa cour aux Muses' is the opinion of Goujet ('Bibliothèque françoise', vii, 320) and likewise of François de Grenaille, the translator of Petrarch's De remediis, who says of Maldeghem: 'Il a trop de rudesse en ses vers pour nous représenter la délicatesse du Poëte le plus doux de toute l'Italie & voulant se rendre fidèle Interprète, il défigure vn homme qu'il s'efforce d'embellir'. Flaminio's 'Carminum libellus' was published in 1515, later and fuller editions in 1548 and, in 1727, by Giuseppe Comino: 'Carminum libri VIII', in which the above translation appears as carmen VI of libro I. Reprinted in Comino's second edition of Petrarch's Rime, it was included in 30 or more later editions, from Remondini's in 1751 to that of the Minerva press, 1837. In 1743 Comino issued 'Marci Antonii, Joannis Antonii et Gabrielis Flaminiorum forocorneliensium carmina', in which 'De Delia' appears, (lib. I. vi) pp. 13–15.

The editor of the volume gives the name of Stanislaus Serafin Jagodyński as the probable translator, on the ground of the dedicatory sonnet prefixed, addressed to the princess Władysława Zygmunta, of whom Jagodyński was a courtier. That Jan Grotkowski was the author of the translation appears from the publication noted below, where the entire Triumph of Love is preceded by a sketch of Grotkowski, royal secretary and Polish Internuntius at Naples from 1642 to 1662. He translated the entire Rime, only a small portion of which was ever printed.

4^o. Sig. a⁸, b⁴. Unnumbered ff. 12. Wdct. This version of the first and third chapters of the Triumph of Love, consisting of some 900 lines (eight-syllable, in rhymed stanzas of ten), corresponds in a portion of about two-thirds with the translation of Gomez included in various editions of Montemayor's 'Diana', where, to be sure, it has been much revised, outside of the verses rejected and added. It would appear that it is either an old version appropriated and remodelled by Gomez (who prints it in five-line stanzas) or else that it is a first draft of his own version, afterwards revised, with omissions and additions. The present copy is from the Biblioteca de Salva. The date 1530 is suggested by D. P. Salvà y Mallen in his Catalogue of that collection, who says (p. 309): 'Ignoro quien sea el Castillo traductor de este Triunfo. No han tenido noticia de él ni Nic. Antonio ni Pellicer; verdad es que yo no he visto otro ejemplar en ninguna biblioteca'. B. G. Gallardo ('Ensayo de una biblioteca española', vol. i, col. 610) mentions a manuscript canzoniere containing, ff. 17–25, 'El Triunfo de Amor de Francisco Petrarca traducido por Alvar Gomez en Guadaluja', followed by 'una especie de Lamentacion que lleva intercalados algunos versos italianos de Petrarca'.

LETTERE.

Lettere missive e responsive che lo stesso Petrarca in lingua toscana scrisse al Re Roberto di Napoli, a Benvenuto da Imola, a Giovanni Boccaccio, a Madonna Laura, a D. Gherardo Petrarca, a Tomaso Messinese, a Leonardo Beccamugli et ad altri molti. (In Franco, N. Il Petrarquista. 1539, and in later editions.)

The above title is taken from the title-page of 'Li due Petrarchisti' of N. Franco and E. Giovanni, 1623. These letters are for the most part pure inventions.

Pistola di M. Francesco Petrarca a Lionardo Beccamugli.—Lettera di Petrarca, che ragiona delle miserie di questa uita.—Lettera di M. Francesco Petrarca al S. Pandolfo Malatesta. (In Prose antiche di Dante, Petrarca et Boccaccio [Part I: Epistolae—Italian]. 1547. pp. 33, 44-46, 74-75.)

The first and third are reprinted in the edition of O. Turchetto, 'Prose antiche di Dante, Petrarca et Boccaccio', 1851, pp. 29-30, 36.

A GIACOMO COLONNA.

Petrarch's letters in Italian, transcribed from the originals in the possession of Lord Holland [with a facsimile of the manuscript]. (In Foscolo, U. Essays on Petrarch. 1821. pp. 205-209.—Same. 1823. pp. 271-275.)

Two letters addressed to Giacomo Colonna, bishop of Lombez, dated June 10, 1338, and April 8, 1341. The originals were mislaid by Italian Prose ascribed to Petrarch—Lettere.

Foscolo and undiscovered for three years. This occasioned the curious advertisement engraved and printed beneath the facsimile letters in the published edition of 1823. The letters are reprinted in Meneghelli's 'Sopra due lettere italiane attribuite al Petrarca', 1824, a tract discussing their authenticity; in the Italian translation of the Essays (where they are printed in the 'Saggio sopra il carattere del Petrarca'), 1824-59; in Fracassetti's translation, 'Lettere di Francesco Petrarca', 1863, vol. i, pp. 10-12; and in E. Levi's 'I Saggi sul Petrarca di Ugo Foscolo'. Meneghelli's tract is commented on by Foscolo in a letter to Lord Holland (see his 'Epistolario', 1860, pp. 328-329). He does not, however, take up the question of the authenticity of the letters. See Hortis, 413.

Petrarch's political ideals are discussed pp. 26–38. The author refers to the canzone Spirto gentil 'ch' io non esito a dire indirizzata al Tribune'. This calls forth a letter from Fracassetti (published later in d'Ancona's 'Dal mio carteggio'), who sustains the author's view, taking occasion to refute the arguments of Carducci just published ('Rime di Petrarca sopra argomenti storici', etc., 1876—Fracassetti's letter is dated May 7, 1876). D'Ancona's reply to this letter is included in the note at the end of the present study (pp. 72–83): Del personaggio al quale è diretta la canzone del Petrarca Spirto gentile: Stefanuccio Colonna o Cola di Rienzi.

A citation is given from Van Kampen's 'Geschiedenis der letterkunde' referring to Petrarch's journey in 1330 and his meeting with 'Socrates' (Louis Sanctus de Beeringen). Curiously the name of Dante is given instead of Petrarca. The note calls forth replies from A. d'Ancona, G. Zanella, and others in the next number of the Giornale, cols. 91-92.

The dedication to R. P. Fulgentio Cavalli by Baldini (the publisher) seems to imply his authorship of the essays. Marsand, having taken this view in his first bibliography ('Rime del Petrarca', 1819-20, vol. ii, p. 414), enters the work under its title in his 'Biblioteca petrarchesca' (p. 228), with no references in either case. Ferrazzi considers the work anonymous, but the Catalogue of the Bibliothèque Nationale, with good reason, makes Baldini the author.

The sonnet, which begins: O novella Tarpea in cui s'asconde, is, with slight variations, the one found in the giunta of 'Il Petrarcha . . . impresso p li heredi di Filippo di Giunta', 1522, with the title 'Giacopo de Garatori da Imola a .M. F. P.', and in many later editions. The two texts with their diverse titles are brought together in the Comino edition of 1722, pp. 372-373, and are so copied in the later editions of Muratori, Carrer, etc. The Canzone morale likewise finds place in the Comino and later editions.

Preceding the sonnet O novella Tarpea in the present edition of 'La bella mano' is one beginning: Io provai già quanto la soma è grave, under the title: 'Di Lancialotto da Piacenza a M. Antonio da Ferrara'. The two are printed together by L. C. Ferrucci in Giornale arcadico, 1858, tom. cliii, pp. 96-98, under the title, 'Due sonetti d' Antonio da Ferrara colle risposte di M. F. Petrarca' (Pet QG 1320).

The dedication to Pietro Calbo is signed: Girolamo Marcatelli, canonico padouano. 'Non hà molti anni che fu data alla stampa vna lettera sotto nome di Senuccio del Bene amicissimo del Petrarca scritta al Signor di Verona della detta incoronatione piena di tante ineptie, & cose indegne, & impertinenti, ch' è vna vergogna.' This judgment of Beccadelli, who goes into detail in demonstrating the imposture of Marcatelli (see his 'Vita del Petrarca', p. 221 in Tomasini, or elsewhere), is concurred in by Petrarch students generally. See Hortis, 'Scritti inediti di Francesco Petrarca', pp. 37–42. On the other hand, the anonymous editor of the edition of 1874 finds indications of genuineness, and believes that an original by Del Bene may have been tampered with by successive copyists who amused themselves with heightening its color, until the absurdities found in Marcatelli's edition resulted.

'Cette étude sera la contribution de l'Institut historique belge aux solennités du sixième centenaire de la naissance de Pétrarque.' The subject of the present essay is the friend 'Socrates' to whom Petrarch addressed many letters, (see Fam. IX:2)—Lodewijk van Kempen, Louis de Campine, as De Sade makes him out. The present writer identifies him with 'Ludovicus de Beringhen dictus Sanctus' named in the papal documents appended, pp. 29-59.

* * The comment in the three editions above cited is addressed to Ferdinando Ranalli. The author supports the opinion of De Sade in favor of the senator Stefano Colonna as the person addressed in the canzone, reinforcing it with arguments of his own—an opinion afterwards maintained in the admirable study of Carducci ('Rime di Francesco Petrarca sopra argomenti storici morali e diversi', 1876, pp. 42-61). Betti's arguments are answered by Zefrino Re in 'I biografi del Petrarca', pp. 39-50, which brings out from Betti further discussion published as Dialogo primo in the following:

In 1787 Girolamo Zulian of Venice interested himself in the restoration of the Petrarch house at Arquà and provided a visitors' register, 'Il codice di Arquà', for the preservation of the names of those drawn to the hallowed spot, and of poetic or other expressions of sentiment excited by its associations. The present publication was edited from the first volume of the Concerning this form of verse Crescimbeni ('Dell' istoria della volgar poesia', vol. i, p. 391) has the following note: 'Benchè per lo più questa maniera si truovi usata in componimenti brevi, come in madrigali, in ottave e in sonetti: nondimeno fu stesa fino alle canzoni, avendone Filippo Massini tessuta una di versi tolti dal Petrarca, la quale è l' ultimo componimento delle sue Rime impresse, ed è assai bella; e Giulio Bidelli Sanese prima di lui ne fece in Capitoli, e in Poemetti d' ottava rima, tratti parimente dalle Rime del Petrarca, uno de' quali è di dugento ottave . . . e questi Centoni di Bidelli tanto più sono degni di stima, quanto più mantengono l' obbligo di non alterare i versi dell' Autore, da cui sono presi, e di non prenderne più d' uno da un medesimo luogo'.

Giovanni Boccaccio*, is published in Boni's edition of the Rime, 1809-10, tom. ii, pp. xiii-xxiii. An English version of the same is given in E. Hutton's Giovanni Boccaccio, 1910, p. 230. Rossetti ('Petrarca, G. Celso e Boccaccio', p. 357) was puzzled as to the source of this 'Ritratto'. His conclusion was, 'L'abate Boni conobbe dunque e fece uso di quelle epistole diverse che a diversi scrisse il Boccaccio nel loro declinare della vita'.

cio to Petrarch) is here followed by that of Beccadelli. The Vatican text is reprinted in M. G. Ponta's 'Dante e il Petrarca', 1894, pp. 8-9. In the volume 'Boccaccio-Funde' (entered above) the poem, in the Palatine text, has the title: Versus Johannis boccaccij ad franciscam petrarcham cum ei librum dantis ad auinionem transmitteret transcripti ex originalibus ipsius boccaccij.

pp. 281-358 of Rossetti's work, under the title: Boccaccio, suo elogio inedito del Petrarca, contain the above 'testo originale', from the Morelli manuscript in the Biblioteca Marciana, Rossetti's Italian translation, and the text from cod. M. IV. F. 61 in the library of the University of Breslau: Francesco Petrarchae de Florentia laureati incipit vita ab excellenti ejus discipulo Johanne Boccaccio de Certaldo inchoata, ac post ejus obitum perfecta et correctata magistro Petro de Castelletto ordinis hermitarum Sancti Augustini, qui dicti oratoris atque poetae mores atque gesta ex longa ejus familiaritate cognovit. The Castelletto document first follows closely the eulogy of Boccaccio as found in the Morelli manuscript, then borrows from the second part of the funeral oration of Fra Bonaventura da Peraga (published by Marsand in his 'Biblioteca petrarchesca', pp. xxxiii-xxxviii), finishing with the editor's own account.

Hortis ('Studi sulle opere latine del Boccaccio', pp. 315-316) calls attention to the evidence that Boccaccio's eulogy was composed before he made the acquaintance of Petrarch—Rossetti conjectures between 1343 and 1345—to which facts certain inaccuracies and omissions may be due. The birth of the poet is placed in 1307; the name Pietro is given to cardinal Giovanni Colonna; Laura is regarded as an imaginary creation; his knowledge of Petrarch's writings was scanty. On the other hand, details of the coronation are given with a fullness such that Rossetti concludes that Boccaccio was present on the occasion. His portraiture is the sketch of one who had looked with admiration at the man himself. 'Da lui abbiamo' (says Hortis) 'la conferma che il discorso di Laurea del codice magliabechiano in onore delle Muse, e il privilegio di cittadino romano e di poeta laureato concesso al Petrarca non sono invenzioni di retori, ma documenti genuini.'

From a copy made by Costanzo Gazzera of this portion of Gabriele Bucci's 'Memoriale quadripartitum', an autograph manuscript in the National Library of Turin. Bucci (born about 1430) was a member of Bonaventura's order. Bucci's manuscript escaped destruction by the fire of 1904, and the entire work was published by Faustino Curlo in 1911 (see Bucci, G.). The discourse as found is incomplete—'L'orazione quindi non deve dirsi mancante, perchè o non venne scritta, o perchè nell' esemplare che serviva di testo non eravi di più', Gazzera says in the letter accompanying his copy to Marsand. The first part of the oration is reprinted as an appendix to Castelletti's revision of Boccaccio's life of Petrarch in Solerti's 'Vite di Dante, Petrarca e Boccaccio', pp. 273-274. Dr. Curlo notes Marsand's correction in the Errata of the date MCCCCLXXIII to MCCCCLXXIII, calling attention to the actual date in the manuscript, as given in the title in his edition, 'M^o-CCC^o LXX^o III^o'.

The 'Lezione' is by Michelangelo Buonarroti the younger (1568-1646). It is characterized by Charles Eliot Norton ('List of books relating to Michelangelo', Harvard Bibliographical contributions, no. 3, p. 7) as 'a thoroughly academic performance, with few and feeble thoughts to a multitude of words'. 'I have in general followed the text of De Sade, correcting, by the aid of his latest biographer Baldelli, the few inaccuracies in his memoirs,' is the author's statement in the preface, preparing one in a degree for the looseness of style which characterizes the work. The Petrarch portrait, vol. i, is copied from the Tofanelli-Morghen engraving (88 × 118 mm.): J. Brown sculp.^t Laura, vol. ii, bust in profile: A. Hervieu del.^t—J. Brown sculp.^t, is without resemblance to the usual types. A clipping bearing the author's autograph is inserted. A second copy, in two volumes, does not show the name J. Brown beneath the portrait.

First issued by Mairessi, Torino, 1735. Eleven sonnets of Petrarch are distributed through the work. The Dissertazione intorno al sonetto, following the preface, is largely devoted to Petrarch. This, with certain strictures upon the preface to the 'Rettorica d' Aristotile fatta in lingua toscana' by Biagio Schiavo (Venice, 1732), seems to have called forth Schiavo's 'Prefazione alle rime di M. Laura', published anonymously in 1741, which is an invective against Ceva. See Appendix II.

Contents:—1^a–10^a, [Epistolarum ad M. Brutum liber singularis]; 10^a–31^b, [Ad Quintum Fratrem Epistolarum libri III] beginning: [E]TSI NON Dubitabam; 31^b–33^a, [Epistola ad Octavianum] beginning: [S]I per tuas legiões; 33^a–176^b, [Epistolarum ad Atticum libri XVI], beginning: [P]ETITIONIS Nostræ, ending: quod ut facias te uehementer etiam atq; etiam rogo. Vale; 176^b–177^a, [Petrarcha ad Ciceronem], beginning: [C]iceroni suo salutem. Epistolas tuas diu multūq; pquisitas [Fam. xxiv:3]; 177^a–181^b, [Attici uita] beginning: [P]omponius Atticus ab origine ultima, ending: Sepultus est iuxta uiam Appiam ad quintum lapidem in monumēto | Quinti Ceciliū auunculi sui; colophon.

The second edition of Cicero's Letters to Atticus, etc., the first having issued from the press of Sweynheym and Pannartz in Rome the same year (Hain, 5213). The source of the text of these editions is the Medicean manuscript Laur. Plut. 49, 18, whose connection with the one discovered and copied by Petrarch (see Fam. XXI:10, XVIII:12, XXIV:3) is discussed by Count Giuliani, 'F. Petrarca e la sua scoperta delle epistole di Cicero'; Viertel, 'Die Wiederauffindung von Cicero's Briefen'; Voigt and O. E. Schmidt, 'Die handschriftliche Ueberlieferung von Cicero's Briefen'; Rühl, 'Ueber den Codex Laurentianus 53, 35'; Hofmann, in

Cicero's 'Ausgewählte Briefe'; R. F. Leighton, 'The Medicean manuscripts of Cicero's letters'. The Medicean text ends with the words: 'de Caesaris actis iterposita sit nō seruēt⁹' toward the end of f. 175^b in the present edition. Ernesti asserts ('Ciceronis Opera ex recensione I. A. Ernesti', 1775, vol. iii, pt. 2, p. 7) that the Petrarch letter, attributed by the earlier editors to Atticus, is found in no other edition, but it appears 'sub vero Petrarchae nomine' in the edition of J. Badius Ascensius, 1531, f. ci (see 'Ciceronis Opera edidit I. C. Orellius', 1831, vol. iii, pt. 2, p. xxi). Earlier than this, indeed, it received its true ascription, being the first one of the 'Epistolæ ad quosdam ex illustribus antiquis quasi sui contemporanei forent' in Simon de Luere's edition: 'Librorum Francisci Petrarche' 1501, and in the later editions of the collected works, 1503, 1554, 1581, as well as in the Epistolæ of 1601.

322 × 224 mm. Marginal manuscript notes in a modern hand. Illuminated initial at the beginning, initials in red and blue throughout the work. ff. 178, 180, 181 are supplied in facsimile, to which the two variations from Hain in the Colophon (diffunderis for diffuderis, and C. before EPISTOLAE AD ATTICVM) may be due.

This work was listed in Tomasini's Catalogue of the books donated by Petrarch to St. Mark's church in Venice as 'Alphabetum Persicum, Comanicum, et Latinum Anonymi scriptum anno MCCCIII. Die XI Julii'. ('Petrarcha redivivus', p. 73.) Here Klaproth first had his attention directed to it. He procured a copy of the manuscript, from which he prepared the present edition, which has many errors, according to the editor of the following edition.

Edited by T. Buonaventuri. La bella mano, a collection of sonnets and canzoni first published in 1472 by Scipio Malpighi of Bologna, is one of the best-known imitations of Petrarch. 'Ce poëte ne se contente pas d'imiter Pétrarque', says Ginguéné ('Histoire littéraire d'Italie', iii. 479), 'il le copie souvent et il n'est pas rare de le voir en emprunter des vers presque entiers. On doit penser que ce qu'il imite le plus, ce sont les défauts. Ainsi, les recherches de pensées, les oppositions continuelles, la vie et la mort, la rougeur et la pâleur, le chaud et le froid, le cœur qui est de feu, puis de glace, ou l'un et l'autre à la fois, tout cela se retrouverait dans la Bella Mano, si jamais le Canzoniere de Pétrarque était perdu'.

The Raccolta di antiche rime, first included in the edition of 1531, was compiled as a supplement to Bernardo di Giunta's collection 'Sonetti e canzoni di diversi antichi autori toscani'. In it are found verses attributed to Petrarch: p. 124, Fr. Petrarca a Sennuccio, the sonnet Siccome il padre del folle Fetonte; p. 146, the ballata Donna mi vene spesso; pp. 151-152, sonnets addressed to Petrarch by Antonio da Ferrara, with reply to the first, Perchè non caggi nelle scure cave; pp. 153-161, canzone on the death of Petrarch by Antonio da Ferrara.

pp. 158-175 give an account of the 'Cose volgare di Petrarca' published by Aldus in 1501, with the interesting letters of Lorenzo di Pavia to Isabella of Este concerning the copy especially prepared for her. Didot is responsible for the tradition that the Aldine type was made in imitation of Petrarch's handwriting. His interpretation of the phrase 'dal quale questa forma a lettera per lettera è levata' in the letter 'Agli lettori' of Aldus printed at the end of the Petrarch is: 'qu'on avait suivi la forme des lettres d'après l'écriture de Pétrarque en imitant les contours de chacune d'elles trait pour trait'. Concerning this M. de Nolhac says ('Le Canzoniere autographe de Pétrarque', p. 12), 'On ne s'explique pas le contre-sens énorme sur lequel A. Firmin-Didot a bâti toute une théorie typographique, celle de l'origine du caractère aldin' (quoting the translation above), and adds: 'Une écriture du quatorzième siècle servant de modèle pour fonder les caractères de la minuscule aldine! Il y avait pourtant de quoi faire réfléchir de moins sérieux écrivains que Didot'. pp. 385-389 discuss the second edition, 'Il Petrarca', issued in 1514.

This article, the first pages of which review the work of the Countess de Genlis, is really the preliminary sketch of the work afterwards expanded into the Essays on Petrarch. The article was first promised to Jeffrey for the Edinburgh review, after the publication of the author's papers on Dante in 1818. In December 1819 the manuscript was in the hands of the editor, who acknowledged it, sent in March of the following year fifty pounds in payment for it, and promised its publication in May. Foscolo, impatient to see it in print, had eight copies struck off, not for sale, in March. When in August it had not yet appeared in the Review, Jeffrey justifying the delay on the ground of other matter which could not so well be put off, Foscolo withdrew the manuscript. It was then solicited by Murray, editor of the Quarterly review, who paid a hundred guineas for it. Contrary to the hopes of both author and editor, the article was received without enthusiasm, the fact due, as Foscolo believed, to the editorial revision to which it had been subjected: 'Il signor Gifford editore lo ha tanto alterato e raffazzonato a modo suo, ch'io rileggendolo, non ho più inteso ciò che avea scritto' (Foscolo's 'Epistolario', 1860, p. 302).

Dedicated to Bonifatio Pignoli; at the end is a letter to Francesco Alunno. The portrait in this and the following editions is the one used by Bindoni in his edition of the Rime, 1541. See Part I (Rime).

'Infatti è tema del dialogo, che si finge passato fra due interlocutori Sannio e Coccio, chi fosse Laura e la vita e le avventure del Petrarca in senso ironico e di dileggio.' (S. Bongi, 'Annali di Gabriel Giolito de' Ferrari', 1890, vol. i, p. 23.) In the letter to Alunno the author says: 'Io mi do a intendere che tutto quello che c'hò chiosato, se ben tutto è sogno, a uoi parrà uisione per rispetto de l'amicitia'.

'Poco di vero e di utile per la storia letteraria può trarsi dalla lettura di questo Dialogo, che ha l'aria più di romanzo e di visione che d'altro, uscito dalla testa di Niccolò Franco pochi mesi dopo gli altri suoi Dialoghi [piacevoli], non meno di quello pieni di ghiribizzi e di grilli...' The author introduces the story from De rebus memorandis, book II: 'Come un buffone può trovare maggior favore d'un Sapiente', as it is called in Papanti's 'Dante secondo la tradizione', with a new reading, authenticated from various manuscripts, which presents Petrarch's attitude towards Dante in a more favorable light. In support of this view he also publishes, for the first time, 'Dominus franciscus petrarca in laudem Dantis', from a manuscript in the collection of Carlo Morbio of Milan (mentioned already by Romussi in 'Petrarca a Milano'). This eulogy consisting of 26 lines of verse reappears in 'Miscellanea dantesca' published by Lodovico Frati in 1884, where it bears the title: Carmina magistri Benevenuti de Imola in laudem clarissimi poetae Dantis, being edited from cod. Magl. VIII, 10. 1439. In Lacaita's edition of his Commentary on the 'Divina commedia' the verse appears as a part of Benvenuto's Introduction.

The work planned for six volumes reached only the third. Of the volume on Boccaccio, pp. 184-192 treat of his friendship with Petrarch; Bd. iii, pp. 418-447 treat of 'Petrarca's Stellung innerhalb seiner Zeit'. Two copies of 'Petrarca's Leben und Werke'.

'Die Originalität desselben [Petrarca's Leben] liegt in der Weise, wie es die lateinischen Schriften Petrarca's behandelt... Diese Arbeiten hat Koerting nicht allein eingehender studirt als irgend einer seiner Vorgänger, sondern er hat sie auch unter Gesichtspunkten betrachtet, welche der Untersuchung ein ganz besonderes Interesse verleihen. Er ist bestrebt gewesen, jedes dieser Werke nach seinem innersten Wesen und in seiner Eigenthümlichkeit zu begreifen, und zu ergründen, inwiefern sich hier inmitten der ascetischen Ideen des Mittelalters und der antiquarischen Erudition der individuelle Geist des Verf. und die Spuren einer neuen Denk- und Empfindungsweise offenbaren.... Dieses ist also der Mangel von Koertings Arbeit; er hat den italienischen Dichter nicht zusammen mit dem lateinischen Schriftsteller zu begreifen vermocht, sie von einander getrennt und den einen zu Gunsten des anderen in den Schatten gestellt.' (Gaspary.)

Extracted from Mémoires de littérature tirés des registres de l'Académie Royale des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres, 1738-43, tom. xv, pp. 746-794, xvii, pp. 390-490.

The first portion of the memoir was read before the Academy by the author, the 5th of July, 1740; the remaining portion, covering the poet's life from his coronation in 1341 to the end in 1374, was sent by the author to the Academy, and read on three different dates (Dec. 1741, Aug., Sept., 1742) before that body. The death of La Bastie, August 5, 1742, left the work unfinished ('Il n'y manque que l'article qui devoit contenir un grand détail sur la Bibliothèque de Pétrarque . . . il est dans ses papiers qui furent remis par son ordre à Mr. Falconet', says De Sade, tom. i, p. lxi). The work was never published outside the Academy Mémoires. The author was a correspondent and collaborateur of Muratori. De Sade after quoting journalistic comments on the work—'il ne reste plus rien à dire de Pétrarque; son portrait est achevé, sa vie est parfaitement connue' and the like—goes on to say that the author 'par une fatalité singulière & inconcevable s'est trompé dans presque tous les événemens de la vie de Pétrarque', a verdict consistent with the purpose of his own work. For Bimard de la Bastie finds that Petrarch's Laura, instead of being mistress of the House of de Sade in Avignon, lived and died in an obscure home in the neighborhood of Vaucluse, and must have been buried in a near-by chapel—not in l'Église des Cordeliers, a conclusion necessary to refute in order that the author of the 'Mémoires pour la vie de Pétrarque' might establish her relation to his own family.

Lapo da Castiglionchio (Lapo di Albertuccio de' Zanchini da Castiglionchio), called also Iacopo Fiorentino, was a Florentine lawyer of scholarly tastes between whom and Petrarca, says Mr. Hollway Calthrop, a constant commerce of books was kept up. He was an admirer of the poet and had in his possession a manuscript of the last 13 books of the Familiar letters, which is now in the Laurentian library. Four letters of Petrarca to Lapo (Fam. VII:16, XII:8, XVIII:12, Var. 45) are included in the appendix of the present work, whose index shows also some 50 references to the poet.

This sonnet, printed at the end of the chapter entitled: Iustinae Leui Perottae cultus in Petraracham, was sent to Tomasini by Torquato Perotti, chamberlain of Pope Urban VIII. It had already been published by G. A. Gilio di Fabriano, at the end of 'Topica poetica', Venezia, 1580 (Carducci, in 'Rime di F. Petrarca', 1870, p. 4). It was believed by Tomasini to answer the question which had puzzled the commentators, from Da Tempo down, as to the person addressed in Petrarch's La gola e 'l sonno e l'oziosa piume. Agreeing with this conclusion, Menage reprints the sonnet ('Lezione sopra 'l sonetto vii di M. F. Petrarca', 1690, pp. 7-8), adding: 'E ciò si vede chiaramente, sì per le cose in questi due sonetti contenute, che sono d'un istesso sentimento, sì per le medesime desinenze; anzi per le medesime voci poste in rima ...' This correlation made a pretty argument, which held until later critics pointed out the improbability of the early origin of verse so polished, and, with Tassoni, judged it 'Un bel pasticcio di un cinquecentista'. Carducci (op. cit. pp. 3-4) well sums up the case.

4^o. ff. 159, [1]. Port. in t.-p., wdct.

Preceding the text, is the Dialogo di frate Hieronymo Maripetro venetiano del sacro ordine de Minori di Osseruanza al Petrarca theologo et spirituale introductiuo, illustrated by a woodcut. The text, beginning f. 9^a, with the title: Sonetti et canzoni di messer Francesco Petrarca diuenuto theologo et spirituale per gratia di Dio et studio di frate Hieronimo Maripetro minoritano, consists of a parody on the entire Canzoniere, the canzoni following the sonnets. At the end is a dialogue in sonnet form: Collocutori critico et Petrarcha. The portrait is an engraving (95 × 118 mm.) after the Laurentian miniature but without the laurel wreath, and showing the wart on the cheek as in the miniature of cod. Vat. 3198. It is the face copied in the Giolito portrait of 1538, and modified in the Giolito medallion used in the editions of 'Il Petrar-chista', 1539-43, and of the Rime, 1547, 1557, and by Bindoni in 1541.

'è rifatto a penna, comprensivamente al ritratto del Petrarca, dal bravo calligrafo Antonio Morozzi di Faenza, che esattamente imitollo da un esemplare favorito per cortesia del ch. Sig. Scipione Casali di Forlì', says Zaccaria ('Catalogo di opere stampate per Francesco Marcolini', p. 75). It is from the same original as the portrait in the preceding edition, but is turned to the right. The woodcut on reverse of the title-page in the preceding edition is not reprinted in the present one. Bound in Venetian painted leather.

'Un' accurata e diligente notizia delle edizioni tutte del Canzoniere di Francesco Petrarca le quali sono state pubblicate da' primi tempi', quoting the preface. The bibliography is preceded by a tabulated Quadro cronologico delle edizioni del Canzoniere, pp. 297–308. Three appendices give titles of commentaries of special sonnets and canzoni, of general works on Petrararch, and of translations from the Rime. This bibliography, which is reprinted in the editions of Ciardetti, 1821, 1822, and of Pagni, 1826, should not be confused with the 'Biblioteca petrarchesca' entered below, a catalogue of Marsand's collection, in which the descriptions often vary from those in the present work.

Contents:—Introduzione [containing the inscription on the Petrarch house in Arezzo, the life of Petrarch ascribed to Antonio da Tempo, from the edition of the Rime of 1471, and the funeral oration of Padre Bonaventura].—Parte 1^a. Edizioni del Canzoniere e de' Trionfi.—Parte 2^a. Scrittori intorno alla vita ed al Canzoniere del Petrarca.—Breve ragionamento intorno al celibato di Laura.—Parte 3^a. Codici manoscritti del Canzoniere e de' Trionfi.

The portrait of Petrarch is an engraving (98 × 138 mm.): Agricola dipinse, Borani disegno, Bernardi incise. Facing p. xxv is an engraving of the Petrarch house in Arezzo. The four plates at the end show facsimiles from early editions. The collection was sold in 1826 to Charles X. of France, and was deposited in the library of the Louvre. It was wholly destroyed in the conflagration kindled in May, 1871, by the French communards. 'Edizione di sole cencinquanta copie in quarto, esemplare N^o. 40.' The leaf containing errata is bound in before the portrait. A second copy, no. 134, has the errata at the end.

Vols. i, ii, are 3^e éd., augmentée. The title in vols. iii, iv, reads: Menagiana; ou les bons mots et remarques critiques, historiques, morales et d'érudition de M. Ménage, recueillies par ses amis. The new Preface begins: 'Les deux nouveaux volumes du Menagiana qu'on donne au public sont de l'illustre M. de la Monnoye. Voici son dessein, comme il l'a exposé lui-même . . . "Je ne m'étois d'abord proposé que de courtes notes sur le Menagiana. . . Je croyois n'en être que le réviseur, j'en suis devenu l'amplificateur". Accordingly, in vol. iv, pp. 80-85, M. de La Monnoye corrects a statement found in vol. ii, p. 99, regarding the life of Caesar attributed to Julius Celsus, and is the first one to suggest Petrarch's authorship of the work, now well established. On p. 86 is recounted the story of Petrarch's acquisition and loss of the manuscript of Cicero's De Gloria.

4°. ff. [8], [4], xxxvi, [80].

The notes on Fortunio's 'Regole grammaticali' are written in the broad margins of a copy of the edition of Ancona, 1516. (Its title-folio is lacking.) On the fly-leaf facing a ii: Moretto, Cittadino Mondano li lettori saluta, with the date M.D.XXI at the end. Of the 80 leaves bound in at the end of the 'Regole' 56 contain a commentary on Petrarch. On the last 21 leaves is written Moreto's Rimario (see below). Apostolo Zeno in Fontanini (edition of 1753, vol. i, p. 77) says, quoting Olimpia Moreto: Il detto suo padre è stato uomo di molte lettere, e in pronto tenea per la stampa, che mai però non si fece, una dichiarazione di tutti i vocaboli oscuri di Dante, e del Petrarca, messa per ordine di alfabeto e accompagnata dalla sposizione de' più difficili luoghi, che nel Canzoniere e ne' Trionfi dello stesso Petrarca s'incontrano'. It was the belief of Count Giacomo Manzoni, from whom the present volume was obtained, that it contained all that exists of the unpublished 'Sposizione'. Count Manzoni purchased the manuscript from the collection of marchese Giovanni Constabili di Ferrara.

[—] F. P. poetae clariss. vita feliciter incipit, auctoris incerti anno 1463, ex MS. v. c. Iacobi Gaffarelli. (In Tomasini, J. P. Petrarcha redivivus. 1650. pp. 185-194.)

The 'Epitoma in vitas scriptorum illustrium Latinae linguae' of Secco Polenton (b. 1375-6, d. 1446-8) exists in two manuscripts, the briefer summary, cod. Riccardiano (L. I, iv, 191), and the Gaffarelli manuscript now in the Museo Civico of Padua (C. R. M. 105), which is perhaps derived from the autograph. The life of Petrarch was published anonymously in the 15th century, with the title: 'Francisci Petrarce poete clarissimi vita feliciter incipit', without place, date, or name of printer. Marsand had a copy ('Biblioteca petrarchesca', pp. 159-161) which he believed to be unique. Rossetti also possessed a copy, noted on p. 292 of his 'Petrarca, Giul. Celso e Boccaccio', and in his Catalogue of 1834, p. 3, no. 8. This published life corresponds very closely with the Gaffarelli manuscript used by Tomasini, to whom the edition was unknown. It begins: 'Franciscus Petrarcha Florentinus fuit exul namque patria natus est'. The Riccardian manuscript begins: 'Hoc etiam genere canendi lingua patria, ut ceteros praetermittam, Franciscus Petrarcha doctus vir'. It was published by Lorenzo Mehus as follows:

Polentone, Secco.

— Accipe nunc alteram [vitam] Francisci Petrarchae ex eodem depromptam codice [Bibliothecae Riccardianae] diversamque ab illa quam edidit Philippus Tomasinus. (In Traversarius, A. Camaldulensis. Latinae epistolae [edited by] L. Mehus. 1759. Vol. i, pp. cxcviii–cc.)

— F. Petrarchae poetae clarissimi vita feliciter incipit. (In Solerti, A., editor. Le vite di Dante, Petrarca e Boccaccio. [1904.] pp. 320–328.)

The text of the Gaffarelli manuscript with the variants of the 15th-century edition, prepared by Luigi Suttina, is here followed by that of the Riccardian, collated by Carlo Nardini. Some introductory lines from the 'Epitoma' precede the beginning words of the earlier editions.

Four copies are noted of an undated edition, which the author believes may be a poor reprint of the so-called Jenson edition (Gabriele and Filippo Pietro, Venice, 1473). A second conjecture is that the 'Jenson' is an improved reprint of the edition in question; a third, that both were derived from the same manuscript, 'che, Dio sa come avrà allora avuto del credito presso i due diversi tipografi'. Of the four copies two were in the possession of the author, one was owned by count Gaetano Melzi, and the fourth by Lord Spencer. The volumes are further discussed by marchese Raffaelli in 'Esemplare dell' ancipite singolarissima edizione del Canzoniere nella comunale di Fermo'.

The first two parts of the work present an exhaustive account of the unabridged Vitae de viris illustribus of Petrarch, hitherto known only in the Italian translation published in 1476 and 1527 and in the Vita Caesaris long attributed to Julius Celsus, but in reality a part of the work in question. Professor Schneider of Breslau, in his edition of the previous year 'Francisci Petrarchae Historia Caesaris', had forestalled the author's conclusions with regard to this portion of the De Viris. His publication of the Breslau manuscript of the other Lives during the five years following (1829-34) found in Rossetti's work a comprehensive introduction, 'un ouvrage capital, quoique systématique et plein d'erreurs de détail' (De Nolhac, 'Le De viris illustribus', p. 10). In the third part of the work, Boccaccio's 'De vita et moribus Francisci Petrarchae', published for the first time, with an Italian translation by Rossetti, is preceded by Serie cronologica delle Vite già note del Petrarca, pp. 285-312; and is followed by Altra Vita del Petrarca riprodotta e finita dal maestro Pietro da Castelletto, pp. 337-358. On p. 386 a 'sonetto inedito del Petrarca', Sì mi fa risentire a l'aura sparsi, and on p. 387, a madrigal, Per riposarsi sulle calde piume, are printed from a manuscript of the Canzoniere in the possession of the author.

With the text of Petrarch's sonnets opposite the 'Risposte'. 'In the volume entitled "Note compendiose che riguardano la sola, e semplice dottrina sopra le . . . giornate del Filalete" (probably by T. Ceva) there is a letter, real or pretended, to Ceva, which says: "Una certa signora D. Pellegra Rossetti siciliana siassi impegnata di rispondere a nome di Madonna Laura a tutti i sonetti di Petrarca non solamente per rime, ma colle medesime parole. Ecco il suo Sonetto Proemiale: Nell'udir di tue rime il vario suono". The writer then proceeds to give the whole of the first sonnet, which, as will be seen from the first line, varies somewhat from the printed text. But the person referred to is evidently the author of this volume. She was the wife of Jacopo Rossetti, and wrote some dramatic pieces designed to be set to music (see Quadrio, iii. 2, p. 492). Her Arcadian name was Ersilia Gortinia.' (Note of W. Fiske.)

Without date, name of printer, or place, printed on a folded sheet of vellum showing traces partly legible of an erased manuscript of the 14th century. The citation following the opening sentence appears in the 'Breuissima descrizione della vita di M. Francesco Petrarca' found in the Roville editions of the Rime of 1558, 1564, 1574 (no edition of 1576 by this printer is known to bibliographers), and attributed by Solerti to Ridolfi. Following the citation is a paragraph on Linterno and the poet's library, after which is the account of his life at Linterno taken from the biography 'a dicto Rouillio conscriptę'. Of the composition and printing of the sketch, Arrigoni ('Notice sur vingt-cinq manuscrits ayant fait partie de la bibliothèque de Pétrarque', p. 17) says: 'Au XVI^e siècle le moine régisseur de la Chartreuse de Garegnano . . . voulant les [manuscrits] légués à son monastère deux siècles auparavant par Pétrarque] marquer d'un signe caractéristique pour en authentifier la possession, fit imprimer sur 2 feuillets en parchemin un abrégé de la Vie de Pétrarque rédigé par Guillaume Rovillio, et par d'autres écrivains, en faisant ressortir principalement le séjour du grand poète à Linterno'. The two vellum leaves are found in ten of the volumes described in Arrigoni's list, and are mentioned with nine of the same collection in Sotheby's Catalogue of 1899. Voynich ('Eighth list: Unknown and lost books', 1902, no. 3277) describes a copy now in the British Museum. The present copy was obtained from Voynich.

[Sade, Jacques François Paul Aldonce de.] Mémoires pour la vie de François Pétrarque, tirés de ses œuvres et des auteurs contemporains, avec des notes ou dissertations, & les pièces justificatives. Amsterdam, Arskée & Mercus, M.D.CC.-LXIV-LXVII. Pet + SAS 7

3 v. 4°. Vign. in t.-pp., 2 ports., orn.

The 'Pièces justificatives' at the end of tom. iii consist of 35 numbers and include Petrarch's Letter to posterity, the biographies by Villani and Vergerius, documents from the archives of the family of De Sade, etc. Some of these documents are translated in the body of the work, as are many of Petrarch's sonnets, etc., of which Carducci says (Introduction to the Rime, 1876, 1899) 'Peccato che l'abate provenzale si lasciasse di quando in quando vincere alla tentazione di tradurre in versi, e scrivesse, come non sogliono i francesi, male, e, come sogliono parecchi dei francesi, con quelle guasconate che non dispongono a bene i lettori stranieri'. On p. 1 of tom. iii are engravings representing the Peruzzi bas-relief portraits of Petrarch and Laura. Brown levant, by Bauser.

() The abbé de Sade was born at Avignon, January 10, 1705, and died at Vignerme near Saumane (or Saumanes, Vaucluse). His voluminous work is the most pretentious of the existing biographies of Petrarch and was for three-quarters of a century the source from which most writers drew their information in regard to the poet's life and literary labors. The German translation and the abridged English version made it especially the authority to which book-makers and cyclopedists north of the Alps resorted. But its many errors and omissions did not, even at first, go unnoticed. Tiraboschi, within ten years of its publication, while bestowing due credit upon the author for laborious zeal, severely criticized several statements made in the work. To these attacks De Sade wrote a reply, the printing of which was interrupted by his death; the manuscript of these defensive letters was, however, purchased by Cardinal Gonzaga, and by him submitted to Tiraboschi, who, in a later edition of the 'Letteratura italiana', resumes and answers their chief points (see vol. ix, preface). Tytler (1784) assailed the Laura hypothesis of De Sade, which Ugo Foscolo (1821) defended. In fact, the abbé's views in regard to the identity of Laura with a particular personage, long generally accepted, are now almost as generally discarded. Baldelli (1797) adulates De Sade at length (pp. xii-xv), but Burckhardt says of Baldelli: 'Seine kritische Zuverlässigkeit übertrifft die des berühmteren De Sade durchaus'. Ginguené (1824) says: 'Mais quelque soin que l'abbé de Sade eût mis à ses recherches, il lui est échappé des inexactitudes et des erreurs qui se sont multipliées par les copies qu'on en a faites' (ii. 334). Blanc (1844) characterizes De Sade as a writer 'welcher allerdings mit bewunderungswürdigem Fleisse, aber auch mit unerträglichem Anmassung und wahrhaft geckenhafter Eitelkeit alle seine Vorgänger und vorzüglich den trefflichen De La Bastie schnöde verachtend das weitläufigste und in vieler Hinsicht sehr brauchbare Werk über den Petrarca geschrieben' ('Petrarca' in Brockhaus, 'Allgemeine Encyclopädie', p. 206). Mézières (1868) both lauds and condemns when, in his introduction, he alludes to the need of 'une nouvelle étude sur Pétrarque qui rectifierait en plus d'un point le consciencieux travail de l'abbé de Sade'. Geiger (1874) styles the Mémoires 'die noch heute trotz vieler Fehler und Sonderbarkeiten wichtigste Biographie Petrarca's' ('Petrarca', p. 263). Koerting (1878) doubts the genuineness of some of De Sade's documentary proofs and cites the book as 'das grundlegende, noch immer unentbehrliche Werk des abbé de Sade, dessen Werth freilich durch die Menge der darin niedergelegten wunderlichen Hypothesen und die theilweise mehr als zweifelhafte Aechtheit der zu Grunde gelegten Urkunden wesentlich beeinträchtigt wird' ('Petrarca's Leben', p. 39). Finally, as the latest authority, Symonds (1885) observes that 'De Sade's life of the poet marks an epoch in the history of his numerous biographies; but this is in many important points untrustworthy' ('Petrarch' in the 'Encyclopaedia Britannica'). Both Barbier and Hoefer state that the work was printed at Avignon. The names of the supposititious publishers appear to be an intentional deception. The title of the firm at Amsterdam, which existed from 1734 to 1789, was Arkstée & Marcus (not Arskée & Mercus). Some copies are said to have the following title: 'Œuvres choisies de Pétrarque, traduites de l'italien et du latin en françois avec des mémoires sur sa vie'.

In these pages live again the men known and loved by Petrarch, disciples devoted to his memory and the extension of his influence, his biographers, his translators—addressed in the correspondence, which extends over the period from 1360 to 1415. Five of the letters are addressed by Coluccio to Petrarch (vol. i, pp. 61-62, 72-76, 80-84, 95-99). Squarzafo in his comment on the sonnet E questo 'l nido mentions 'argomenti di messer collutio qual già fece sopra de gli soneti di questo nostro poeta' (see Filelfo-Lapini editions of the Rime, 1484, etc.); and Lorenzo Mehus in his life of Traversarius (p. 228) refers to a life of the poet by Coluccio, which he had seen but which had become lost.

The Rime have a separate title-page and imprint. Many of the sonnets are imitations of Petrarch. Sonnet XVI (p. 343) is composed of lines from Petrarch and is mentioned by Ferrazzi (p. 195) as the earliest instance of a Petrarchan cento. (See, however, Valerio da Bologna.) Sonnet XLVI (p. 370) is cited by Bimard de La Bastie ('Vie de Pétrarque', p. 420) to prove that Laura lived, died, and was buried in an obscure village and not in Avignon.

Of the two preceding editions Quarta (p. 89) has this to say: 'Egli [Acker] non si contentò, come gli altri, di rimettere a posto casi, tempi e modi, e di aggiungere o levare qualche parola; egli mutò tutto ciò che non gli andava a garbo, tutto ciò che non gli pareva corretto od elegante: giunse fino a sopprimere gli interi periodi! Di modo che la Vita dello Squarzafico in quest' edizione diventa proprio tutt' altra cosa da quella che era. Nondimeno questa fu l' edizione prescelta dal Solerti per la ristampa datane nella sua raccolta! Egli s' affannò ad andare in caccia del "raro libretto", dove l' opera dello Squarzafico era travisata, mentre aveva, si può dire, a mano, cioè a Roma, a Firenze, e Dio sa in quanti altri luoghi, la stampa originale, su cui doveva principalmente condurre la sua edizione!' Of the text in the present edition Quarta says: 'Tenendo innanzi quella stampa [edition of the Latin works of Petrarch by Simon da Luere, Venice, 1501] ho cercato di ridurre la Vita alla sua vera lezione, cioè quale uscì dalla penna dello Squarzafico'. Accordingly he has used roman type to indicate Squarzafico's portion of the work, italic for the portion borrowed from Siccò Polentone, black-faced for that taken from Vergerius.

This interesting essay, in an unfinished state, bears no mark of date or source other than the penciled 'Carrig Breac | Howth' inside the portfolio cover (not in the author's hand). Carrig Breac was the home of William Stokes, M.D. (1804-1878), and of his daughter Miss Margaret M'Nair Stokes, who died there in 1900. Inserted are photographs of the Laura note in Petrarch's copy of Virgil, of the note on the death of Giovanni in the same volume, of the Peruzzi bas-reliefs of Petrarch and Laura, and of the Laurentian miniatures. Below the last the author has

The work was first published by Simone de Luere in 1509, the original title being: Summa artis rhythmicæ vulgaris dictaminis. In a preliminary chapter: Il pseudo-Antonio, the editor discusses the authorship of the biography of Petrarch and the commentary on the Canzoniere ascribed to Antonio da Tempo. By means of anagrams he attempts to show that the author of these works was one with Girolamo Squarzafico, so called, and was in reality Domenico Siliprandi.

Reprinted anonymously in the editions of Lignamine and of Gabriel di Pietro 1473, Siliprandis 1477 (with the text, and repeated with the commentary). In the folio editions of the Triumphs with Bernardo Lapini's commentary edited by Nicolò Peranzone, 1500, 1503, 1507, 1508 (Bartolomeo de Zani), 1512 and 1515 (Augustino de Zani), the Da Tempo life is substituted for Bernardo's in the prologue, anonymously, and (except in 1500) appears again, with the author's name, in the prologue of the 'Sonetti et Canzone', which have the Da Tempo commentary.

'Ma se il commento che va sotto il nome di Antonio Da Tempo, evidentemente non può appartenere a chi nel 1332, già vecchio, scrisse la famosa "Summa artis rithimi" . . . chi ne sarà mai l'autore?' Following this inquiry (p. 20) Quarta examines the relation of the Da Tempo life to the anonymous 'Vita del Petrarca' published by Bartolomeo Veratti in 1865 from cod. Estense VIII, B. 11, and by Domenico Carbone in 1874 from cod. IV, IV, 52 of the University Library of Turin, existing also 'assai più corretta' in a Barberini manuscript (XLV, 48), where it is preceded by the title 'Vita francisci petrarche poete laureati per publicum candidum'. 'Chi raffronti con la vita di P. Candido la vita attribuita al Da Tempo troverà che davvero questa in gran parte non è che un compendio di quella', says Quarta (p. 22), who concludes (p. 49): 'La vita del Petrarca, stampata [dal] Siliprandi con questo commento e similmente attribuita al Da Tempo, è un compendio della vita detta di Publio Candido (ma probabilmente del Filelfo o di Pier Candido Decembrio), inseritivi qua e là de' passi della vita del Petrarca di Leonardo Aretino . . . Non esiste dunque nessun Antonio Da Tempo iunior, quattrocentista e commentatore del Petrarca'. The text here given is that of 1471, the portions identical with the Candido biography indicated by italic, the passages from Leonardo by heavy-faced type.

The illustrations include a portrait: Laura Petrarchæ, engraved by H. David, engravings of Vaucuse, Petrarch's house at Arqua—the fireplace, the monumental cat, and woodcuts of pieces of furniture and the frescoes adorning the walls. On p. 180 is a portrait of Petrarch from a medal, and its reverse. pp. 156, 157, blank in this copy, should show a plate numbered v and some 20 lines of text, including the chapter heading: Posteritas, Cap. XXI, as the following edition makes clear.

—Petrarcha rediuius, integram poetæ celeberrimi vitam iconibus ære celatis exhibens. Accessit nobilissimæ foemina Lauræ brevis historia; ad... D. Ioan. Franciscum ex comitibus Guidiis à Balneo S. R. E. cardinalem, &c. Patavii, typis L. Pasquati & I. Bortoli, apud P. Frambottum, MDCXXXV. Pet SAT 68a 4°. pp. [12], 208, [2]. Engr. t-p., 4 portrs., 3 engrs., 9 wdcts., initials.

A reimpression of the preceding with new prefatory matter consisting of the author's dedication (dated 1635) and preface, a letter and verse addressed to him, the engraved title and two engraved portraits of Petrarch (f. [8^a-b]). The first is an engraving by H. David from an original once in the possession of Ascanius Colonna—a profile, with the costume and laurel of the Laurentian miniature, but without further resemblance. The second portrait is an engraving after the miniature of cod. Vat. 3198.

Seven of the woodcuts in the preceding are in the present edition replaced by engravings signed: Gio. Georg. fecit. The portrait of Petrarch from the miniature of Vat. 3198 is omitted. An additional portrait: Laura Sada Avinionensis, faces p. 107, followed by a new chapter: Lauræ de Sado effigies. The portrait is an engraving copied from one presented to Cardinal Barberini by Richard de Sade, bishop of Cavaillon, a descendant of Laura, according to Tomasini. A copy in the museum of Avignon (no. 472) is photographed in the article by Bayle ('Les portraits de Laure'), who believes the original to have been Catherine de Cabassole de Réal, wife of Étienne de Sade (1489).

A reissue of the preceding, with an appendix: Syllabus operum quibus fruitur orbis ob solitaria Petrarchæ studia, consisting of Guillaume de Roville's account [Petrarca nella solitudine di Linterno], followed by a list of 114 manuscripts from Linterno, supposed to have formed Petrarch's library. Among them are those of Arrigoni's collection ('Notice sur vingt-cinq manuscrits'). A full-page woodcut: Alijs Insula & mihi Linterni Filamenta, is printed at the end of the Roville tract. The paper and type of the appendix differ from those of the work itself. The indexes of the preceding issue are here revised to include references to the appended matter. Copies of this reissue, with the appendix, are rare.

An examination of 'De vera sapientia', attributed to Petrarch, and the 'De sapientia' of Nicolas de Cusa, with the conclusion: 'Demnach hat Petrarca die beiden Dialoge über die wahre Weisheit . . . nicht verfasst; von ihm rührt nur ein kleines Stück genommen aus . . . den Heilmitteln gegen Glück und Unglück; dagegen ist der weitaus grösste Teil der beiden Dialoge geistiges Eigentum eines Deutschen, des Nikolaus Cusanus'.

Zambrini, who states that the edition was limited to 125 copies. The verse consists of two canzoni, of which the second, Canzone morale fatta per la divisa del conte di Virtù duca di Milano, is in large part supposed to be uttered by Petrarch, named in the twelfth stanza (p. 33): Quando

pp. 19-32 (with plates XVII-XXIV) describe manuscripts in the Royal Library of Berlin acquired from the collection of Sir Thomas Phillipps (formerly of the Meerman collection) with miniatures illustrating Petrarch's Triumphs and the canzone Standomi un giorno, given in the French version of Clément Marot. Of the latter, two plates are given illustrating vv. 13-23 (Indi per alto mar vidi una nave, etc.). The illustrations of the Triumphs are in design quite independent of the typical prints of the early editions. Here, each victor represented emblematically is standing upon the body of the one conquered. Love subdues three figures—Hercules, a monarch, a warrior. Divinity is glorified above the five preceding Triumphers, now victims. 'Was die technische Seite dieser sechs Miniaturen betrifft, so ist die Ausführung ausserordentlich sorgfältig und sauber. Die Zeichnung lässt bisweilen zu wünschen übrig.' (p. 23.)

The dedication: To Mrs. *, pp. 5-16, contains a detailed description of the valley and fountain of Vaucluse. The poem traces 'the rise of poetry from its ancient source through the Greek and Roman ages, its decline with them and its revival in the modern world'—ascribed by the author to Petrarch. The portrait of the author is a fine lithograph, in profile. Catalogue 828 of Lowe Brothers gives the author's name as John Gilpin.

Included in the work, but with a separate title-page, imprint, and pagination, is Francesco Bocchi's Elogiorum . . . editio altera.

The Villani manuscript was discovered by Lorenzo Mehus in the Gaddi collection, which came to the Laurentian Library in 1755. From it he published the life of Petrarch in his edition of Traversarius (vol. i, pp. cxcv-vii). Mention of the work is made by Manetti (1396-1459) in his Life of Dante, and Tomasini refers to it ('Petrarca redivivus', 1630, pp. 194-195), but at the time of Mazzuchelli's publication of the Italian manuscript (see following title) the question was in doubt as to whether biographies of Dante and Petrarch had been included in Villani's original work. The Barberini manuscript (see below, 'Vitae Dantis, Petrarchae et Boccaccii') was a later discovery—'fu da me veduto nel 1807', its editor says (preface, p. xv). Besides the edition of Mehus, the life of Petrarch was published among the Pièces justificatives of De Sade's 'Mémoires' (tom. iii, pp. 9-12).

translations of the sonnets Or che 'l ciel and Tennemi Amor; p. 75, a part of the sonnet Vergognando talor, in English.

In a note preceding the Latin translation, p. 42, Watson says, 'The Author when he translated it, was not then minded euer to haue imboldned him selfe so farre, as to thrust in foote among our english Poets. But beinge busied in translating Petrarch his sonnets into latin new clothed this amongst many others, which one day may perchance come to light.' This is perhaps the foundation of Sidney Lee's statement ('Cambridge history of English literature', vol. iii, p. 287) that in early life Watson translated all Petrarch's sonnets into Latin. Lee adds, 'but only two specimens of his rendering survive'. Three are found in the present edition, as above noted.

Translations from Petrarch include a dozen of the Metrical epistles, Eclogues III, IV, VIII, X, XI, about 100 sonnets, 20 canzoni, and a good part of the Triumphs, with connecting narrative and comment. The illustrations comprise photographic facsimiles of both pages of the leaf in the Ambrosian Virgil codex containing the Laura note; photo-engravings of the portraits of Petrarch from MSS. Par. 6069 F, 6069 T, Vat. 3198, and from the Orcagna fresco in the Strozzi chapel of Santa Maria Novella in Florence; a map of Vauclose and the photo-engravings first published in Finn illustrating the author's 'Petrarca i Vauclose'.

APPENDIX I.—ICONOGRAPHY

THE collection has many separate copies of engravings which are contained in its volumes. In a number of instances these have been delicately inserted in large sheets which are bound in volumes lettered: Iconografia. Such separate copies are noted as s.c. in the descriptions below. In the same volumes are inserted other illustrations, as indicated by 'Icon. I', 'Icon. II' (Pet ‡ ZL 1-2).

Measurements are given usually in millimetres—in case of portraits, only the height of the figure is given.

Bibliography. The splendid work of Essling and Müntz (see Masséna, V., prince d'Essling, and E. Müntz), devoted to Petrarch's influence upon the artists of his own time and in later centuries, is perhaps unequaled by any similar essay in iconographic research and illustration. Minor works bearing on the subject are:

Mamiani. Petrarca e arte. 1874.

Mandach. Petrarca's Einfluss auf die Kunst. 1902.

Petrarca nelle arti rappresentative. 1903.

Solerti. Il Petrarca disegnatore. 1904.

Urbani. Opere d'arte relative a Petrarca in Venezia. 1874.

Venturi. Petrarca e le arti rappresentative. 1905.

PORTRAITS FROM MANUSCRIPTS.

Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris.

Cod. 6069 F. Bust, profile, right. Close hood, without laurel. Cape without folds. 90 mm.

The portrait printed in photogravure as the frontispiece of Nohac's 'Pétrarque et l'humanisme', 1892, is regarded by the author as the one possessing the first claim to authenticity. It is found on the first folio verso of the manuscript of De viris illustribus with the supplement of Lombardo da Serico, in Lombardo's autograph, prepared for presentation to Francesco da Carrara, to whom Petrarch had dedicated the work. The manuscript was finished and presented to the prince in 1379, five years after the poet's death. That the portrait was executed under Lombardo's supervision, probably by one of the many contemporary artists of Padua, either from life or from a good likeness, seems to M. de Nohac a reasonable conjecture (op. cit., pp. 379-383). 'Si le peintre n'a pas travaillé d'après nature, il a connu du moins, parmi les portraits de la maturité du poète, celui qu'on jugeait le plus ressemblant, et il l'a fidèlement reproduit. Il donne l'impression d'une œuvre intime, sans prétention, qui devait plaire aux familiers du maître en le faisant revivre sous leurs yeux.'

Cod. 6069 T. Head, three-quarters face, right, hood, no laurel. Forms initial beginning a manuscript of De rebus memorandis, containing two annotations which M. de Nohac believed to be in Petrarch's hand. Researches by Novati ('Chi è il postillatore del codice Parigi-?') point to Giovanni Manzini as the writer of the postillae—a conclusion accepted later by M. de Nohac. 'Nous nous trouvons en présence d'une figure d'une précision et d'une réalité singulières. La cape brun rougeâtre, doublée de vert, encadre le visage d'un vieillard qui se présente de trois quarts; deux longues rides sillonnent le front tout entier; l'œil se bride; la bouche reste belle au-dessous du menton rasé. On doit noter encore la longueur du nez, la finesse des Framed copies—Petrarch and Laura. Watercolor drawings on canvas, by a Florentine artist, 250 mm.; monochrome drawings, 250 mm.; copies in majolica, (antique) circular plaques, 400 mm.

Medallions, etc. Marble bas-reliefs (square) of Petrarch and Laura, 150 mm.; same, carved on fragment of a marble slab whose reverse bears an antique portrait in relief, 205 mm.; terracotta medallion of Petrarch (round), 65 mm.; bronze medallion of Petrarch, 45 mm.

Engravings derived from the Laurentian. The portrait in Malipiero's 'Petrarcha spirituale' (ed. of Marcolini da Forlì, 1536), and its close imitation (but with laurel) in the Giolito-Vellutello Rime of 1538.

The Giolito portrait (antique) in Franco's 'Il Petrarchista', 1539, etc., in the Bindoni Rime, 1541, and the Giolito-Dolce 'Rime' (editions in 12^o) 1547-1557. Resembling this is the engraving in Yriarte's 'Florence', p. 112, entitled: 'Facsimile of a portrait of the 16th century, British Museum'.

The Giolito urn-shaped vignette of Petrarch and Laura, Rime (editions in 4^o) 1544-1560, reprinted in Tomasini's 'Petrarcha redivivus', 1650.

Jean de Tourne's medallion, Rime, 1544, and his heart-shaped vignette, Rime, 1547, 1550; Roville's poorer imitation, Rime, 1550-1574; and Avanzo's, still less good, Rime, 1557 (copied in various later editions).—See also Part I (Rime. English: MANN).

In the style of the Laurentian is the Petrarch in the frontispiece of the 'Divina commedia', Roveta, 1820 (1013 B 22), as are also nos. 4-7 in the plates illustrating S. Ambrosoli's 'Medaglie del Petrarca nel . . . Brera'.

Guariento? 1310?-1377?

The portrait from the canonical house in Padua occupied by Petrarch during his office there was, according to tradition, rescued in 1581 when the house was destroyed, and in 1816 was placed in the Episcopal palace by Bishop Dondi dall' Orologio. Attributed to Guariento by Marsand (see Part I, p. 125). The poet is represented with hands clasped in prayer. Profile, half-length.

LAURA

Laurentian miniature.

Of the various artist-conceptions of Laura the Laurentian miniature, with its unexcelled grace of line, holds a favorite place. It appears as a companion picture with many of the reproductions of the Laurentian Petrarch, described above. To be noted in addition are the following:

A bust in marble of the Laurentian Laura, life-size, executed for Mr. Fiske by the American sculptor William Couper, rests on a pedestal of carved green marble, four feet in height.

In the style of the Laurentian are the portrait of the Galleria Borghese, Rome (photograph, 157 mm.), and the Bellini portrait (photograph, 80 mm.).—Icon. II.

Cicognara makes the statement that the portrait in the Pandolfini palace, Florence, '... mostrarsi dai signori proprietari per il ritratto della Laura del Petrarca', is really a portrait of Giovanna degli Albizzi, wife of Lorenzo Tornabuoni, probably painted by Ghirlandajo (1449-1494). The original of the Palmerini engraving is the portrait introduced by Ghirlandajo in the fresco 'La visita di S. Elisabetta', in the church of Santa Maria Novella, Florence.

The Piccolomini Laura.

The portrait formerly possessed by Antonio Piccolomini of Siena shows Laura facing, a veil falling back from forehead to shoulders, bead fillet, beads about the throat. Engraved (175 mm.) for Cicognara's 'Storia della scultura' 1813 (vol. i, plate xlii). The miniature copy painted for Marsand by Emmanuel Scotti in 1816 was photographed for Mr. Fiske by Ellis and Elvey of London. 80 mm.—Icon. II.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF DE REMEDIIS

The unsigned woodcuts illustrating the 'Glücksbuch' (German translations of De remediis published 1532–1620), and copied in copperplate engravings by Eberhard Kieser, were long regarded as the work of Hans Burgkmair. A different conclusion is maintained by H. Röttinger in his monograph, 'Hans Weiditz der Petrarkameister'.

In a series of 260 designs they not only illustrate Petrarch's commentary on good and evil fortune, but present at the same time a panorama of German life in the 16th century, which for completeness and detail is not outdone by the journalistic enterprise of to-day. The artist, says Röttinger, 'besass einen Blick für die Vorgänge des ihn umrauschenden Lebens und eine Kunst das Geschaute fesselnd wiederzuerzählen'

—and, again—'Die Schilderungen des Lebens seiner sozialen Schichte dürfen als vollgültige kulturgeschichtliche Dokumente betrachtet werden. Vom Volke der Bettler und Vaganten angefangen bis hinauf zu den Grandseigneuren der Augsburger Welthandlungshäuser führt er uns all die Charaktergestalten seiner Zeit in bewegten und reich mit bezeichnenden Einzelheiten ausgestatteten Darstellungen vor Augen... Keine gesellschaftliche Gruppe, kein Beruf bleibt ohne Vertreter, an der Hand der Glücksbuch-schnitte können wir sein Leben tatsächlich von der Wiege bis zum Grabe verfolgen.' (pp. 58–59.) See also Schmidt, C., Zur altdutschen Kunstgeschichte; Seidlitz, W. von, Der Illustriator des Petrarca.

THE TRIUMPHS, ETC.

The richly illustrated chapters of Essling and Müntz devote 167 pages with 19 full-page plates in photogravure and many more figures in the text to this portion of Petrarch's writings, so often chosen as a subject by artists of the 15th and 16th centuries. The catalogue of works treated—miniatures, paintings, tapestries, paintings on glass, engravings, illustrated editions, sculptures in marble, bronze, ivory, faience, enamel—fills 8 pages.

The Early woodcuts.

On the woodcuts of the 15th-century editions see Part I (Rime, 1488). Of these the designs of 1490 were copied with some variation in the edition of Rome, 1499 (see its reprint of 1508 'a petitione di Ser Piero Pacini' and the facsimile edition of 1891). They were developed in color by Nestore Leoni in the illuminated manuscript published in a phototype facsimile in 1904, and appear again in the designs of the Orsini-Da Costa manuscript published the same year. Later designs were those of the 'Master of the Column' printed in the Gregorius edition of 1508, reprinted by Stagnino in 1513 and 1519. These are crudely followed in the editions of Antonio de Obregon's Spanish translation. The engravings of Zoan Andrea, 'Z. A.', (editions of Zopino, 1521, etc.) 'prouvent qu'il a imité la taille d'André Mantegna', says Bartsch ('Le peintre graveur', tom. xiii, p. 293), 'et il paroît même que plusieurs d'entr'elles ont été gravées d'après des desseins de ce grand maître; ce qu'il y a de certain, c'est qu'il a copié plusieurs de ses estampes'. Giolito's woodcuts, and those of Jean de Tourne, 1547, of the Nicolini, 1549, of

The Early woodcuts.

Avanzo, 1557, Valgrisi, 1560, Dehuchino, 1580, Angelieri, 1585, and the engravings of Porro, 1600, complete the period of this kind of illustration.

Georg Pencz, 1500-1550.

Engravings. 6 plates, 200 × 147 mm.—Icon. II.

— Same, another impression.—Icon. II.

‘Ces scènes sont traitées avec la facilité et l’abondance qui caractérisent la fin de la Renaissance: rien n’y manque: figures plus ou moins mouvementées, paysages et fabriques décoratives. Il est fâcheux que de nombreuses fautes de perspective les déparent.’ (Essling and Müntz, p. 263.)

Bonifazio Veneziano (b. 1579)—ascribed to Titian.

Engravings of Death, Fame, Time, and Divinity, signed: Titianus pinxit—Io. Ant. Buti del.—Sylv. Pomarede Sculp. . . The inscription following varies, that of Death reading: Triumphus Mortis a Francisco Petrarcha versibus elegantissime scriptus, atque in Archetypa Titiani celeberrimi Pictoris Tabula, quae Domini Joannis Michilli Romani Juris est, vivis coloribus ad artis miraculum expressus, heic aeri incisus apparet . . . 345 × 500 mm.—Icon. II.

Ses six peintures, attribuées pendant un temps au Titien, ont été définitivement restituées à leur vrai auteur, il y a peu d’années. Deux d’entre elles se trouvent au Musée de Vienne, les autres à la Galerie de Weimar . . . Ce sont des pages véritablement brillantes et dramatiques, dignes de former le dernier tribut payé à Pétrarque par la peinture italienne de la Renaissance.’ (Essling and Müntz, pp. 186-187.) Only four of the paintings were engraved, 1748-1770, during which period they were in the collection of Giovanni Micchilli, ‘concessionnaire général des tabacs et eaux-de-vie de l’État Pontifical’.

Nestore Leoni,—1904.

The illuminated manuscript of Leoni, mentioned above, bearing elaborate and beautiful decoration in borders, initials, etc., has, besides the six title-sketches, a secondary series of designs beginning each of the 12 chapters of the Triumphs.

In the Zatta editions of the Rime (1756, 1784) the entire Canzoniere as well as the Triumphs furnished themes for illustration. In the earlier one seven closely printed pages are devoted to description of the engravings by Crivellari and others from designs of G. Zompini. The original water-color drawings, in the Rossetti collection at Trieste, are described by Hortis, p. 217. The engravings in the edition of 1784 by C. Dall’Acqua (70 × 58 mm.) were reproduced (20 × 23 mm.) by Ongania in 1879.

The edition of 1889 illustrated by Sanesi has 47 woodcuts, 140 × 100 mm.

APPENDIX II

LITERARY CONTROVERSIES OF CARO AND CASTELVETRO, TASSONI AND DEGLI AROMATARI, SCHIAVO AND CEVA:
NOTES OF WILLARD FISKE

I. Apologia de gli academici di Banchi di Roma contra M. Lodovico Castelvetro [by Annibale Caro]. Parma, 1558.

This is the first edition of the 'Apologia' and probably the earliest printed publication connected with the altercation between Caro and Castelvetro, the story of which is told, with only slight variations, by Muratori in his life of Castelvetro, prefixed (pp. 24-30) to that writer's 'Opere varie critiche', published by Argelati in 1727; by Antonfederigo Seghezzi in his biography of Caro in the Comino edition of the 'Lettere familiari del commendatore Annibal Caro' (Padua, 1735, and again 1742 and 1749, and in the Classici italiani reprint, Milan, 1807, vol. i, pp. xxxvii-lv); by the same in his preface to Varchi's 'Ercolano' (Padua, 1744, pp. 39-43); by Quadrio (ii, pp. 256-257); and by Tiraboschi (xxiv, pp. 154-158). Caro, while in the service of Cardinal Farnese, wrote a canzone, Venite all'ombra de' gran gigli d'oro (still known as the 'Canzone de' Gigli'), in laudation of the house of Bourbon. This was shown about in Rome, very soon after its composition, in or near the year 1553, and elicited great praise, some declaring that Petrarch himself could not have treated the theme better. A fellow Modenese, Aurelio Bellincini, then living in the papal city, sent a copy to Castelvetro, asking his opinion of its merits. The latter drew up a short Parere (called by Caro a censura), showing that many of the words and constructions would not have been employed by Petrarch, but charged, as he afterwards says, his correspondent not to exhibit it to others. For some reason he wrote, a little later, a fuller explanation of his criticisms, to which he gave the title of a Dichiarazione (but which Caro styles a Replica). In this he gives this account of his own first steps in the matter: 'A lui [i.e. Castelvetro] adunque fu scritto da Roma da colui, che uoleua intendere il parer suo di questa canzone, che essa quiui da molti non solamente era stimata bella, ma tale anchora, che il Petrarca, se a suoi di gli fosse stata portacagione simile da farla, non l'haurebbe fatta altramente. A che riguardando egli, il quale haueua parer molto diuerso da quel di que lodatori Romani cosi animosi, rispose, che il Petrarca, non haurebbe usata niuna delle cose notate da lui nella canzone del Caro, le quali altri dee prouare, che il Petrarca haurebbe usate, se uole prouare l'ignoranza addosso all'opponente' ('Ragioni', Venice, 1560, f. 173^b-174^a). The next document was a Commento on the canzone, the work, as Castelvetro assumed, of Caro himself; but the latter, in the introduction to the 'Apologia', and elsewhere, denies this, and the denial is repeated, solely, however, on the word of Caro, by Varchi ('Ercolano', edition of 1744, p. 277); nevertheless Caro's biographer, Seghezzi, acknowledges that the evidence of Caro's authorship is too strong to be resisted. Castelvetro, as Caro asserts, and very likely with truth, wrote four further letters or notes, all directed against the Commento, beginning as follows: 1. Non senti prima il Grammaticuccio; 2. Non so per qual via sia venuto a notizia del Grammaticuccio; 3. Udite nuova malitia del Grammaticuccio; and 4. Noi eravamo secundo l'antica nostra usanza raunati. Meanwhile Caro, the various criticisms of the Modenese writer having reached his eye, had not been sparing, if we may believe Castelvetro, of verbal abuse in return, as he went about among the literary circles of Rome. Up to this time, apparently, nothing had been printed—'fin qui la battaglia consistè in soli fogli scritti a penna', says Muratori—but no doubt copies of the canzone, of the commentary, and of Castelvetro's acute observations had been widely circulated in manuscript. Now, however, Caro wrote (about 1555) a work destined to go through several editions, the 'Apologia', aided in his task, as his adversary believed, by certain friends, like Varchi and Commendone (afterwards cardinal); but, despite this belief, the work, so far, certainly, as the phraseology is concerned, belongs solely to Caro.

For a long while Castelvetro did not see it, though, without doubt, he very soon heard of its existence and character; and there is a singular story told by Varchi that, through him, Castelvetro offered to print it at his (Castelvetro's) expense. At length, five years after the outbreak of the quarrel, it appeared in print. Its nature may be judged by the verdict of Tiraboschi: 'esso è uno de' più infami libelli che a disonore dell' umanità e delle lettere abbian mai veduta la luce'. In forty-five days, as we are told, Castelvetro prepared his reply, 'Ragioni d'alcune cose segnate nella Canzone Di Messer Annibal Caro', the style of which is certainly in striking contrast to the abusive language of his opponent. It appeared the following year (1559), without date or place, at Modena, and was speedily reprinted at Venice (1560). The next work, in point of date of publication, was a brochure by a Bolognese professor of rhetoric, Girolamo Zoppio, who gave to the press his 'Rime et Prose, Bologna, Appresso Alessandro Benacci. M.D.LXVII. Con licenza del R. Vic. Episc. e R. P. Inquis.' sm. 8°. ff. [4], 1-83. In this he inserted (ff. 63^a-74^b) a 'Discorso intorno ad alcune opposizioni di M. Lodouico Casteluetro alla Canzone de' Gigli d'oro, composta da M. Annibal Caro in lode della Real Casa di Francia'. This is preceded (f. 62) by a dedicatory letter to Giulio Cesare Colonna, and followed by another letter on Petrarch and Caro addressed to the Bishop of Ancona, Vincenzo Luchi, the date of which (Bologna, 1562) is probably that of the composition of the essay also. The rime contained in the volume are avowed imitations of Petrarch, the author stating in the preface that Petrarch is his favorite poet, and that his own love experiences have been singularly like those of his great prototype. The 'Discorso' has little to recommend it, and Castelvetro passed it by unnoticed.

In the meantime the solicitations of Caro had induced Varchi to take up arms, and to write his 'Ercolano', which work, especially valuable for its day, was the most important outcome of the fight. Varchi and Castelvetro had been friends, and had interchanged laudatory sonnets, the first one, that of Varchi, beginning Voi, che da fragil vetro il nome (both published in the second volume 'De' Sonetti di M. Benedetto Varchi', Firenze, Torrentino, 1554-57, 8°, and in Calogherà's 'Raccolta d' Opuscoli', vol. xxxvii, pp. 93-94). The 'Ercolano' was published posthumously by the Giunti at Florence in 1570. Muzio declares that Varchi delayed the printing of it, not being pleased with the bearing of Caro in the contest; though Castelvetro's brother hints that he feared the probable reply to it. The reply was, with Castelvetro's usual readiness, at once commenced, although Varchi's work did not reach him until he himself was 'in sugli estremi della vita sua'. It, too, was printed (more or less incomplete) posthumously, under the title of 'Corretione d'alcune cose nel dialogo delle lingue di Benedetto Varchi, et vna giunta al primo libro delle Prose di M. Pietro Bembo doue si ragiona della vulgar lingua, fatte Per Lodouico Casteluetro. KEKPIKA. Stampata in Basilea. l' anno del Signore M.D.LXXVII.' 4°. ff. [4], pp. 1-290, ff. [7], the preface being by his brother, Giovanni Maria Castelvetro. The printer was P. Perna, though some copies are said not to give his name. The three principal writers were now all dead, Varchi in 1565, Caro in 1566, and Castelvetro in 1571. But the matter was continued, without decided partisanship, by Girolamo Muzio, another commentator of Petrarch, whose 'Battaglie' was published at Venice (1582) seven years after the author's death. It contained (ff. 23^b-119^b) his 'Varchina', which, treating of the errors both of Caro and Castelvetro, virtually closed the contest; it has since been reprinted with the 'Ercolano' and Castelvetro's 'Corretione', the whole forming, as it were, a single work on the history and verbal usages of the Italian language as illustrated especially by Petrarch. Other works cited in connection with this literary quarrel are G. C. Capacio's 'Illustrium mulierum et illustrium litterorum elogium', lib. ii, p. 285; Torquato Tasso's 'Cataneo', and the writings of Mario Nizolio, who was a friend of Caro, and those of Arena.

There were attached to Caro's 'Apologia' ten satirical sonnets entitled 'Mattaccini' and nine others to which he gave the name of 'Corona'; to these Muratori says that Alessandro Melani or Giovanni Barbieri, both of Modena, wished to respond, but that Castelvetro, 'che non amava le baje', declined to attach the replies to his 'Ragione'. These sonnets against Caro bore the names of 'Mattaccini', 'Marmotte', and 'Treperuno'. In 1823, in a country-house of the Castelvetro family near Modena, were found, walled up, many Lutheran books of the 16th century, and some papers. Among these last were three sonnets by Caro against Castelvetro (not, however, belonging to either series in his 'Apologia') with three replies to each by Giammaria Barbieri, the whole entitled 'Il Treperuno' (see Part II, Valdrighi, M.). Another notable incident were the vain efforts made by Madame Lucia Bertana of Modena, sister-in-law of Cardinal Bertana, and by Prince Alfonso of Este, to bring about a peace between Caro and Castelvetro, as is related by Muratori; but they found the former too enraged to be reconciled. For Muratori's statement that Caro used his influence at Rome to incite the office of the Inquisition against Castelvetro, and to initiate the persecution which led to his flight and exile, there does not seem to be any absolutely sure foundation; it may, at least, be considered 'not proven'. Of this bitter and protracted controversy, which resulted from the 'Canzone de' Gigli', Ginguené (ix, p. 316) says: 'la querelle qu'excita cette canzone s'est tellement perpétuée en Italie, qu'on pourrait dire qu'elle dure encore'.

II. Considerazioni sopra le Rime del Petrarca d'Alessandro Tassoni, Modona [sic], 1609.

Alessandro Tassoni is said to have written the greater part of his 'Considerazioni' on the Rime of Petrarch while making a journey to Spain in 1601, when he was secretary to Cardinal Ascanio Colonna, viceroy of Aragon. An account of the controversy which grew out of their publication is given by Tiraboschi ('Biblioteca modenese', vol. v, pp. 199-200). To venture to call in question, even in single instances, the absolute perfection of Petrarch's verse seemed to the Paduan scholars of that age a literary enormity, and the task of reproving the venturesome critic fell to the lot of Giuseppe degli Aromatari, a student of medicine, who afterwards arose to great eminence in his profession. He published in 1611 his 'Risposta alle Considerazioni', the prefixed letter of dedication stating that it included only a portion of the notes made by the author, who was described as a youth of twenty years (he was really twenty-four or twenty-five). It treated only ten sonnets. Tassoni responded somewhat sharply, for he assumed that the attack actually came either from the peripatetic philosopher, Cesare Cremonino, or from the critic, Paolo Beni, both then professors at Padua. The 'Avvertimenti' were issued under the thin disguise of a pseudonym, Crescenzo Pepe,—the 'Pepe' being an allusion to the signification of Aromatari's name—the author asserting that he had completed the book in twenty-two days, although it was more than twice the length of the 'Risposta'; but the portion of the dialogue ascribed to Aromatari is virtually a more or less modified reproduction of the latter's work. The rejoinder of the Paduan student to the 'Avvertimenti', the 'Dialoghi di Falcidio Melampodio', bears on its title-page the year 1613, although the dedication and preface are dated May and October, 1612, and the license, October of that year. It relates solely to the ten sonnets previously discussed, but now debated far more diffusely, and indulges in some satire, particularly in regard to Tassoni's nom de plume and his boast that he had composed the 'Avvertimenti' in so brief a space. Something of the virulence which characterized Caro in the preceding century was displayed in Tassoni's answer, the 'Tenda rossa'. The title is explained in the preface (pp. 2-3) to be derived from a legend respecting Tamerlane: 'Farò come faceva un Re de Tartari, che si prendea gusto anch' egli di sventare gli otri troppo gonfiati. Questi nelle sue guerre metteva la prima giornata una Tenda bianca in segno di general perdono. E se 'l nimico non si rendeva metteva la seconda giornata una Tenda rossa, ch' era indizio di morte a tutti coloro c' havessero prese l' armi. Mà se questo poi non bastava, metteva la terza giornata una Tenda nera, che dinotava l' ultimo estermínio d' ogni età, d' ogni sesso. Gl' Auvertimenti del Pepe furon la Tenda bianca; voi gli sprezzaste: lo vi presento ora la tenda Rossa, e vò la morte di quelle sole ragioni che saranno armate per voi da offesa, o da difesa. Le leggerezze, e le sciapitezze che dite, popolo imbelles, io dono loro per questa volta la vita. Mà se mi fate metter La Tenda nera, non fù quel Re contra de' suoi nemici l' ira del Cielo, com' io farò quella di Parnaso contra di voi.' Quadrio (ii. 185) says that, according to report, Aromatari prepared a pungent retort, but was persuaded not to print it, and so the dispute came to an end without the necessity of a tenda nera on the part of Tassoni. A Ferrarese count, Paolo Brusantini, the author of a forgotten pastoral tragicomedy, 'Alcida', is said to have privately sent a manuscript reply to the 'Tenda rossa' to Modena, where it came under the eye of Tassoni, who contented himself with impaling the author as the Conte di Culigna in the 'Secchia rapita'. Various satirical sonnets were also addressed to Tassoni by ardent admirers of Petrarch, to some of which he rejoined in a style which would have done honor to Caro.

III. Rettorica d'Aristotile fatta in lingua toscana dal commendatore Annibal Caro, accresciuta d'una prefazione del dottor Biagio Schiavo. Venezia, 1732.

Schiavo's preface, with a subsequent essay by him in a similar vein, initiated a protracted and wordy controversy—'una lunga e viva contesa', says an Italian writer, 'che in prima si restrinse fra pochi eruditi, ma in fine si accomunò fra tutti i letterati italiani'. It is possible that the real root of the dispute is to be sought in the ardent Aristotelianism of the Paduan schoolmen in the preceding century, but the ostensible apple of discord was the character of Petrarch's poetry, from which all the disputants drew their abundant illustrations, and upon which they expended their diffuse pedantry. As a feeble echo of the polemics of an earlier age the literature of what may be called the Schiavo-Ceva warfare is, perhaps, not unworthy of a more careful examination than it has yet received. In regard to the bibliography of the wrangle the best authority is Quadrio (ii. 68-69), who personally knew many of those, who, either openly or covertly, took part in it; while some isolated facts may be gathered from Tiraboschi's 'Biblioteca modenese'. The references to some of the works by the author of Schiavo's life in Giacomo Pietrogrande's 'Biografie estensi' are more or less erroneous and confusing; but as much of the literature was anonymous Melzi may be consulted with advantage.

In the preface to this new edition of Annibale Caro's version of the 'Rhetoric' of Aristotle, Muratori's 'Osservazioni' on Petrarch, published in the Tassoni-Muzio-Muratori edition of the poet's Rime (Modena, 1711, reprinted at Venice in 1727), were violently condemned, and the sonnets, in especial, of Petrarch defended against his adverse criticisms, although the name of Muratori, then at the height of his reputation, was not actually mentioned. There seems to be no reason whatever to doubt that Biagio Schiavo (b. Ospedaletto, near Este, Jan. 11, 1675; d. Venice, 1750) was, as the title-page states, the author of this preface; although Soli Muratori, in the life of his learned uncle, published after Schiavo's death (Venice, 1757), asserts that both the preface and the so-called 'Lettere di M. Francesco Petrarca' were really the composition of Domenico Lazzarini, a good scholar and a sharp critic, who from 1711 to his death in 1734 occupied a classical chair at Padua. The preface, with its bold language concerning a man of Muratori's celebrity, doubtless caused a good deal of talk in the literary circles of Venice, in which Schiavo was a well-known figure, and this, perhaps, induced Schiavo to follow it, early in the subsequent year (1733), with his anonymous 'Lettere' (so styled, though only one seems to have been published) from Petrarch to the author of the preface, that is, to himself, thus avowedly imitating Alunno, who prefixed to his 'Osservazioni' (1550) a feigned epistle from the poet. In this pamphlet Schiavo continued the old strain, making Petrarch, Berni, Caro and the other characters tear to pieces one of Muratori's sonnets, and indulge in further criticisms of Muratori's 'Osservazioni'. The first reply to Schiavo—a book which, strangely enough, Quadrio does not seem to know—appeared in the same year; it was the production of a Piacenza lawyer and rhymester, and was entitled: 'Risposta di Iacopo Martinenghi al libretto intitolato Lettere di M. Francesco Petrarca all' Autore della Prefazione ecc.', Venezia, Baseggio, 1733. Alluding to the attacks of Schiavo, Tiraboschi ('Biblioteca modenese', iii. 330) says: 'Il Muratori non replicò cosa alcuna, ma invece di lui rispose nel 1733, benchè poco felicemente, alle suddette Lettere Jacopo Martinenghi, avvocato piacentino'. Here the controversy might have rested, had not a Carmelite friar of some eloquence and learning, then living in Turin, taken it into his head to edit in 1735 an anthology of sonnets. This was father Teobaldo Ceva, who, in his 'Scelta di Sonetti', cited with praise some comments on various sonnets made in the second volume of Muratori's 'Perfetta poesia', while in the brief preface he defended Muratori against the assaults of Schiavo. This counter-onset evidently gave Schiavo the idea of 'Il Filalete', for that work opens with the immediate introduction of the 'Scelta' and its compiler. Its two thickish volumes, divided into ten days of interminable dialogue, appeared anonymously in 1738, and the contest began in earnest. In the same year, and by the same publisher, was issued the almost equally long-drawn-out work, 'Note compendiose, che riguardano la sola, e semplice Dottrina Sopra le Cinque prime [ultime] Giornate del Filalete, Ad utile della Gioventù Studiosa pubblicate da un diletante di buone lettere. Parte prima [seconda]. In Venezia, Presso Domenico Tabacco, MDCCXXVIII. con licenza de' Superiori, e privilegio'. 2 v. 8°. The work is throughout somewhat milder in its tone than Schiavo's 'Filalete'; it even begins and ends with some complimentary phrases, possibly intended as sarcasm, in regard to that treatise; but is meant to be a complete reply to it. The 'Filalete', Quadrio declares, 'fu al P. Ceva un alarma, ond' egli, e gli amici suoi scendessero, concorrendo, a fare alla dett' opera una piena risposta'. Ceva had in fact communicated his alarm to his correspondents everywhere. In the first volume of the 'Note compendiose', p. [133] forms a bastard title: 'Aggiunta di varie lettere Scritte da diversi Valentuomini all' Autor della Scelta, toccanti il Filalete', the letters themselves occupying pp. 135–202. Some, at least, of these are genuine, and afford interesting glimpses of the literary life of the times (see Rossetti, Pellegrini) in Genoa, Rome, Florence, Verona, and other Italian cities. No writers' names are given except in the case of the last one (pp. 192–202), which is headed 'Ardittonus a S. Martino a Fronte Theobaldo Cevæ Carmelitæ S.P.D.' According to Quadrio, the 'Dilletante' who assumes to be the author of the 'Note' was Girolamo Del Buono, 'bolognese, maestro di umanità in Torino', which may be true, but the letters, and other features, make it very evident that Ceva himself had a large part, if not the chief one, in its composition. It would seem that, before Schiavo had had time to answer this publication, Ceva, 'e amici suoi', continued the assault in a new book: 'Il Converso del P. Ceva in difesa d'alcuni sonetti del detto Padre, dialoghi quattro copiatì e publicati da un Academico Ereino. Milano, nella regia ducal Corte, per Giuseppe Richino Malatesta, stamp. reale e comunale, 1739'. 8°. The writer was, in the opinion of Quadrio, Ceva himself; but Francescantonio Zaccaria assigns the authorship to count Gian Francesco Ardigzone Sanmartino di Fronte, the 'Ardittonus a S. Martino a Fronte' mentioned above. Whoever he may have been, he was certainly a convenient friend for Ceva, for he appears again the following year. Following this book came two sharp 'Lettere di Ser Telacocca al molto reverendo padre frate Teobaldo Ceva carmelitano calzato colle Annotazioni degli spettabili Seri Bentista, Tumentì, e Stazitto dedicate a' Signori accademici di Modena—La vita al fin, e l' di loda la Sera. In Belvidere [Turin] MDCCXL. Con

Privilegio'. 8°. f. [1], pp. 190, f. [1]. The supposititious author, Telacocca, is spoken of in the dedicatory letter as 'presentemente segretario' of 'nostra Accademia di Belvidere'. The name looks very much like a humorous imitation of that of Girolamo Tagliacucchi, a famous professor in his day (b. 1674, d. 1751), now chiefly remembered as the teacher of the female mathematician, Maria Gaetana Agnesi, who was originally of Modena, but was at this time attached to the University of Turin. He had, doubtless, participated in some way in the dispute so fiercely raging, and is mentioned frequently in the 'Lettere', and was even charged with having written them, which, however, says Tiraboschi ('Biblioteca Modenese', v. 174), he denied in a communication to Count Brembati of Bergamo, dated Dec. 9, 1742. Melzi says 'è fama, anzi quasi certezza' that it was the work of Ignazio Somis, a noted Turinese physician and a pupil of Tagliacucchi. In this little book there will be found, pp. 105-6, a letter from don Girolamo del Buono, dated Turin, April 4, 1739, in which he acknowledges the authorship of the 'Note compendiose', which is accompanied by a sarcastic reply from Schiavo, dated Venice, May 14, 1739, the tone of which indicates that Schiavo himself ascribed the 'Note' to Ceva. In support of the latter was now published 'Dio redentore, difeso contro di alcuni proposizioni di Filaete, da Gianfrancesco Ardizzone San Martino di Front, opera presentata al Tribunale della suprema Inquisizione. In Torino, nella Stampa del Mairesse 1740'. 8°. As will be seen, Ceva's 'friend' here turns up again; the title of the book shows that the discussion was becoming theological. The same year was published 'Il dotto Biagio Schiavo discepolo del Lazzarini convinto di gravissimi errori nel suo Filaete da Zenodoto Abelio Poeta del Re delle due Sicilie. In Milano, nella Regia Ducal Corte, per Giuseppe Richino Malatesta 1740'. 4°. The pseudonymous author was in reality Giovanni Baldanza of Palermo. In the subsequent year came: 'Lo Schiavo sotto La Sforza, Trattenimenti cinque pubblicati da un Academico Disunito di Pisa, dove sono esaminati, e difesi due sonetti dell' Abate Quirini portati dal P. Ceva nella sua Scelta, e criticati dallo Schiavo. In Milano nella Regia Ducal Corte per Giuseppe Richino Malatesta, 1741'. 8°.

Quadrio states that this is said to be the work of the Abate Giuseppe Maria Quirini; Melzi says that it is better credited to Ceva, and he is probably right. At the same time Schiavo (as stated by Melzi) published anonymously: 'Prefazione alle rime di M. Laura, fatta da un Amico dell' autore del Filaete. Aquileja MDCCXLI'. 8°. The place of printing was most probably Venice or Turin. After ascribing this to Schiavo, Melzi says: 'Nè contento di ciò egli aveva preparate anche tre lettere sopra la stessa questione, e già era pronto a mandarle in luce sotto il nome di Ser Frullone, quando fu colpito dalla morte' (dying suddenly of apoplexy), and refers to the Venetian periodical Novelle della Repubblica letteraria for 1750 (p. 34). Under the anagrammatic name of Eganio Agazzino a scholar of Casalmonteferrato, Ignazio Gaione, issued: 'Il Dolenanzio, Dialogo di Eganio Agazzino. In Napoli, 1741'. 8°. It is in two parts, and its title 'Il Dolenanzio' (against deceit) is an allusion to the signification of 'Il Filaete'. It, of course, carries on the controversy on the Ceva side.

Tiraboschi ('Biblioteca modenese', v. 174) states that the Schiavo-Ceva quarrel did not terminate until Ceva was ordered away from Turin by his ecclesiastical superiors. It may, in some respects, be considered a revival of the dispute between Tassoni and Aromatari, a century before, as that was a sort of continuation of the fierce debate of Caro and Castelvetro a generation still earlier; but this latest contention was conducted by inferior men. Ceva's death (1746) preceded that of Schiavo by four years. Twenty years after the date of the last book cited in the list there was an echo of the old contest in the shape of 'Risposta di Vincenzo Cavallucci alla lettera scritta a nome del Petrarca All' Autor della Prefazione alla Rettorica d' Aristotile tradotta da Annibal Caro. In Perugia MDCCCLXI. Per li Costantini e Maurizj, Stampatori Camerali, Vescovili, e del S. Offizio. Con Licenza de' Superiori'. 4°. f. [1], pp. 1-42. It defends Muratori's sonnet, Quest' alma, cui per tempo ai santi amori, which had been so severely criticized by Schiavo at the outset of the war, but it does so dispassionately, and without mentioning the names either of Schiavo or Ceva. Its writer (b. Perugia, 1700, d. there, June 30, 1787) was the author of other esteemed works.

SUBJECT INDEX

Works relating to authors entered in the catalogue are referred to after the titles of such authors, in Part II. When omitted there by oversight, they are included in the following index.

Uniformity in the use of abbreviations is not attempted, and the ease of turning to the full entry of any title makes a list of them unnecessary. It may, however, be convenient to note the following:

Words of the heading are initialized in the titles under it.

a. = alla, alle, allo.

d. = dagli, dal, dalla, dalle, das, degli, dei, del, della, delle, dem, den, der, des, die.

int. = intorno.

n. = nel, nella, nelle.

P. = Petrarca, Petrarch, Pétrarque.

petrar. = petrarchesca (che), petrarchismo.

s. = sopra, sugli, sul, sulla, sulle.

v. = van, von.

z. = zum, zur.

The parentheses (see the first two titles below) indicate that the title enclosed contains matter relating to the subject.

The titles cited are those only of the earliest edition in the collection.
